Appeals.

Y.M.C.A., Bexley, Kent.—Our Y.M.C.A. is desirous of securing a permanent and larger room than the one now occupied by us. In order to do this we are trying to raise a sum of £250, of which we can manage to raise forty pounds locally. If any of your readers could assist us in this matter we should be most grateful for their help.—J. G. Dixon, Mayeot, Bexley.

A Village District—Mr. W. H. Smith, of Cotton-end, Bedford, appeals for books for a purely agricultural district, embracing six villages. Many of the people live very lonely lives, and with the aged and afflicted are very grateful for the loan of a Christian paper or book. Surely many have books, magazines, and papers which would prove a great blessing to the people.

Stratford, E.—Rev. D. J. Stather Hunt, vicar, writes from St. Paul's Vicarage, Stratford, E.:—"We have fifteen thousand inhabitants, and all are poor, while there is a grand field for tract distribution in the Great Eastern Railway Works in the parish, where four thousand men are employed. We have many willing distributors, and my curates and I give them out among the railway employés. I shall be most grateful for parcels of good tracts."

Arklow.—Perfect quietness continues to prevail during the open-air services at Arklow on Sundays. The police have been withdraw from in anywise following the preachers when holding the services; they merely patrol the street in the ordinary way, and people do not interfere in the least.

Folkestone.—Permission having been granted by the authorities to hold children's services on the beach, it is earnestly hoped that such gatherings may be carried on through August. But as the C.S.S.M. find it impossible to undertake the meetings this season through lack of workers, will some one accustomed to conducting children's services kindly lend us the r aid for a few weeks?—Agnes E. Moore, 15, Manor-road, Folkestone.

For Indigestion,

If you suffer from any form of Indigestion, or its resultant evil, Nervousness, Guy's Tonic will heal the frailty of your stomach, and make every meal an hour of pleasure. By its aid you can enjoy the blessings which follow good digestion.

Every chemist has it—good reports come to us from all sides, sent voluntarily by grateful friends who have proved its value.

When will you begin to let it help you?

Take Guy's Tonic.

An Analyst's Verdict.

1, Portman Mansions, London, W.

"Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in spontaneously testifying to the efficacy of Guy's Tonic and Fruit Pills. I am a martyr to indigestion, and have found nothing so beneficial as your remedies. The Tonic was analysed by a friend of mine—a member of the medical profession in Dublin—and appears (from a letter I received a short time since) to be not a quack's mixture, but made from quite an ideal prescription.—I am, yours faithfully, F. GARDNER."

FORTIETH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

LETTER from an OLD PATIENT—CASE OF CONSUMPTION.

MRS. E. ALLEN, of STANDLEY COTTAGE, MILL-STREET, KINGSTON-ON-THAMES, was a patient of mine six years ago.

A severe cold two years before had settled on the right lung. Then pneumonia followed, and phthisis commenced in both lungs. The cough was very bad, with profuse expectoration of highly purulent character. Pains about the cardiac region and loss of flesh.

She commenced my treatment, but unfortunately the medicine was not continued as regularly as it should have been. Nevertheless, in five months she was much better, and the lungs, on a second examination at Coombe Lodge, were found much clearer. After which she gradually improved until fairly well.

Writing me recently on behalf of a friend, she reminded me of her recovery. (In the mass of correspondence her case had been forgotten.) She states that her health had continued good, and that she felt quite a different person, and expressed her great thanks for all the attention given to her case when under my treatment.

NOTE.—CONSULTATIONS FREE at Coombe Lodge, Peckham, on TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings only. No charge except the usual charge for three or six weeks' supply of medicine. All Patients should read the Book first.

A REVIEW from THE QUIVER:

"Like some masterpiece of art in which much study reveals beauties new to us, there are some passages of Scripture that seem to possess almost unfathomable depths of meaning, and boundless treasures of blessed teaching. Notably is this the case with Psalm xxiii.—THE SHEPHERD PSALM, as the author entitles his volume. Mr. MEYER is as full as ever of suggestive and profitable thought."

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of the late Dr. E. R. CONDER, of Leeds.

We rejoice to note the widespread manifestation of interest in Mr. Moody's meetings in Yorkshire. The services of last Sabbath in Darlington are recorded on a succeeding page. There are some who think that the month of August is not favourable for special evangelistic work, but we regard the idea as a great fallacy. The probability is that the people will flock out, as at Darlington, in such numbers that the meetings will have to be held in the open air. Mr. Moody's further engagements, so far as arranged, are:—

Stockton-on-Tees, July 20-22.
Middlesbrough, July 23-25.
Preston, August 1.

All the friends of Sabbath rest and of national righteousness will learn with sincere gratification that the United States Senate has decided that the World's Fair at Chicago next year is to be closed on Sundays.

Many have taken in hand the task of enforcing the obligation and privileges of the Sabbath. We doubt, however, if the case has ever been presented more succinctly and to better purpose than by Mr. James Van Sommer, of Cuffnells, Wimbledon Common, in his penny booklet "Sunday." After examining the subject in its natural and spiritual aspects, he recalls the language of Genesis ii. 3, and writes:—

Let us remember that a Sabbath day is a shadow of the things to come, but the body, or substance, is of Christ. The believer's true rest is in Him. The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ blessed us with every spiritual blessing in heavenly concerns in Christ. And we have been sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ, once for all. If already risen with Him, we may, through faith and in spirit, enter into the rest and joys following on his work for us, and look forward to his appearing, when we shall possess them in glory—fruit of his toil.

Calamities in various parts of the globe are not only solemnising individuals but striking fear into the hearts of entire communities. The disaster on the Lake of Geneva, whereby nearly thirty lives were lost through the bursting of a boiler on board a pleasure steamer, was quickly followed by an appalling avalanche at St. Gervais-les-Bains, sweeping away whole villages in its fury. The loss of life is estimated at from 150 to 200 persons, the majority of whom were holiday visitors. A terrible occurrence has been reported at Sydney, New South Wales. Through a volcanic eruption in the vicinity of the Philippine Islands, the island of Sangir has, it is said, been destroyed, with its population numbering twelve thousand. The proverbial uncertainty of life is emphasized by these alarming events, the very contemplation of which should cause men to make the Lord their refuge and strength.

We rejoice to learn that the Christian Endeavour Movement is advancing in this country. A symposium on the Society appeared in the New York Independent of July 7, and we give on page 11 a contribution from the pen of Dr. F. E. Clark, of Boston, U.S.A., the founder, Dr. Wayland Hoyt, of Minneapolis, writes on the pledge of the organisation, which takes this form:—

Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promise Him that I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do; that I will make it the rule of my life to pray and to read the Bible every day, and to support my own church in every way, especially by attending all her regular Sunday and mid-week services, unless prevented by some reason which I can conscientiously give to my Saviour, and that, just so far as I know how, throughout my whole life, I will endeavour to lead a Christian life.

As an active member, I promise to be true to all my duties, to be present at, and to take some part, aside from singing, in every Christian Endeavour prayer-meeting, unless hindered by some reason which I can conscientiously give to my Lord and Master. If obliged to be absent from the monthly consecration meeting of the Society, I will, if possible, send at least a verse of Scripture to be read in response to my name at the roll-call.

Dr. Hoyt says he cannot enough magnify the power of this pledge. In many cases he has seen its work in changing a Christian shakiness into a steady purposefulness. "The young Christian is no more the sport of his whims. He has made solemn promise he will do somewhat, and that somewhat he proceeds to do. The pledge has settled the question once for all, the decision is rendered, his mind is made up, debate is done with." We trust this and much beside will be the outcome of the Society's work throughout the world.

A writer in The Thinker for July, speaking of the expository wealth and spiritual power of Dr. Maclaren's sermons, correctly says:

The doctrine of the mystic union of believers with Christ is evidently a favourite theme with the preacher. His ideas, like the radii of a circle, converge at last to one centre, even Christ. This is the secret of Dr. Maclaren's power. No truth or conviction with him can be complete until it has been examined in its relation to Christ.

The same may be said of others who are faithful ambassadors of Christ as well as acceptable public teachers. Let those who have learned the fruitlessness of philosophical disquisition, occupy themselves with the unsearchable riches of Christ. If then they are not reckoned among the "Preachers of the Age," they will none the less be accounted worthy ministers of the New Covenant, which has Christ for its source and subject.

"Let us get out of the fog," is the expressive remark of The Freeman, in view of the prevailing "Higher Criticism" confusion. Our contemporary's counsel is excellent, as also is its estimate of modern religious thought:—

The basis of every honest pulpit is faith. It is not for "oppositions of science," but for the proclamation of defined truth. If a man has lost faith in the old verities of religion, he ought to stand aside. And if he feels he must teach his scepticism to others, he ought to secure some other place than one purchased by money given for just the contrary object.

Books of destructive criticism sell edition after edition, whilst every intelligent man knows that all they do is to mystify and breed doubt, for each new writer overturns the theories of his predecessors. Who buys Colenso's books to-day? As many as will the works of Cheyne and Driver twenty years hence. It is an exegetical fashion. But unhappily the chilling fog mars our spiritual comfort, darkens our prospects, and shuts out the more blessed sunshine from our souls.

"What is the chaff to the wheat?" If some should object to this comparison, there can be no denying that much that passes for Biblical study is far removed from fundamental truth. Let not the circumference occupy us when the centre should be our great concern. Preaching which has not the Gospel for its subject-matter can well be dispensed with; and every gospel is a delusion and a snare except the Gospel of the Grace of God, as set forth in Christ crucified, raised from the dead, and exalted to the right hand of the Majesty on high.

Sir Henry Parkes, the veteran statesman of New South Wales, in a letter on the Kanaka labour traffic, says:—

Great interests are stated to be at stake which cannot be conserved without cheap and submissive labour. This means some necessity, real or imaginary, which can only be met by the service of aliens who cannot be admitted to our franchises, who are ignorant of our conditions of life, and whose bone and muscle can be obtained on a lower commercial scale. Does it then mean slavery?

With much reason, Sir Henry points out that to receive Indian coolies and benighted South Sea Islanders, and put restrictions on the immigration of Chinese, is a glaring inconsistency. In order to secure the profitable investment of ill-directed capital, the colonies are to barter away their character as free peoples!

The disabilities under which the Jews of Roumania labour are many and serious. On the occasion of his recent visit to this country, King Charles I. was memorialised on the subject by the Jewish Board of Deputies and the Anglo-Jewish Association. Even though born in Roumania, Jews are regarded as aliens. Numbering 250,000, they are without any status before the law, and, among other disadvantages, they are denied admission to the public technical schools, and excluded from many professions and every official employment. From a civil standpoint this is a short-sighted policy, while viewed in the light of the most rudimentary principles of Christianity, it is utterly unjustifiable. History abundantly shows that those who oppress the seed of Abraham do it to their own hurt.

Speaking a few days ago at the School of Handicraft in the Mile-end-road, the Bishop of Ripon urged clearly and well the value of technical education.

A living philosopher had said that the idea of knowledge being only obtainable from books was a superstition worthy the Middle Ages. True education did not mean giving information, but bringing out the capacity of the learner. So-called education was too often taught from a standard of theory, and was not half practical enough. Practice must go with theory, or the result would be useless. Through want of training, how many had hands with every finger like a thumb? No child would ever be worse for learning a handicraft; it need not interfere with mental culture. There was more than one American college in which poor students, working at handicrafts half time, out of its profits paid for their classics and other subjects of the higher education.

All who are conversant with the state of things amongst clerks and others, without a trade at their fingers' ends, know how helpless a man is in such a position, and how needful it is that some measures be adopted, such as the Bishop advocates, for teaching school children to use their hands as well as their heads.

Perhaps one of the most noteworthy facts in connection with the recent Parliamentary elections in Ireland is that nearly two-thirds of the Roman Catholic voters went directly contrary to the loudly-expressed will of their bishops and priests. To those who have for years back been familiar with the attitude of the people in respect to their spiritual directors, their recent action is indeed suggestive. It points to a revolt which has for long been anticipated by those who have watched the wavering courses followed by such as ought to have been firm in the direction of those things which make for righteousness. The tone of some of the newspapers in commenting upon the "priestly domination" might cause even Rome to pause, were it not that she is inherently a tyrant and a persecutor wherever men submit themselves to her sway.

A correspondent calls our attention to the P.S.A. movement, and asks a good many questions to its detriment. The answer is that every one of the objections may be raised against the Christian Church, the Y.M.C.A., or any other religious agency. The question is not what a movement is called, nor even what its programme may be; but rather, who are the men that work it. Good and true men will do great things with imperfect systems; while worldly men will fail to rise to spiritual achievement, however high their model, or however able the instruments they may employ.

Dispensational Truth:

ITS USE AND ITS MISUSE.

SOME, unfamiliar with the term, will ask, "What kind of truth is that?" and as the minds of many, consciously or not, are being led in this direction, we will endeavour to explain the term, more, however, by illustration than by definition.

Dispensational truth relates to the various dispensations under which God has dealt, or will deal, with man. The Apostle Paul uses dispensational truth when he says, "Death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression." God gave Adam a commandment which he disobeyed; but from Adam to Moses there was no commandment. Here was a distinct dispensational difference in the dealing of God with men. From Adam to Moses men could not be Law-breakers in the same way as Adam had been before them, and as Israel was after them.

In due time "the Law came that the offence might abound." The sin—which entered by one man's offence, which was in the world until the Law, and in consequence of which "death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression"—must be made manifest, and therefore "the law was added because of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made."

That dispensation ran its course of two thousand years, until John, its last and greatest prophet, laid the axe to the root of the trees, and preached the baptism of repentance unto the remission of sins through the Lamb of God. Here ended the dispensation of Law, to make room for that of Grace.

The Lord Jesus brings dispensational truth to bear upon the Pharisees: "Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts, for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God. The Law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it." The Law assumed the possibility of a man justifying himself: "The man that doeth these things shall live in them." The Pharisees refused to surrender this legal ground, and, forgetting God, were content only to appear righteous before men. But Christ tells them that that dispensation had come to an end with John. "The Law and the prophets were until John." "You Pharisees are an anachronism; you are out of date; for God is no longer dealing with man upon the assumption that it is possible for him to justify himself. The Law has made the offence abound; Jerusalem and all Judea have been baptized of John in Jordan, confessing their sins, except you blind Pharisees, who reject the counsel of God against yourselves, not being baptized of him. Since John came, the kingdom of God is preached ('Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand'), and every man presseth into it, except you self-justifying Pharisees."

In ignorance of dispensational truth, many still preach the Law instead of the Gospel. "When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die. Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive." You may say, "That is the Word of God, must I not preach it?" We reply, it is not the "PRESENT TRUTH." God under that dispensation, by means of the Law, was making men know what was in their hearts, and leading them step by step to the only righteousness they could perform—the confession of sin. "Thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness"—this is the first step. Jesus took it when he confessed our sins as his own. When all the people had been baptized, confessing their sins, Jesus also being baptized and praying, the heaven was opened, the Holy Ghost descended upon Him, and the Father's voice declared, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased."

If we preach that a sinner saves his soul alive by doing that which is lawful and right, let us also preach, "An eye for an eye; a tooth for a tooth; thou shalt love thy neighbour and hate thine enemy." No man under any dispensation ever saved his soul alive by turning from his iniquity, and doing that which was lawful and right. God, under the legal dispensation, was continually cutting away the ground from under man as often as he tried to stand on his own merits; and the passage we have quoted was His answer to the charge which Israel brought against Him, "The way of the Lord is not equal. The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge." He replies, in effect, "The man that doeth these things shall live in them; but cursed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the Book of the Law to do them." Blessed be God, that in this dispensation of the Gospel, these last days when God has spoken unto us by the Son, we are able to tell the repenting sinner, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." "Believe only—all things are possible to him that believeth."

In defiance of dispensational truth, the mother of harlots arrays herself in purple and scarlet, in a world which could only provide a manger for the birthplace of Him whom with lying lips she calls "Lord, Lord," and decks herself with gold and precious stones and pearls, where the Christ whose name she falsely bears was mocked with a brittle reed for a sceptre, and a wreath of thorns for a crown.

The non-recognition of the same truth leads some to reproduce the old Levitical modes of worship, and to insist that in that city or this mountain is the place where men ought to worship; while the Truth of God declares that the true worshippers are they alone who worship the Father in Spirit and in truth.

Nor is dispensational truth confined to the present and the past; it looks onward to the future, and teaches us that because the gifts and calling of God are without repentance, Israel must possess their land in peace. Had our venerable translators understood this, they would not have analyzed prophecies bearing plainest evidence of unity, and awarded all the blessings to the Church, and all the judgments to the Jews. Dispensational truth likewise teaches us in reference to the fulness of times, when God shall have gathered together in one all things in Christ; and goes on to the end, when Christ shall have delivered up the kingdom to the Father that God may be all in all.

Neglect of dispensational truth has led Mr. Horton to judge God's servants under the dispensation of law as though they had been under the dispensation of grace. This is not a question of the Inspiration of Scripture, but of the Government of God. Mordecai and Esther were fulfilling His righteous judgment in exterminating the race of Amalek, as was Joshua in destroying the nations of Canaan. In the former case the iniquity of the Amorites, in the latter the iniquity of the Amalekites, was full.

But while, as we have thus briefly shown, a knowledge of dispensational truth is indispensable, we need in respect to this, as to every other truth, to be kept by the guidance of the Holy Ghost in the middle of the paths of judgment. When men make hobbies of particular forms of truth, both the doctrine and the teacher appear ridiculous. Crude theories and extravagant statements have been professedly deduced from every truth of the Gospel, and that of which we are writing is no exception to the rule.

In the name of dispensational truth, large portions of the Scriptures have been declared to have no bearing upon saints between the Lord's death and his return. A veto has been laid upon the use by Christians of the Lord's Prayer. Some teach that the Gospels rather than the Epistles are the Christian's guide. Others, exaggerating and distorting dispensational truth, affirm, on the contrary, that the teaching of our Lord was proper to the transitional period between the Law and the Gospel, th it ceases during the present age, and will ta effect upon the Jewish remnant after t Church has been removed (as in 1 Thess. iv. consequently that the Epistles are the par of Scripture which specially if not exclusive concern the Church of Christ. In either ca dishonour is done to the Scriptures which a given by inspiration of God, when that whi He has joined men put asunder.

If exclusive attention be paid to dispens tional truth, instead of its being held in pr portion to all other truth, we may be led think more about the Jewish remnant tha ourselves, and to turn away from our ow hearts the Spirit's sharp, two-edged sword, replying, "Oh, that's Jewish." Let those wh answer thus remember, that "he is a Jew wh is one inwardly; and circumcision is of t heart, in the spirit, and not in the lette whose praise is not of men, but of God Therefore, while in the letter there is all t difference between the legal and the Christi dispensations, yet as he alone is a true Chri tian who is inwardly a Jew, all Jewish Scri ture has an inward and spiritual meaning the true "circumcision, who worship God the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and p no confidence in the flesh."

And this leads us to remark that the di pensational aspect of truth must be seconda to that which is eternal. The exclusive or di proportionate study of dispensational tru has frequently engendered that knowled which puffeth up, to the weakening of t love which buildeth up. How often have heard a pert student on this lower form spe slightingly of others much more deeply-root in Christ, by reason of their non-acquaintan with theories which were often mere hum speculations grafted on the truth of Go There is a possibility of being dazzled inste of illumined by light. "If the light that is thee be darkness, how great is that darkness

We say these things because we believe th this is the time to say them. We write fro the point of view of the burnt child w dreads the fire; and while we rejoice that t prophetic word is becoming more adequate valued as a light that shineth in a dark pla we pray our God to keep his pilgrims on t highway of truth, and preserve them from t tempting by-paths which abound on eith hand.

"WHERE ARE THE MEN?"

On the evening of the C.M.S. anniversary, Rev. F. Wigram rose to announce the amount of the collecti As the meeting began to respond with a hearty cheer, interposed with uplifted hand and voice, exclaiming, "—where—where are the men?"

READY the armour, but "where are the men?"
Only five hundred, when Jesus needs ten!
Here are the helmet, the breastplate, and shield;
Why do you not, then, advance to the field?

Some are sore longing—but God bids them stay—
Longing that they might be up and away;
Longing to strengthen the ranks that are thin,
Sharing with Jesus his warfare with sin.

These are all willing to do and to dare:
God does not send them; but thou shouldst be there
There with thy Lord in the thick of the fight:
Conquer thou must in the power of his might!

Dost thou still doubt that thy Lord needeth thee?
Oh, if thine eyes were but opened to see—
See for thyself his dear beckoning hand,
Wouldst thou not care for his latest command?

Go to Him, tell all the sin of the past:
Taste his forgiveness, his love; till at last,
Humbled, thou criest, "Lord, send even me!"
Jesus is come, and he calleth for thee.

Revival.

"O Lord, revive thy work."—Habakkuk iii. 2.

These words form part of a prayer by the prophet Habakkuk in a time of great spiritual declension. It is a suitable prayer for us at all times. It is, in truth, one that should rise from our hearts very frequently. But before we shall ever feel constrained to use these beautiful words, both often and earnestly, we must understand the full extent of their meaning. When we pray, "O Lord, revive thy work," what thoughts are conveyed to our minds by such a prayer? The word revival is frequently used in times of religious excitement, but greatly misunderstood. Too often it is mixed up with sensational and extravagant ideas of conversion; so that, to a sensitive mind, the word may become distasteful. We perceive, however, from the language of the prophet Habakkuk, that in times when our iniquities have brought judgments upon us, revivals are needed, and by the people of God should be much desired and prayed for. Let us, then, consider the subject, which we may conveniently do under four divisions.

THE SOURCE OF A REVIVAL.

I. The true source—indeed, the sole source—is God: "O Lord, revive thy work." In every case their origin is from God; they cannot be worked up by man. And forasmuch as God is their author, we ought never to speak of them in a flippant manner. If revivals could come from man, surely the great apostle of the Gentiles would have had many; yet what are his words?—"I have planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase." God gave the revival. Our Lord Himself also instructed Nicodemus on this subject when He said, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit."

We or others may go as far as to say: We will hold special services, we will give ourselves to prayer, or we will with all earnestness put forward the claims of Christ's Kingdom; but an actual and effectual revival is by the will of God and comes from God. He alone is the giver or withholder, the fountain and the source of that spiritual change which constitutes a revival.

THE NATURE OF A REVIVAL.

II.—The word is used in the Bible in two ways, and only two; and these two uses of the word seem to illustrate and explain what is really meant by being revived. The first use of the word is found in the history of Jacob and Joseph, Gen. xlv. 27. We all know the story well: how Joseph was sold by his brethren, and his father mourned for him as dead. And after twenty years of mourning there came tidings to Jacob that Joseph was alive and governor over all the land of Egypt. "And Jacob's heart fainted, for he believed not. But when they told him all the words of Joseph which he had said unto them, and when he saw the waggons which Joseph had sent to carry him, the spirit of Jacob their father revived." Here is a clear case of a person revived. At one moment Jacob is fainting and unbelieving, the next moment he is revived and showing signs of renewed activity. But what was the nature of the change? In one word it was Life. There was a communication of life to the fainting Jacob. He believed in a living son, and his spirit revived.

The spiritual application of this may be easily seen. The patriarch Jacob represents the fainthearted, doubting Christian, of whom there are many in the Church of Christ. While they bear the name of Christ, they have no holy enthusiasm for the progress of his Kingdom. They are cold and indifferent with regard to spiritual things, and consequently they bear little or no fruit. Now, our purpose is to show that they need to be revived. But how is it to be done? Only by their own personal apprehension of Life. Convince them of the blessed reality of a living personal Saviour, and their souls will revive. To see by faith our ever-living Christ and to be brought by faith into living union with Him, is to be spiritually revived. When Jacob saw the waggons and heard the message of Joseph he believed, and that moment his soul was knit with the soul of Joseph. It was an act of faith clear and simple. So is it with the believer. "The just shall live by faith." "The life I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave Himself for me."

The second use of the word is found in 1 Kings xvii. 21, in the case of Elijah and the widow's son. The child is dead, and when Elijah is appealed to by the mother he comes and stretches himself upon the child three times, and cries unto the Lord and prays, saying, "O Lord my God, I pray Thee let this child's soul come into him again. And the Lord heard the voice of Elijah, and the soul of the child came into him again and he revived."

Here, again, is an instance of a revival. Though it differs from the first in that the child is dead, yet the principle which accomplishes the revival is precisely the same as in the former case, and that principle is Life. Elijah stretched his living body upon the dead body of the child. The living touched the dead, and by a miracle the dead revived. There is a spiritual analogy to all this. Man by nature is described in Scripture as dead in trespasses and sins — spiritually dead, i.e., he has no spiritual life or fervour. "But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, quickened us together with Christ." The Lord Jesus Christ, the great Elijah, came down from heaven to give life unto the world, and He must needs bring himself into contact with those spiritually dead. When He died upon the cross, it was as if He stretched himself upon a lost world. And the only reason why dead souls are not revived and saved is because of unbelief.

"They that dwell in the land of the shadow of death upon them hath the light shined." And again, "I am the resurrection and the life," saith Christ, "he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die."

Thus the two places referred to where the word "revive" is found in the Old Testament, go to prove that the true nature of a revival is to communicate life to a fainting soul or to give life to a dead soul. This life is imparted in each case by faith. And there is only One from whom Life can be received, and that One is Christ. In Him was life, and the life was the light of men. Without this life there can be no revival. There may be noise and commotion, but there will be no revival unless life is given by Him who is the Life.

THE INSTRUMENT OF A REVIVAL.

III.—The instrument is the Holy Spirit of God, the Third Person in the blessed Trinity; and He it is who breathes the breath of life into the souls of men.

In Acts ii. we have a beautiful illustration of this twofold revival by the instrumentality of the Holy Ghost. First, in the disconsolate disciples of our blessed Lord. They returned to Jerusalem after the Ascension with no definite plans as to how they could witness for Christ in Jerusalem and Judea, and the uttermost part of the earth; but when the day of Pentecost was fully come, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, how marvellous was the change in them. It was as life from the dead. They could say, We are full of power by the Spirit of the Lord; and the secret of it was this: the Holy Spirit had taken possession of them, and brought them into conscious union with their risen and ascended Lord, so that they were constrained and encouraged to testify that, "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses."

As Peter preached Christ Jesus with the fervour and eloquence of this new power, dead souls began immediately to awake. Those who heard the burning words of the Apostle were pricked in the heart, and they said unto Peter and to the rest of the Apostles, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" And Peter said, "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." "Then they that gladly received the word were baptized, and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls."

We thus see, then, that a true revival is found, and found only in the Spirit of the Living God operating upon the soul of man, awakening, quickening, renewing, changing, and bringing him into a living union with Christ.

THE MEANS TO OBTAIN A REVIVAL.

IV.—The means or the way to obtain a revival is prayer, real earnest believing prayer, and this is within the reach of all. We can all pray, "O Lord, revive Thy work." How many times in the old days did God revive his work in answer to the believing prayers of his people? If we consider the history of the Church of Christ and mark the great revivals which have taken place we may trace in them the answer to believing prayer. Was not the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost an answer in some measure to this very prayer of the prophet Habakkuk? Or, if we would account for the manifestation of spiritual life in the days of the Reformers and at the beginning of the present century, we must look back to troublesome times, times, perhaps, of persecution and declension, yet there are to be found possibly two or three meeting together in the Master's name, and the burden of their prayer is this, "O Lord, revive Thy work." What need there is that we should pray this prayer now, both often and earnestly. Alas, our churches resemble too much the dry bones in Ezekiel's vision. There is no lack of organisations and unions and guilds, but we want the living breath, and for this we must pray specially. When the prophet prophesied to the breath in the name of the Lord God, saying, "Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live," the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood upon their feet an exceeding great army. Have we not then much encouragement to give ourselves to prayer for our homes, our church, and our country? And shall we not remember, too, our missionaries in Africa, China, India, Japan, and elsewhere, and earnestly long for that time when there shall be gathered out of every kindred and tribe and nation a people to serve the Lord?

O Lord, revive thy work, thy mighty arm make bare,
Speak with a voice that wakes the dead, and make thy people hear.
O, Lord, revive thy work, and give refreshing showers,
The glory shall be all thine own, the blessing, Lord, be ours.

ST. JOHN'S-WOOD Y.W.C.A.

Those who are at work in the St. John's-wood Y.W.C.A. Institute have had many encouragements. Within six years three hundred members have been gathered together. God has given his stamp on the effort in many conversions and in the earnest service of the members. They support a native teacher in India, work a factory girls' club, give help to Mr. George Holland, besides visiting hospitals, &c. There are thousands of young women in London, earning from eight to twelve shillings a-week, who drift into serious and permanent illness because they cannot spare the time or money to go to a convalescent home. For such to sleep in pure air, or stay from Saturday to Monday, would mean, probably, maintained health. It is earnestly desired to secure a freehold country cottage, at an expense (including furniture) of £600. It is within half-an-hour of London. All personal and immediate friends have given so generously to this Institute that they cannot be asked to contribute further; and unless those not closely connected with it will help, "Peace Cottage" cannot be secured. If it be not possible to aid with money, such gifts as a piano, or bedsteads and bedding, or linen, would be a great assistance.

The Factor in Gospel Preaching.

BY REV. J. F. T. HALLOWES, Birmingham.

Had the Apostles, glowing with a generous ambition to produce great spiritual results, consulted men of the world as to how this should be accomplished, their answer would have been "Hurry." But Christ's word was "Tarry." "But tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be clothed with power from on high" (Luke xxiv. 49). Thus He affirms that the Holy Ghost is the indispensable factor in preaching. The Gospel itself is no substitute for His energy.

Dr. Dale, in an admirable sermon on "The Christian Gospel and the Spirit of God," says "The Christian Gospel in its purity is as powerless to restore men to God as the most corrupt forms of heathen superstition, apart from the power of the Holy Ghost." Certainly Paul made no account of any preaching which lacked the "demonstration of the Spirit." Probably men of majestic intellect and magnetic soul have found it harder to embrace and act upon the truth that there are no substitutes for the power of the Holy Ghost in preaching, than have those, whose gifts being the reverse of commanding, cannot impress congregations at all, unless they can impress them by a power not their own.

Especially is it necessary in these days of increasing sacerdotalism, to insist on the immediate influence of the Spirit flowing directly into the heart of the minister of Christ, in opposition to the doctrine of such an influence through a supposed Apostolical succession. The New Testament knows nothing of any power of God trickling unsullied through those ecclesiastical quagmires — the dark ages.

The Great Head of the Church energises the members with gifts and graces according to his own will. He has no earthly reservoirs of these, whose channels church officials may control. His own heart is the fulness of the heavenly springs which ever pours itself forth afresh. St. Paul declares (Col. i. 19), "It was the good pleasure of the Father that in Him should all fulness dwell." St. John affirms that this fulness flows forth: "Of his fulness we all received, and grace for grace;" that is, "grace in addition to grace" (i. 16). Thus the equipment of any man for ministry, both in spiritualising and energising him, is the immediate act of Christ, who Himself clothes his servants with "power from on high."

But it may be well to ask, "What are some of the ways in which the Holy Ghost gives power to a preacher of the Gospel when he fully possesses him"? Assuredly, the fulness of the Spirit of God confers on a preacher a certain robustness of character. Only a man spiritually full grown can preach fullgrown sermons. The merely intellectual man, of course, cannot do this, while the spiritual dwarf is certain to preach stunted sermons. There are preachers who live far up the mount of thought, and yet far down the mount of God. It is the spiritual elevation of the minister rather than his intellectual altitude that gives him power over hearts and consciences. Robert Murray McCheyne once said, "It is not so much great talents that God blesses, as great likeness to Christ."

Moreover, this fulness of the Spirit will empower the preacher by making the truth vivid to his own soul. Woe to the Christian who tries to live by, woe to the preacher who tries to preach by, the afterglow of visions that have set. He who preaches merely from remembered visions of God's truth must be weaker than he who proclaims truth which is a present joy and inspiration. Now, it is the office of the Spirit to "take of the things of Christ, and to show them unto us." Such an exhibition of truth made to the mind and heart of the minister both in preparation and at the moment of delivery adds a marvellous vitality to Gospel verity.

Again, will not a large degree of sacred unction give ministers a spiritual fervour that nothing else can? Natural fervour is not to be despised. The preacher, who by nature belongs to the Arctic Circle, and whose lips drop icicles, needs extra grace to thaw him out of his frigidity. But spiritual fervour such as Whitefield had, is indeed a power. "Sometimes" (says Winter) "he exceedingly wept, and was frequently so overcome that for a few seconds you would suspect he would never recover, and when he did, nature would require some little time to compose herself. I hardly ever knew him go through a sermon without weeping more or less." Such spirit-wrought tenderness must have a commanding influence on human souls. Largely, the art of preaching is the art of loving the people at the moment of utterance. Some men's love is evidently in a state of suspended animation. It is not lively and affluent. Preaching ought to be the bursting out of God's light from the intellect and of God's love from the heart. Such divine tenderness has many advantages, notably in making the preacher more interesting to his hearers, arresting their attention, conciliating their regard, and enabling him to say things, disagreeable in themselves, in an agreeable way.

Summer Death.

For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear.—Mark iv. 28.

Summer has come—the time of life when "leafy June" contrasts with "bare December." But is it altogether the time of life for birds, butterflies, bees, and ephemeral insects, for roses and summer flowers, small garden fruit trees, &c.? Yes. But to our orchards, cornfields, groves, and avenues it is rather a time of death. Where are the blossoms of the early spring, the apple and the peach, the gorgeous furze and laburnum, with the chestnut and the lilac? All withered and dead! while a sombre shade of gloomy green has settled on the trees and fields that were bright in the tender loveliness of April and May.

What is the meaning of this? What is going on all the time? I sat down, the other day, under the shadow of a bush of furze that looked brown and dead, all its beauty and attractiveness gone. But as I looked I saw countless seeds forming where the flowers had faded—sufficient to sow the whole common with glory, in the years to come.

And I learned a lesson there. How many Christian lives, full of bloom and promise, activity and work, are presently changed in character? Some trial comes that seems to wither them altogether. Often they are hid from view, separated by some isolating, scorching dispensation to a position of loneliness or suffering. Their attractiveness and influence are all gone, and if their "leaf" do not wither—which, being planted by the fountain of living waters, it cannot do—yet its sombre gloom contrasts unfavourably, to human eyes, with the bright glory of its past.

Has this death come upon you in some form? Are you cut off from your work, your hopes, plans, and influence, by sickness or otherwise, shut out from those with or for whom you loved to labour, shut in to God—alone? Perhaps your trial is one that cannot be communicated to any human being—one that only He who made the heart and was made in all things like unto his brethren, can fully understand.

You cannot see the object of that which destroys all the spring bloom in your Christian life and character. Wait awhile. This is your summer-time when, through death to self, the fruit is forming which shall yield glory to God, not to you, in the autumn days. Then the ripe corn in the ear shall replace the faded blade, and swell out that which is all you now appear to be—straw!

When we pass through an orchard in the spring, we exclaim, "Look at that lovely tree!" When we see it again in the autumn, we say, "What a splendid crop of apples!" taking little heed of the bowed branches and fading leaves. Thus we are called to our summer-time, sooner or later, to learn the meaning of the faithful saying, "If we die with Him, we shall also live with Him" (2 Tim. ii. 11). "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples" (John xv. 8.) C. J. C

WORK IN GIBRALTAR.

I have just returned from Gibraltar. The work among the soldiers and sailors prospers. "The New Found Out" is now "Our Coffee Room," and is a great comfort to all. In meetings held in the Home and at the North Front there have been real blessing. One interesting feature is that the older Christians are doing what they can to win their comrades for Jesus, holding little meetings for prayer, and reading the Word of God.

The Jews and Spaniards, who throng the Alamada, hear the Gospel preached and sung in Spanish, and listen with interest. Over in Algeciras, Spain, there has been blessing. Many have been brought from darkness to light among others an old man, who is learning the alphabet that he may be able to read a Bible which has been given him. When asked if he had peace, he said, "Peace? I have hundred weights of peace;" and again, "I have much joy."

Since we first went there the people have wanted a school—offering to give us the children if only we would teach them "to be good." A few days ago a schoolmaster went out. A lady teacher (certificated) has offered. We long to send her, too, and in October a much-needed medical missionary (lady) will go forth to care for the poor women. We have opened a new branch in Los Barios, eight miles from Algeciras. Mr. Simpson writes on the 1st July: "Last night we had our first meeting. About a dozen of the Christians walked over to help with the singing. The hall was crowded, many standing; and outside crowds stood listening to the singing. The Alcalda and his wife are very friendly. Meetings have been held in San Roque and in Zerifa which were crowded to excess.

"A young man came to our hall about five weeks ago. After a little conversation he bought a Bible and went away to his home ten miles away. He came back on Friday and asked for baptism. He had read the Bible from beginning to end, and had received the Lord Jesus as his Saviour. He said, 'You may baptize me with water, but only God can baptize with the Holy Ghost,' and prayed he might be kept faithful to the last drop of his blood."

The hall of our Home has for a long time been too small for all who wish to hear. During Passion week, when we had special meetings, the hall which seats ninety had 160 crowded into it while many stood outside unable to get in. This has been the case for so long that we feel we must have a larger hall, and there is none we can rent. A house containing eleven rooms, with an unusually large stable and coach-house, has been offered for purchase. With little expense the stable and coach-house could be made into a hall which would seat over five hundred. £130 would enable us to purchase this house and clear off what we still owe for the present Home. Algeciras has thirteen hundred inhabitants, is a town of growing importance, and a door to the southern part of Spain where (on our little map) eighty-four towns and villages are marked, in all of which we will find a welcome if we carry to them the "Book of God."

FRANCE AND THE ROMAN CHURCH.—The Government of the French Republic is determined to hold in check its subject Roman Catholic Bishops. The Bishop of Jean de Maurienne, following the example of the Archbishop of Aix and the Bishop of Grenoble, has now withdrawn from the catechisms in his diocese the chapters referring to religion and politics. The Government, it will be remembered, commenced proceedings against five Bishops for teaching that non-Catholic candidates should be boycotted, and that persons who voted in their favour would not receive absolution. Three of the five bishops have stopped further proceedings by giving in. The Bishop of Maurienne, in his letter to the Minister of Public Worship, does so with evident reluctance professedly "as a friend of peace, disposed to make every sacrifice compatible with his dignity for preserving harmony between Church and State.

The Christian Endeavour Movement:

ITS ORIGIN AND GROWTH.

BY FRANCIS E. CLARK, D.D.

This Society has had as distinctly a providential beginning as any religious movement in the history of the world. Of course, the Society began in one church and with one pastor. Every organisation has to start somewhere; but this pastor and this church had as little to do with promoting the Christian Endeavour cause as the farmer has to do with the growth of the seed in the mellow soil of spring.

It is also true that the need of this Society was felt not only in the heart of one pastor but but in the hearts of thousands of pastors. The fallow ground was broken up for the reception of just such a seed in a multitude of churches. Hundreds and thousands of Christian workers were waiting for such a plan, and, as soon as it appeared in one church, it found a thousand kindly, pastoral hands ready to transplant the living shoot into their own garden.

In the early days there were very few, except the pastors who had tried the Society, to speak its praises. It was said that it would sap the strength of the Church, that it would set off the young over against the old in rivalry, that it would form a Church outside of the Church; and when it was proved that it was right within the heart of the Church, that it was the Church working of its young people, then the pessimist exclaimed that it would create a Church within a Church; and when a brother wished to be very emphatic he would drop into Latin, and in a deep bass voice would exclaim: "I fear that it will become an Imperium in imperio."

But this Society has outlived many infantile diseases which threatened to carry it off. It has increased in power with every month that has gone by during the last twelve years. The attitude of the denominations, for the most part, is very different from what it was only a few years ago. The organisation is evidently coming to be understood as never before, and the more thoroughly it is understood the more generously it is accepted and heartily loved.

A few days ago I spoke at the seventh anniversary of the first Society formed in one of the largest cities of Massachusetts, and was reminded of the fact that when that Society was established seven years ago there were only 250 others in existence in all parts of the world. During each of the last four weeks more new societies of Christian Endeavour were reported at the office of the United Society in Boston than were formed in the first four years of the movement. On one of these weeks 371 new Societies were recorded, with nearly twenty thousand members, and on another the figures were only less by a very few than this number. This growth is not confined to America and Canada, but in England and Australia the Society seems to be striking its roots quite as deeply as in this country, even if its growth is not as rapid in the Mother Land. A year ago at this time there were less than a hundred Societies in Great Britain. Now there are over three hundred, and a most enthusiastic national convention has just been held, whose thronging crowds could scarcely be crowded into two of the largest churches in Chester.

In Australia the growth of the movement is no less marked than in this country. All the Australian colonies have formed Christian Endeavour unions with conventions that rival those in our own states and territories, while nearly every Evangelical denomination in that great island continent has endorsed the principles and methods of the Society, and, to a considerable extent, adopted its name for the young people of their churches.

The Society has this year been received with more than usual cordiality in our own country, especially during the spring conventions, which have made the year memorable in religious circles. The General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church adopted the Society entire, without prefixes or suffixes. The Cumberland Presbyterian Church, after canvassing the whole field, found that there was absolutely no other society suggested by any of their presbyteries or pastors than the Society of Christian Endeavour, and it was adopted as their young people's organisation. The Disciples of Christ, some months ago, substantially took the same ground. The Reformed Church was one of the first denominations to endorse and accept the Society. In the Presbyterian General Assembly of 1892 there was no word raised against the organisation which has now found its way into four-fifths, I suppose, of the Presbyterian churches; while the cordiality with which it has been received by the Congregationalists, Friends, and many of the Evangelical Lutherans is well known.

The Baptist Young People's Union is formed on an inclusive basis, which allows equal rights to Christian Endeavour Societies, and encourages their existence and multiplication in Baptist churches throughout the country.

Thus are the indications multiplying in all parts of the world that the Society of Christian Endeavour is a movement for every Church and for every clime, and not simply an organisation.

In view of the great Convention at New York, when it is expected that at least twenty-five thousand young people will come together, it may be of interest to give a hitherto unwritten chapter concerning Christian Endeavour conventions of the past.

The first Society was formed in Williston Church, Portland, Me., February 2, 1881. The second Society in Newburyport, Mass., in October of the same year. By the following June (1882) some five or six Societies had been formed so far as were known, and true to the instincts which have since guided them a Convention of Christian Endeavour Societies was called to meet in Williston Church. It can easily be imagined that it was a comparatively small and inconspicuous Convention. It was not without its prophecy, however, of future greatness, though it was looked upon as a remarkable fact that one delegate cared to come from a Maine town nearly fifty miles away. The account in a local newspaper glowed with hope and prophecy rather than any great results that could be recorded of that first Convention, which perhaps half filled an ordinary sized church. The second Convention was held in the old Second Parish Church of Portland, Me., and was scarcely more important, though somewhat more largely attended, than the first. The third Convention, in 1884, was held in the Kirk-street Church, in Lowell, of which the Rev. C. A. Dickinson, of Berkeley Temple, Boston, who has from the beginning been an earnest friend of the movement, was then the pastor. This Convention was about the size of an ordinary local conference or presbytery, and the fact that one young man ventured from the far-off regions of the Nutmeg State, attracted by his interest in the Christian Endeavour movement, was commented upon as a remarkable fact.

The Convention of 1885 was held near old Orchard Beach, under the soughing pine boughs of a summer encampment. By this time Christian Endeavour had crossed the Mississippi, and one delegate from St. Louis appeared upon the scenes. This Convention gave still larger promise of greater things in the future; but it was not until the two Conventions in Saratoga in 1886 and 1887 that the Society became worthy of the name as a national movement. At the latter Convention something like two thousand young people with their pastors were present, and a decided impression was made upon the religious public by the sight of these enthusiastic, wholesouled, unselfish young people gathered together in a great summer resort, not to witness the races or to quaff the water, but for a draught at the spiritual fountain which has always been opened at these great meetings. The Convention of 1888 was held in Chicago, and Battery D was crowded with five thousand earnest young souls, who carried the blessed contagion of Christian Endeavour everywhere throughout the land. This was really the first of the great mass meetings. This Convention was repeated in Philadelphia in 1889, with seven thousand in attendance, and in St. Louis in 1890, with two thousand added to the swelling hosts, and which found its climax last year at Minneapolis, when fourteen thousand came together for the inspiration and fellowship of the Convention.

What an inspiring thought is it to remember that more than a score of thousand of young men and women from every state, territory, and province in the United States and Canada, from England, India, Africa, and China, will come together at the eleventh International Convention, which is now close upon us, for a spiritual and religious purpose! What else could summon these hosts? What other bugle call could they hear from Nova Scotia to Oregon, from Manitoba to Texas? What dramatic company or opera troupe, what baseball combination or political convention, could draw them together? What else would induce them to spend their money, to give up their precious days of vacation, as many of them will? Not the excursion which will bring them to the hall of meeting, not the social good-fellowship of the excursion, not the eloquent speeches or distinguished orators of the Convention can account for this throng. Nothing but the attractive power of the religion of Christ can adequately explain it. There is no such magnet in all the world as the Cross. There is nothing that can compete with a spiritual prayer-meeting in "drawing power"; for in the prayer-meeting with its pledge, and in the consecration meeting with its solemn vows, is found the heart of the Christian Endeavour movement. This is not simply a gathering of young people's societies. It is not merely a youthful evangelical alliance. It is a company of young men and women who have taken the same vows, who believe in the same methods, and whose one outward bond is the common name, Christian Endeavour.

If the Convention of 1892 accomplishes no other purpose, it will be an object lesson to the religious world and the world of scoffers alike that the simple Gospel of Jesus Christ is not losing its power, that it never had so secure and triumphant a place in the hearts of the young as to-day, and that the future of the Church is safe when such young men and women as will assemble in Madison-square Garden, with quick brains, warm hearts, and ready hands, are devoting themselves so entirely to the one Master, finding in his service the spiritual fellowship that they desire. In view of such interdenominational Conventions, only made possible by some such practical fellowship, shall we not pray that this brotherhood may remain intact and may not suffer from sectarian aggression or exclusiveness?

Boston, Mass.

In a leading article the New York Independent, from which we extract Mr. Clark's narrative, says:—The story of the origin and development of the young people's movement is well told in our symposium this week. The head and front of it is the Christian Endeavour Society, which is interdenominational in scope, aiming to establish in one broad fellowship young people of all Evangelical churches. Of course there are peculiar difficulties which cannot be overcome at present in some cases, and the Christian Endeavour Society has not free course in a few churches. But it has become a mighty force among the Congregationalists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Disciples of Christ, and other denominations. Its form of organisation allows it to be easily adjusted to peculiar denominational usages or needs. It is not a church within a Church; it does not cultivate disloyalty to denominational creeds, or institutions, or discipline; it simply furnishes the young people an admirable system of organisation and work, and binds them all together in a grand Christian fellowship.

Besides this great general society, the Methodists have the Epworth League, which has upward of eight thousand chapters; the Episcopalians, the Saint Andrew's Brotherhood, with more than seven hundred chapters; the Baptists, numerous social unions, and the United Presbyterians, the United Brethren in Christ and other churches, many societies of the Young People's Christian Union and the like. It would be a grand thing if all could be united upon the name and in the organisation of the Christian Endeavour. The regular association of young Christians of different Church names, in district, state, and general Conventions would have wonderful effect in unifying Christian sentiment, in deepening Christian fellowship, and in manifesting to the world the essential unity of all evangelical believers. But the main thing is secured if the young people in the various churches are brought together for Christian prayer, consecration, work, and general usefulness. They have a power of which the Church has little knowledge as yet. It will in the not distant future find in them a strong arm of aggressive warfare against the evil influences of the world.

A ROYAL VISIT TO THE DOCKS.

H.R.H. the Duchess of Teck formally opened, on Thursday last, the Seamen's Institute and Rest which the British and Foreign Sailors' Society recently established in West Ferry-road, close to the entrance to the Millwall Docks. The royal party and a large number of invited spectators were conveyed to the scene by two special steamers starting from Westminster; and, on arriving at the new building, found that the ground floor, arranged to form two reading rooms and a room for the holding of meetings, had been transformed into a hall capable of seating 250 persons. Here Lord Brassey presided, and the Secretary of the Society (Mr. Edward W. Matthews) made a short statement, in which he said that the erection of the building was mainly due to the generosity of Lady Ashburton, who had contributed £1200 towards the total cost of £2150, while subsequent donations had raised the available funds to £2116 7s. Between the completion of the building and its formal opening, it had been made use of by 3172 seamen. Lord Brassey moved, and Mr. J. Herbert Tritton seconded, a resolution stating the occasion to be a fitting one for recognising the extension thus afforded to the Society's work, as a part of the forward movement contemplated by the "Albert Victor Memorial Fund," opened that day, and which it was hoped might realise not less than ten thousand pounds, and which was to include the Albert Victor Sailors' Rest, the site for which was already secured in the West India Dock-road. Canon Wilberforce moved, and Mr. John Cory seconded, a resolution in favour of the establishment of a ladies' auxiliary of the Society, and hoping that the Duchess of Teck would consent to become its first patroness.

The Duchess of Teck said: I have now the pleasure of declaring the new Seamen's Institute and Rest open. I can only hope that God's blessing will be given to this undertaking, and I trust it will be only one of many other institutions that will arise about the docks. I ought not to sit down without saying one word of gratitude, as a united vote, to Lady Ashburton, who has given so much to this undertaking. I have already had an opportunity in other docks of opening a large building which Lady Ashburton has erected for the benefit of seamen, and I think a great blessing has rested upon that. I think I may convey your thanks to Lady Ashburton.

A NEW MISSION HALL has been opened at 139, Blackstock-road, Finsbury-park. The mission will be worked on strictly unsectarian lines, and is the outcome of the labours of a few working-people of the neighbourhood.

Lights and Shadows of Mission Work.

No. V.

"I should like to get into mission work." How often have I heard these words from young curates, to whom, after waiting for two or three years at the most, preferment has appeared to come slowly. One taste of my experience at R——, and many who had wished themselves into the work would be wishing themselves out of it again. No one was at the railway station to meet me. I was told it was "a tidy step" to the vicarage, and as I trudged along with my portmanteau, I had a presentiment that my reception at the hands of those I had come to help would be in harmony with the weather, which was cold in the extreme. Sometimes facts falsify presentiments; they did not at this place, and before I had begun my work I wished myself back home.

What did it all mean? Simply this—and I will now drop a word of warning to those well-intentioned people who would ever be managing a neighbour's business. A gentleman who knew me, and thought God might use me in this parish, had gained the reluctant consent of the vicar for me to take the mission, and, in a manner, had thrust me upon him and his family, very much against their wills. This man, of course, should have been my entertainer, and then all might have gone well. As it was, I was regarded as an intruder from the minute I found myself under the parsonage roof.

I dropped a sentence at the dinner-table in which the word "saved" found a place. The answer was "Of course, we are all saved." The night came, the meeting was poor, there were few to listen, and none to pray. The next day I got soaked to the skin, and as wood and coal, for a fire, had been laid in my bedroom grate, I ventured to put a match to the former. My foot was in it now. When I returned from the evening meeting, though the snow had been falling, and it was piercingly cold, the fire had been removed; the grate repolished, to be filled with summer finery; and the bedroom window thrown wide open. As midday dinner was a long time in being served the next day, I began to wonder whether I was to be starved out. At length I was informed that dinner had been laid for me, and that my hostess hoped I wouldn't mind taking it by myself. On one of the evenings—and it was pitch dark, too—I was left to follow the vicar along an unknown, and very dangerous path to the church. I struck my head against a wall by the way, and nearly stunned myself.

This was more than I could stand, and I gave him a trifle of my mind, which wrought but little improvement in matters, as, hurrying off himself, he left me to grope my way back again as best I could. If the churchwarden had not grasped the situation and accompanied me, I might have broken my neck on the road; I had forgotten some steps, down which, but for his friendly warning, I might have somersaulted to my no small hurt.

Matters grew better as time wore on, and kindness took the place of coldness during the last few days of the mission. Whether the change was owing to worthy or unworthy motives I could not tell; but oh, was not home "sweet home" when I got back from such a place to my own wife and "chickabiddies" again!

But that "light" as well as "shadow" may have a place in this paper, let me turn from R—— to L——. No lack of welcome, kindness, and care will any missioner ever find there. Indeed, there was a little too much of them for me, for the good things appealing to one's carnal tastes were so many and so varied, that I was tempted one Saturday night a little beyond the bounds of prudence in the matter of eating, and drew upon myself such an attack of indigestion that I was punished with the only sleepless night of my life as a consequence. On the Sunday morning I was to preach on a special subject, but I could not do it. I had unfitted myself both spiritually and physically for the effort required, and was compelled to fall back on an old subject. I could take no part in the early portion of the service, for I wanted to sleep now, nor would nature be refused; so I remained in the vestry till it was time to go into the pulpit, and fell fast asleep with my head on the vestry table.

Remembered from the past, I don't see that I had so very much to blame myself for in all this. I had taken no stimulant, and certainly it was not the quantity of food I ate that had made me ill; but when I found I must go into the pulpit I longed to go off in some other direction. I confessed the folly of which I felt myself to have been guilty, pleaded with "the Father," the "Whatsoever" of "the Son," and cast myself wholly on his mercy. My splitting headache left me, and before I had uttered many sentences I knew that God was with me of a truth. My subject was "Medicine for the Broken Heart," as supplied by earth, by hell, and by heaven. Under the second head, I spoke of suicide as one of hell's grand remedies, and told my hearers that I felt sure someone in the congregation had been incited by Satan to attempt it. I was right.

The night service brought out an anxious soul who, but two or three nights before, had gone down to the riverside determined to find a watery grave, but had been prevented from accomplishing the purpose formed. Truly penitent, as far as man might judge, she professed to have been found by the Lord Jesus. Whether she was really born again that night, of course, I cannot say, but on more than one occasion when the vicar has written to me since, he has spoken of her as "going on well."

On my return journey from C——, I was thrown into the company of two ladies, the elder of whom was going to Nottingham to consult an eminent oculist. In conversation, I happened to mention the name of the friend with whom I had been staying. Her lip slightly curled with scorn. He was more of a Dissenter than a Churchman. He was getting very wild in his views; and a lot more of the same kind of thing. I asked where he was "dissenterish," wild and wrong; and, as one thing brought up another, I quoted Acts xiii. 39, "By Him, all that believe are justified from all things."

"Those words are not in the Bible," said my fellow-traveller.

"They are."

"Could you show them to me? though I don't suppose any one here has a Bible."

"I have one, and here they are."

I handed her my Bible and she read the text; then she gave the book to the friend at her side, with the words "They are here." Just then the train stopped. "We change here," said she; "but I believe I shall ever have to thank God that He has put us in this railway-carriage together."

Sometimes I have wondered why God has sent me to places like R——. The only result of the mission that I remember was help rendered to a poor world-weary governess. She had been in the best of families. In younger days she had been able to command almost any salary asked; but now it was well-nigh all over with her, as far as earthly prospects were concerned. Would God send a man miles from home to minister comfort to such an one? When He sends his holy angels all the way from heaven to like work among the heirs of salvation, perhaps He would.

EAST LONDON PROTESTANT YOUTHS' MISSION.—On Saturday last, July 9, the annual meeting of the friends and supporters took place at Salisbury Hall, Old Ford-road. Captain King presided, and there was a very large attendance.

GOD'S STRANGE ACT.

Abraham did not think it a strange act that the Judge of all the earth should execute judgment upon the wicked, but he thought it foreign to the character of God to slay the righteous with the wicked. David did not think it strange that God broke in upon his enemies like the breaking forth of waters, and that a second time at Baal-Perazim He went before him to smite the host of the Philistines; but Isaiah designates it as God's strange work that He should rise up as in Mount Perazim against the Son of his love. Joshua did not think it strange that at Gibeon Jehovah cast down great stones from heaven upon the Canaanites, and "they were more which died with hailstones than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword," but Isaiah signalises it as Jehovah's strange act that He should be wroth, as in the Valley of Gibeon, against his Fellow, who was by Him as one brought up with Him; daily his delight, rejoicing always before Him; rejoicing in the habitable parts of his earth; and his delights were with the sons of men.

That the second Man, the Lord from heaven, should become the Man who hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath, was the strangeness of the mystery of salvation into which the prophets inquired diligently, searching what, or what manner of time, the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow, which things the angels desire to look into.

That the Lamb of Paradise should be lifted up like the serpent in the wilderness; that the Son of the Blessed should be made a curse; that the only-begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, should cry, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" that the true God and the eternal Life, manifested in flesh, should cry from the cross to the invisible God in heaven, "Thou hast brought Me into the dust of death;" and that this was the counsel of peace between them both—this was the strange work, the strange act, of the Triune God. Yet though strange to man not strange to God; for only thus could the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, reveal God. It was not strange, it was in deepest harmony with his character, it was in the necessity of his nature, that in order that He might save his enemies He should not spare his Son. M.

Welcome to Rev. W. J. Mayers.

In connection with Dr. Barnardo's Homes, Rev. Walter J. Mayers has been for the last fifteen months engaged with a party of musical boys, as a deputation to advocate the claims of the Institutions in Australia and New Zealand. Beginning at Adelaide, where the party landed in April, 1891, meetings were held throughout South Australia, Victoria, Queensland, New Zealand, Tasmania, and New South Wales. Large success has attended his representation of the claims of the children. Mr. Mayers has now returned, and a Welcome Home gathering has been arranged to take place on Monday evening next, July 25, in the large hall of the Edinburgh Castle, Limehouse, E. All friends of the Homes are cordially invited.

RUNNING AND OBTAINING.—There are many more that run than there be that obtain. Though a man do run, yet if he do not overcome or win, as well as run, what will he be the better for his running? How many such runners will there be found at the Day of Judgment, who have come to heaven's gates when it is too late, crying, "Lord, Lord!" when they have nothing but rebukes for their pains! "Depart from Me; you ran too lazily; the door is shut." Sad will the estate of those be who run and miss; therefore, if you will have heaven, you must run for it.—John Bunyan.

The Call for Labourers.

Thanks be to God for the "Call to humiliation and prayer in connection with the evangelisation of the world" issued by the Church Missionary Society fixed for Thursday, 14th inst. I do rejoice, but must refrain from writing more than a few lines.

"When Jesus saw the multitudes, He was moved with compassion for them, because they were distressed and scattered, as sheep not having a shepherd. Then saith He to his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He send forth labourers into his harvest." (Matt. ix. 36, 37, 38 R.V.)

But no accountant on earth now knows the number of the too-long-neglected and distressed Jews, Mohammedans, and heathen. Yet that is no difficulty, because we are with one accord to make our requests to the Lord of the harvest who Himself knows the number, and we are thus urged by the Saviour to take care that our prayers to the Lord of the harvest be commensurate with these millions upon millions.

Christ was moved with compassion when surrounded in Palestine by a few hundreds, or, it may be a few thousands, merely distressed and fainting from exhaustion. But they were not like many of our present-day sufferers, being slain by trade-rum, or eaten by cannibals, or rapidly being poisoned by opium. Let me, then, entreat that we fall into the full scale of the praying the Lord enjoins—namely, that the number of reapers should be commensurate with the acreage of the harvest. But, you exclaim, this would more than exhaust all the reapers of all the missionary societies of Europe, of America, and of all Christendom.

Of course, it would; but we must not dream that the evangelising in the New Testament was effected chiefly, or even in great part, by apostles, or pecuniarily-supported missionaries. And if the apostles ever contemplated such an absurd proceeding, they were quickly enlightened by seeing the multitude of the converts, learned and illiterate, women as well as men, slaves as well as free men, filled with the Holy Spirit and spreading the glad news in the power of the Holy Ghost.* (See Acts iv. 29, 30, and 31.)

Satan will resist the evangelisation of the world at every step, and, it may be, fight at every step.

How blinded we have been. Centuries almost asleep with regard to the heathen. Then asleep in regard to the Jews. What if the Lord should permit thousands of Jews and Christians now being savagely persecuted, with thousands of poor Russian believers crushed out from their native homes, driven forth over the world, to spread the Gospel!

If Christ could have such compassion when He saw a few hundreds fainting from hunger and fatigue, are his compassions exhausted now? Never!

But do not let us ever dream of evangelising the world merely by unaided, paid missionaries; such a delusion, besides being cruel to the heathen converts, and to the unconverted heathen, is altogether unfair to our devoted missionaries themselves; for how are the missionaries to persuade their native converts to evangelise gratuitously unless by the example of Europeans or Americans preaching the Gospel amongst them, and sustaining themselves by divers secular methods?

We are told in The Missionary Review of thousands of natives in India pressing forward for baptism as at Pentecost, but how these natives will be hindered from spreading the Gospel voluntarily if they see not a single European mechanic, railway-man, planter or trader, preaching for nothing.

Think how the converted slaves spread the Gospel in the early centuries, and it is alleged that we ourselves in Britain owed very much of our earliest evangelisation to the soldiers in the Roman army.*

Reginald Radcliffe.

* Dr. G. Smith, in his "History of Christian Missions," page 33, says from the foundation of the Christian Church on the Day of Pentecost up to its establishment by Constantine, A.D. 311, it may be said that every Christian was a missionary.

* Dr. Geo. Smith, page 60:—"The period of the military occupation of Britain was a time when every Christian was a missionary. For thirty-three years from A.D. 43, when Aulus Plautius brought over four legions, the country was garrisoned by 48,000 Roman soldiers, or as many as held all British India just before the mutiny of 1857."

PRAYER FOR MISSIONS.

The friends of missions came together in good numbers in London on Thursday last—a day which was observed by the Church Missionary Society as a season of humiliation and prayer in connection with the evangelisation of the world. The several meetings were held at Sion College on the Embankment, and at the C.M.S. House in Salisbury-square.

The meetings were prompted by the fact that probably at no time in the history of the world has there been so urgent a demand as now for men and women in the foreign mission-field.

A circular lately issued states: "The Committee have publicly announced their readiness to send forth into the mission field all who offer (provided they possess the spiritual, intellectual, and physical qualifications which the Committee regard as essential for the work), assured that if God supplies the men and women, He will also furnish the means. And yet, in spite of the urgency of the demand, the growing interest, and the avowed purpose of the Committee, offers of service—though, thank God, on the increase—are not being made in anything like the number which, humanly speaking, the exigencies of the case imperatively demand. Perhaps the warning, 'Ye have not, because ye ask not,' may indicate the reason of the lack of supply. Hence this very earnest and affectionate invitation is issued, not merely to the friends of the C.M.S., but to all who yearn for the time to be hastened when the Gospel shall be proclaimed as a witness among all nations, to unite in fervent, persevering, believing and very definite prayer for a mighty working of the Holy Ghost among us, and that He may stir many whom He has qualified to respond promptly to this appeal for personal service."

The ordinary weekly meeting for prayer was merged with one of the two held at Sion College in the afternoon. Attention having been called to the privilege which has been placed within the reach of English Christians of sending the Gospel throughout the world, prayer was offered for such a working of the Divine Spirit as shall thrust out new labourers with the encouragement, rather than, as is too frequently the case, at the displeasure of their kinsfolk and friends. Rev. T. W. Drury, Principal of the C.M.S. College, Islington, delivered a brief address based on Acts xxii. 17—21. By his first vision, on the way to Damascus, St. Paul was converted from being a proud Pharisee to being a humble follower of Christ. By this second vision, while praying in the Temple, the Apostle came to realise that God's work for him was not to be among his own people, but that he was to preach the Gospel among the Gentiles. The speaker asked his hearers to consider their individual positions, and to render willing and prompt obedience to the Divine call. Among others for whom prayer should be offered he included the clergy, for, he said, "I am not quite certain that all the Bishops are glad when men go abroad."

The prayers were hearty throughout, and followed with solemn attention by deeply sympathetic audiences.

THURINGIA.—A conference for the deepening of spiritual life will be held at Blankenburg, Schwarzathal, August 29 to September 2. Revs. John Gritton, Dr. F. W. Baedeker, and others are expected from England. Mr. Gritton is coming as delegate for the Evangelical Alliance.

Rich and Poor.

BY EDITH E. METCALF.*

Here he was—one for whom literally nothing was prepared. Shall I ever cease to wonder that in any place there could be found one whose misery had escaped every eye but God's; or to thank Him, that at last He let me find him!

A misshapen boy, so wasted away that it was difficult to judge his age, lay in a tiny room bereft of both air and light, dying of scrofulous consumption. One side of his face was covered with a hideous ulcer, wrapped in filthy rags, and so offensive that at first I nearly fainted. His whole condition showed such neglect and want that one's very heart must weep to think a human being could be so forsaken. The tormenting flies had settled upon his face, as if revelling in that corruption; and he, too weak to brush them off, looked up at the stranger's face seeming to say, "Who is this? I thought God and every one else had forgotten."

He was alone. Courage came to stay a few moments and talk with him.

"Never mind about me," he said several times. "You're very kind, but I'm an incurable."

Each time that word sounded like a knell, and I realised how one and another had repeated it in his presence until it had eaten into his very soul.

"Mother and I are all, and she can't leave me to work now I'm so bad; and"—but he was too weak to talk more. And just then the mother came in—a good woman—that was plain at a glance, with kind eyes; but a more baffled, tired-out look, thank God, one seldom sees.

It is no wonder that, half-crazed with her coming loss, she could not care properly for the boy, even had the poor little room held fire, food, and all things necessary—which it evidently did not.

She was plainly unused to telling "her story," and I could not press it. All that was learned that day was that John was a good boy and had supported her until he was taken sick; and that now, she, who used to live comfortably and help her neighbours, had come to this. He had been sick a year; they had only lately moved to that street; and I was the only lady who had ever been to visit her in that trouble.

Her tearful "God bless you!" moved me to ask if I could come again and try "in his Name" to aid her; just as she, when she could do so, used to help her neighbours; and she gladly consented.

The washerwoman downstairs told more; and little by little that pitiful life has been unfolded in such a way that it is clear God means its teachings to be passed along.

As my washerwoman grew eloquent with the story of the woes of that poor life upstairs, and her unavailing efforts to interest the "rich folks" in him, she seemed to grow almost beautiful.

"He has suffered everything, that poor boy has; and no wonder he thinks the world is horrible, and wants to get out of it! He's a bright boy, too; a scholar, can write and read beautiful, and used to earn a good living in a big business place down town. After his father was killed he supported his mother all alone. He was just her darling, and then he was took sick—he wasn't never strong—and they took him to a hospital. There was a bit of money then left from what the railroad paid them for killing the father; but it mostly went for operations. His board there was seven dollars a week besides. And then the meanest thing happened (and her big eyes blazed with wrath); the great surgeon who operated on him wouldn't take no more notice of him when the money give out.

"Pretty soon they had a chance to get rid of him altogether, because he had only one dollar left. He asked for some breakfast before he started; they charged him one dollar for the breakfast, and he had no money for the car, and had to walk all the way home. Of course, that almost killed him. Then after he was a long time at home and got very bad, they took him to a religious hospital that's free; but he wasn't never happy there. The nurses objected to him. Nobody wanted to dress his head. They wouldn't do it only every other day, and he suffered awful; and then they refused to do it at all. They said it wasn't fair to ask anybody to do anything so horrid. And after awhile he was sent away from there because he was incurable.

"Since then, he's lain there longing to die; and the mother hasn't a cent even to get the dressing for that ulcer on his face. Her rent is paid by some relation, almost as bad off as she is herself. The Catholic Church used to give them a dollar a week; but has sent word now it can only be a dollar every other week. With only a dollar every other week, ma'am, you see it's hard to make the ends meet. I give them fifty cents whenever I can; but we ain't rich," she said, as she glanced round the poor room, which was better than the one above it only because it had a fire.

"I got her to come here over me," her narrative flowed on, "so that the rent would be cheaper; and I try—oh, how I try! to get the people where I wash, to help him. But they can't listen, these rich people; it doesn't get into their hearts; they don't even understand what we're talking about."

Right then a heaven-sent thought winged its way into my heart, and I hurried upstairs to ask John where he had worked. He mentioned, with some pride, a large business house down town where he had held a humble position; and added that they had always been kind to him, but they did not know now where he was.

On the wings of that thought, I flew to the firm; and though it seemed almost a hopeless errand to look for anything called kindness in that rushing, busy establishment, I asked for the foreman, and told him about John very simply, just as the washerwoman had told me.

Instead of the usual, "We'd be very happy to help, of course; but we have so many calls, that really we are very sorry we can't," I was gladdened with a real sympathy, shown in face and manner. He called others; a man was excused from work to go and see the boy. The foreman gave liberally to start a purse among the boys, and most cordially thanked me for coming to them; and the man who had been commissioned to see the boy, added, "and God will bless you for your kindness."

They chose the right man—a man with a family and with a kind heart; for when he stood beside the boy's bed, the washerwoman told me he wept at the sight. He brought ten dollars for their immediate needs, and the promise of more; but, best of all, he told the dying boy that they all remembered and liked him down there—that they had held his place for him three months, hoping he would return, and were sorry to lose track of him; and if he had only let them know before, he should never have suffered so. Afterward he came several times, and brought generous gifts of money.

The next time I saw poor John his face was radiant. A changed soul looked out of his eyes.

"A lady came, too," he said, "out of the pasting department, and she was so kind. And that good man who came, said, every boy in the place, even the little boys who wrap up packages, and have such very small pay, gave something, and they sent kind words to me." How evident that, destitute as he was of all things, the kind words, the knowledge that he had been remembered lovingly, were more to him than money!

May the name of that business firm be written in the books of heaven for their generous, thoughtful care of one of God's little ones! It is not only the poor who help the poor, after all. Rich and poor had joined in this beautiful ministry. In this one little life the inhumanity and the humanity meet and touch; the contrast startles. All the business men of large cities are not too busy to be kind. That was one of the lessons I learned.

* Extracted from a delightful narrative, Rich Folk and Poor Folk, written by one of the lady workers in Mr. Moody's Bible Institute, Chicago. Copies of the story, beautifully got up in tinted leatherette covers, can be had of Messrs. Morgan and Scott, price 6d.

FIGHTING THE DRINK.

I think I was born with a passion for freedom. I was utterly self-reliant from my babyhood, with actual genius for persistence. I do not remember ever "giving up," so when I sat upon the narrow plank "bunk," by the courtesy, that ran along the cell side and heard the click of the padlock, the retreat of the turnkey, and the clang of the steel door at the "cage" entrance, and realised that I was in gaol—like a rat in a trap, I thought awful things which, even to recall, sicken me with fright. I could feel the grip of the official brute upon my throat still, aye, and for many a day the prints of his fingers were there, but he had told me nothing, and I could not pick up one thread of the event beyond the cell door. I think the awfulest thing a drunkard has to suffer is the blanks. Blessings on the poor drunk woman who was shut in the next cell; presently her cursings kept me from going mad that night.

I saw an eye at the wicket and knew that I was watched. I spoke; no answer. I pressed close and begged for just a word; there was no word. I stretched my arms through the meshes of the door, but touched nothing. Then sitting again I watched; there was an eye at every opening of the cross-bars, a solid wall of eyes. Again I sprang up and thrust my arm far through the grate and seized a hand of the poor wretch next to me, who was also feeling for something in the dark. She cursed me horribly and pulled away, but I'd have gladly held her hand the whole night through; it was so human and I was so alone, and the eyes ceased at a touch of a human thing. Many a time since then I have found the touch of a real hand an antidote for delirium.

When I betook myself to killing time by hating whomever 'twas had caused me to be there, and a suspicion seized me that my wife had done it—the hate scorched my brain to a mere shred—such fire love makes with the black resin of anger.

I heard my name as clear as a bell-stroke, and a quick hand at the lock—saw the door swing and my wife stood there and stretched her hands to me. I sprang up and caught—nothing but the oozy, reeking bars—hate blazed again till, looking down, I saw my father in his coffin as I'd seen him last, with something like a smile on his dead face; and, with a cry that appalled the whole jail to silence, threw myself upon—a cross-iron of the door—the only thing God could find there to use as a lancet, and found sleep, sanity and life by blood.

That night cured me of the drink, you think? Not at all. For five years after that I walked the earth, as free, you would have said, as Alexander, but yet, in fact, a chattel slave of the saloon; and all the time I fought like a wild beast entrapped, but wherever I went there was a prison. Till, one black January night, crazed by pain and terror, stretching my empty arms to my wife and children that seemed lost to me for ever, snap! went the mainspring of my hope, and with a cry I fell against the cross of Jesus Christ and—saved a second time by blood—was free.—Union Signal.

MISSIONARY TRAINING HOME AT MELBOURNE.—Dr. and Mrs. W. Warren have opened a Missionary Training Home at Kew, Melbourne, thus realising a desire which has for some time been cherished by many Australian Christians. The undertaking has the sympathy and interest of influential workers. In a circular letter, Mrs. Warren rejoices that through the kindness of friends, she was able to welcome, on May 6, the first two candidates (for the China Inland Mission), Miss A. Fuller, from Sydney, and Miss M. Davies, from Adelaide. "Our intention is to aid in preparing 'Sisters' for the mission field (foreign and home), conducting the institution on unsectarian lines. The preparation will consist of Bible study, early Church History, the History of Missions, and other necessary subjects. Instruction will also be given in ambulance work, first aid to the injured and the care of the sick, and use of simple remedies, also practical teaching in house duties and cooking. Gospel work will, of course, be an essential part of the training. It is hoped that the Home will be almost self-supporting. The Home will accommodate seven inmates." Further particulars may be had from Mrs. Warren, Leighton, High-street, Kew, Melbourne, Victoria.

HILLS.

BY REV. JOHN MITCHELL, EDINBURGH.

Hills make us look up. It is well they do so, for all that is necessary for our life here comes from above. An artist whose eyes have been much accustomed to look up, has painted some very beautiful pictures of sunset skies, which astonish many people who visit the Kensington Museum in London. They have never seen such gorgeous sunsets, and for the good reason, that they have not looked for them. We lose much by fixing our eyes upon the things beneath and seldom looking up. A king once asked a duke if he had seen an eclipse of the sun on the previous day. "No, sir," replied the nobleman, "I have so much business on earth that I have no time to look up." By looking up, the wise men of the East were led to the Saviour, who then lay an infant in Bethlehem's manger. By looking up, astronomers have discovered many untold glories in the heavens By looking up many a downcast heart has rejoiced to see the morning's sun rise, which seemed to speak to them of brighter days yet to come.

But there is another kind of looking up that is necessary to give joy and true satisfaction to the soul. The high hills, the lovely skies, and the glowing sunsets should lead us to look higher up still—even to the Lord who made the heavens and the earth. This looking consists of real faith in God and in his promises. It is the soul looking beyond itself and all that is earthly, to the Rock that is higher than we are. "Looking unto Jesus" is the secret of all true joy in the Christian life. Indeed, the first step of the Christian life is to look entirely to Jesus for salvation, and to continue looking to Him all our life afterwards. It is by looking to Him that our temptations are overcome, and that our trials seem light as a feather contrasted with the glory that is to follow. It is as we look up with the eye of faith that the beauty of the Saviour is reflected upon us, and we are made like Him.

But the hills have a few more lessons for us.

1. They give us a taste for what is beautiful. Some of the prettiest scenery in the world is amongst the hills. It is there we find "flowery glens and mossy dells, where happy birds in song agree." It is there we behold the delightful waterfalls and other beauties of nature. And yet we find many people who are ignorant of all the wonderful sights that are around them. We have read of a traveller who went to America to see the Falls of Niagara, and who, after a long, weary journey, was within a few miles of them, and enquired of a man if the rumbling noise he heard was that of the Falls. The man replied that perhaps it was, but he had never been there, although all his life he had lived so near them.

But it is not always that people have the time and the means for travelling, and so they are to be excused. There is, however, no excuse for people being ignorant of the beauties of the Kingdom of God. The Holy Spirit opens the eyes of all who come to Christ to see spiritual sights which gladden the heart and prepare the soul for heaven. The opportunities are given us, and it is to our advantage in every way to make the best of them.

Travellers tell us of beauty in other lands far surpassing anything we have ever seen here. And there is also a heavenly land which is so fair that its glory can never be told us, as we have no language to express it or mind to conceive it.

2. The hills are very valuable to us. Their lofty summits cause the moisture of the air to descend as rain or snow to refresh and make the earth fruitful. Then they give motion to the water, and thus keep it from growing stagnant or impure. Otherwise the water would have disease and death in it. Our souls, too, require heavenly rains to descend to refresh them, and to make them bear the fruits of the Spirit. We need the pure river of the water of life to flow through our souls to keep them in the love of God.

The hills are also useful in sending down, during floods, plenty of sand to renew the face of the earth. And from the hills we receive many good minerals that are helpful to us in various ways. Truly, God is kind in so bountifully supplying our wants.

3. Hills praise God. They are commanded to do so in Scripture. One way by which they praise God is by producing holy desires in the hearts of men. They often cause people to think of the greatness and the glory of God. And they daily witness to his power and wisdom.

We also are commanded to praise God, and we can do it consciously, which the hills are unable to do. We ought to praise God by the adoration of our hearts, the fruit of our lips, and the devotion of our lives.

The united Church of God is compared to a hill. All who have been washed in the precious blood of Christ and made pure are members of this Church. It does not matter what denomination we belong to if we are true Christians. Soldiers belong to different regiments, but are all serving the one Queen, and they make one great army. All who have enlisted under the banner of King Jesus belong to the great army of God. We are not saved by one Church, but by Christ. This hill is called the hill of God, and sometimes the hill of Zion. God dwells in the midst of it, and where He is there is peace and joy, holiness and love.

The Hill of Zion yields
A thousand sacred sweets,
Before we reach the heavenly fields,
Or walk the golden streets.

Then let us all seek the "sweets" that are within our reach, and are offered free to all.

God expects much praise from this hill. He wants his children to meet together and send up songs of praise to Him continually. We are to have our hearts tuned in unison with the ransomed in heaven and join with them in hallelujahs.

4 Lastly, let us notice that the hills and the love of God are contrasted. "The mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but My kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of My peace be removed," saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee." How blessed it is to know that when the hills shall have passed away there is something that shall abide! Yes; the love of Jesus shall remain, and we shall dwell in the enjoyment of his glorious presence. His love was manifested upon a hill, which of all hills should never be forgotten—the hill at Calvary.

There is a green hill far away,
Without a city wall,
Where the dear Lord was crucified,
Who died to save us all.

This hill speaks of the amazing love of God in giving up his only Son to die for us, and of the matchless love of Christ in bearing our sins in his own body on the tree.

Oh! 'twas love, 'twas wondrous love,
The love of God to me!
It brought my Saviour from above,
To die on Calvary.

THE CONVALESCENT HOSPITAL at Seaford has received, since its founding in 1860, more than sixteen thousand persons. The demand for admission to the hospital in the summer months became so great that often a large proportion of poor patients, whose instant admission is a question of a restoration to health or confirmed illness, were unable, owing to the congested state of the hospital, to obtain admission for a month, and sometimes longer. In view of this sad state of things the committee found it absolutely necessary to add at least thirty more beds to the institution, and for which a sum of over £6000 had to be found for building and sustentation. This Home has proved successful, even beyond the anticipation of the founders, in repairing the ravages of fevers and other serious maladies, and in assisting recovery after grave surgical operations and dangerous accidents. We regret to hear the hospital is very greatly pressed by want of funds. Communications should be made to Frank Maitland, Bank Chambers, 1, Long-acre, W.C.

AUSTRALIAN YOUNG WOMEN.

Eight years ago the Lord laid it on the hearts of a few Christian gentlemen to form a Y.W.C.A. in Melbourne, on the same basis as those in Great Britain and Ireland. Forty members were first enrolled, a committee of ladies formed, and rooms taken in the Protestant Hall, Exhibition-street. The rent was £100 a year and it being resolved not by any means to go into debt, the work began in rooms only partly furnished.

For a time the members had to sit upon the floors, or lean against the walls, but the Lord was in their midst. They vied with one another in bringing unconverted girls, and many souls were born again. At the end of the first year it was decided to remove to rooms in the Great Assembly Hall, Collins-street, where the meetings and classes were carried on without intermission until December, 1890. Then the Association occupied its present commodious buildings, which will, it is hoped, long serve as a beacon-light to young women arriving as strangers to the colony. The money needful to provide the Institute was subscribed by friends far and near. When £10,000 was in hand, a building known as the Indian Emporium, in Spring-street, was purchased at a cost of £6800, and after alterations and additions, involving an outlay of £3000, it was opened in December, 1890.

The work of the Association has since been more abundantly blessed. The hon. sec. has had the joy of hearing many testimonies to spiritual good being received; among others, the Misses Garland, before they left for China, Miss Maggie Davies, who also decided for the mission-field, and a young German girl, who, having been converted, could not rest until she returned to her native land to tell the good news among her unsaved friends.

The Travellers' Aid is an important department. The large steamers of the P. and O. and Orient Line are met by ladies, who take cards of invitation, giving the address of the Y.W.C.A. The value of this work can only be correctly estimated by those who know the evil done by Satan's emissaries, who are always on the outlook to catch unwary feet. In 1887, a small house at Jolimont was taken, where strangers from England, Ireland, and Scotland may be temporarily accommodated. During the year ending June, 1890, more than one hundred strangers passed through the Home.

The Sunday afternoon Bible-class, conducted by our hon. sec., Miss S. Booth, has greatly increased in numbers and interest during the present year. The bright little hall is now nearly filled. Between fifty and sixty girls stay to tea every Sunday, and the pleasant dining-room is a sight worth seeing as they gather round the table for tea. Afterwards a few of the more earnest girls meet to ask God's blessing on the work, and particularly on the Sunday night services.

Melbourne.

Lads' Rest, West Dulwich, S.E.

The sixth annual meeting was held on the 14th inst. at Oaklands, Alleyn Park, at the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Septimus Scott, who most kindly entertained a number of friends interested in the "Rest." Mr. C. E. Tritton, M.P., presided. After extracts from the report had been read by Mr. W. H. Dalton, the hon. director, Mr. Tritton expressed his hearty sympathy with the work, and his earnest desire to further its welfare. He dealt with the importance of the "holiday work," holding that the thorough change of food and air, together with the spiritual influence under which the boys were brought at the "Rest," must be productive of lasting good to the street-boys of East London, for whose benefit the home existed.

Rev. J. W. Morgan spoke of the importance of bringing these lads to Christ, and gave an address full of encouragement to those who have a desire to further the welfare of the young. Pastor W. Fuller Gooch spoke of his personal knowledge of the work being carried on at the "Rest," mentioning the excellent behaviour of the lads. He urged that the work needed only to be better known to be more liberally supported.

THE LORD'S DAY IN GERMANY.—The new law for Germany as to Sunday closing came into operation on July 3. A correspondent in Elberfeld writes: "It has made a wonderful difference here. Instead of crowds standing before the shop windows, and filling the principal streets during the afternoon and evening, it is like an English Sunday—all the shops being closed."

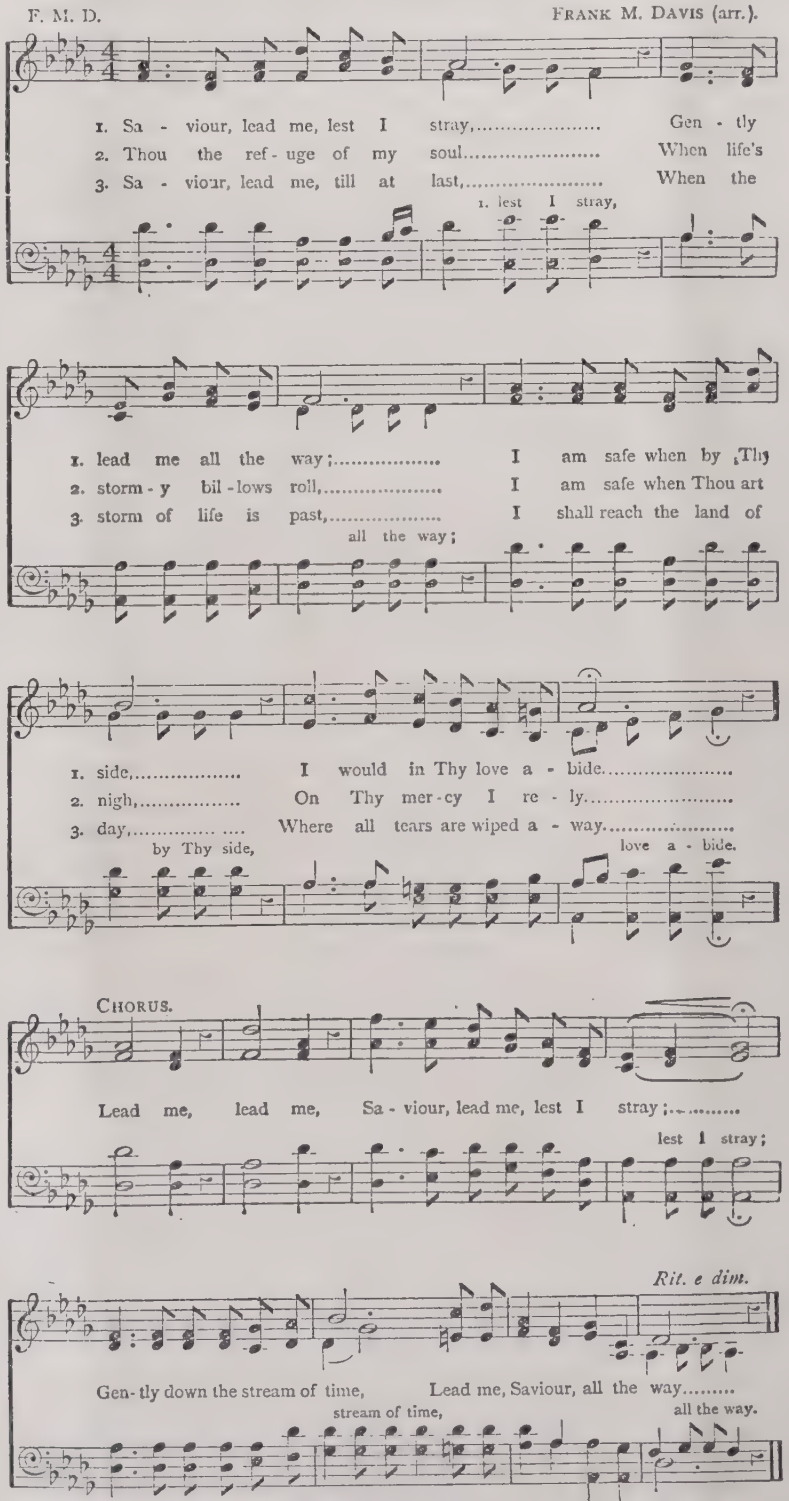
In Moody's Land.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER.

If ever a region was linked with the name of any one man, this region certainly belongs to Dwight L. Moody. He was born in that farm-house over in yonder village of Northfield fifty-five years ago; and up to the year 1880 this was a sequestered region, known to but few people outside of the Connecticut Valley. Northfield is now one of the well-known places on the map of Christendom. In 1880 Mr. Moody established his Seminary for Young Ladies, and I had the honour to deliver the baccalaureate to the first graduating class in 1884. That Seminary—with its fine "Marquand Hall" and other well-equipped buildings—is a lineal descendant of Mary Lyons's "Mount Holyoke." Glorious woman! She was the pioneer of Christian education in its highest sense for American girls. Yesterday, as our train rolled along the Connecticut River, and I caught a glimpse of the spires of South Hadley, I took off my hat in reverence to the memory of heroic and holy-hearted Mary Lyon. The Seminary which she founded fifty-five years ago has trained more missionaries than any single school of its age in our land.

Ten years ago Mr. Moody conceived the idea of founding the Mount Hermon School. The motto of the institution is, "How pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity; it is like the dew of Hermon." The institution was not intended for the idle sons of gentry, who are reared with a gold spoon in their dainty mouths; neither is it a "reform school" for the vicious lads who are elsewhere incorrigible. It is a place for energetic, unspoiled lads, of slender purses and high ambitions of usefulness. John Todd and Garfield and Abraham Lincoln would have been thankful for just such a school in the days of their rugged boyhood. The leading purpose of this institution is to furnish a practical education for earnest Christian young men, who desire to serve their Master and their fellow-men in some useful calling. No boy is admitted under sixteen years of age, and a sound bodily constitution is indispensable.

All the students are set at some manual labour every day, in order to form habits of industry, and great attention is paid to athletics and gymnastics. I observed that among the prizes bestowed to-day was an elegant vase (given by the students) to a young Mr. Brandon from Utah, who was the champion in all sorts of games. A very slender youth he was, too. Such thin, wiry fellows generally stand the wear and tear of after life the best. One of the professors devotes himself entirely to the study of the English Bible; it is the highest classic recognised here. The highest prize—in pecuniary value—that was bestowed to-day was given for proficiency in the Scriptures. Thank God for an institution in which American youths are taught that we have got a Bible. Every boy in the school has a daily lesson from the Word of God.



The commencement exercises were held in the fine brick "Recitation Hall," in whose dedication I was privileged to take part seven years ago. The hall was packed, and a fine breeze blowing from the surrounding meadows and clover fields cooled and perfumed the June atmosphere. As the students marched in—320 strong—I was impressed by their manly bearing. They were of a cosmopolitan character. Twenty-four States of the union were represented, and also Nova Scotia, Germany, Scotland, Ireland, and Asiatic Turkey, and there were two youths from icy Labrador! I was introduced to a young Joseph McNeill, the brother, of the famous London preacher. Two or three coloured lads were present, with two Japanese and five Chinamen. Professor Cutler, the Principal of the school, tells me that the "Japs" and the Chinese lads are bright scholars and very exemplary in their conduct. There was one chap from Norway, another from Copenhagen, another from the Orkney Islands, and another from Elizabethgrad in Russia. And all these from distant lands were gathered in a quiet Yankee hamlet on the banks of the Connecticut to a school founded by a man who had been an humble farmer boy in this region forty years ago! Verily we see strange things in these days, and I am not sure but that this Northfield man, Moody, is about the most unique and universally known American at this present time. Since Spurgeon's death he is the man who has preached the precious Gospel to more souls than any one on the round globe. His venerable mother nearly ninety years old, is still dwelling over in yonder homestead, with her brains as bright as a new dollar.

It was a great joy to address those wide-awake cosmopolitans to-day, and from some of those athletic fellows we shall hear something by-and-by. A great delight is it, too, to banquet my eyes—tired of city dust and turmoil—on these great rolling hills and verdant meadows through which yonder Connecticut wends its silvery way. In the distance are cool glimpses of the Green Mountains, and old Monadnock salutes me in the eastern horizon. The Almighty did a grand piece of work when He created Western Massachusetts. And He richly endowed it when He peopled it with such Puritans as Jonathan Edwards and Mark Hopkins and Mary Lyon and John Todd and Bryant and the Humphreys and Dwight L. Moody.

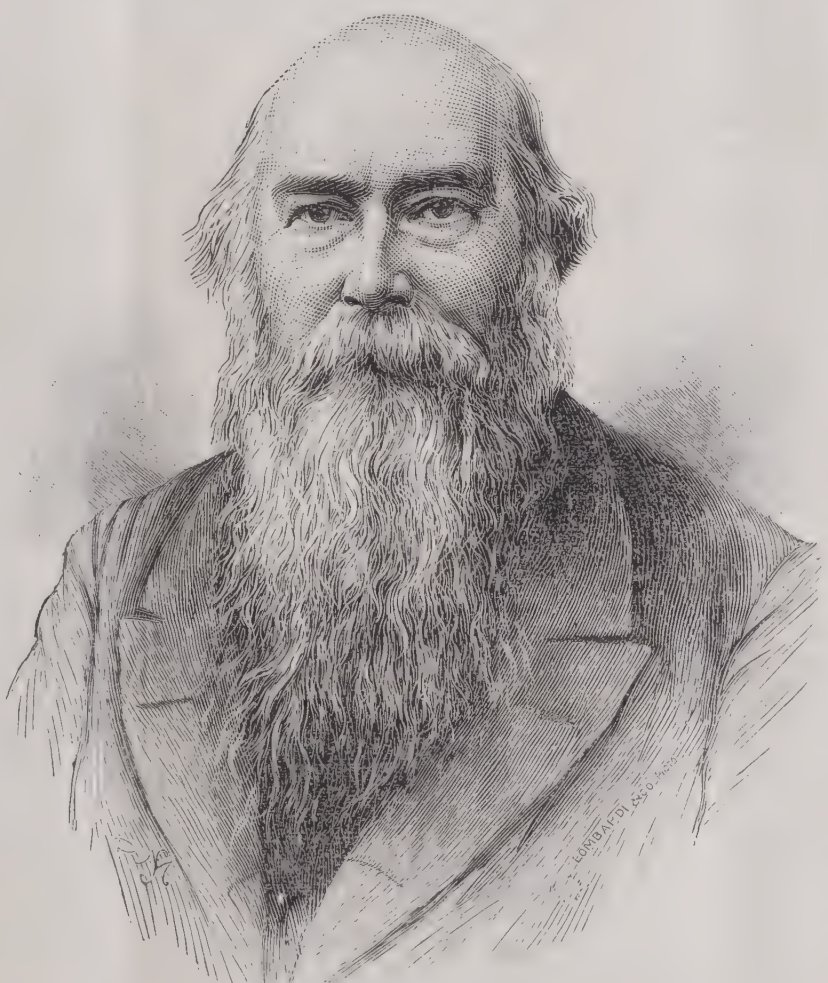
THE KARAITE JEWS, of Southern Russia, are a section of the Hebrew race who repudiate Talmudical tradition, and hold the Scriptures of the Old Testament to be the sole rule in religious life. They are consequently much different from the majority of the Jews of Russia, who are at once exclusive in social habit and formalist in religion. It is hardly astonishing, therefore, that the Russian Government should regard the Karaites as outside the Jewish pale. There are 1330 of them in Odessa, but they are not affected by the restrictive laws which hamper the general Hebrew population.

THE LATE

REV. JOHN HEWLETT, M.A.,

PRINCIPAL OF THE L.M.S. COLLEGE, BENARES.



BENARES, the sacred city of the Hindus, where most of Mr. Hewlett's missionary life was spent, in many respects can claim to be the chief mission station in India. Its Temples and Ghauts are famous beyond all others; in its monasteries are to be found the chief teachers and leaders of Hindu religious life and thought, and many of the principal native families have their huge mansions within its walls. It has well been called the chief stronghold of Hinduism, and Mr. Hewlett had many qualities which made him peculiarly suitable for the post. We believe he was the first Christian missionary who gained admission to some of those monasteries, and was allowed to give statements of Christian truth and carry on a friendly discussion with many of the acutest professors and defenders of the Hindu faith. This privileged position was the outcome of years of patient toil and life among all classes of the population—and the large number of native gentlemen to be seen in the crowd of mission workers, Government officials, and Christian converts, who followed his remains to their last resting-place, testified the esteem in which he was held by all sections of the population.

Mr. HEWLETT was born in 1836, of humble parentage. When about nine years of age, his family removed from Somersetshire to Briton Ferry, in Glamorganshire. He was, as a boy, bent on the acquisition of knowledge, and at an early age obtained an usher's position in a private school. The head master took a kindly interest in the eager youth and helped him in his studies.

His conversion occurred when he was sixteen years of age, and from that period must be dated his desire to become a missionary. By careful saving, he was able to secure, when twenty-one years of age, two sessions' study at the Glasgow University, where he made great progress both in classics and mathematics. He also matriculated at the London University, and was accepted by the London Missionary Society as a student. After two years of theological training under the late Rev. E. R. Conder, M.A., at Poole, he was appointed to labour in Benares. Having married Miss J. N. Edwards (of Poole), they sailed for India in August, 1861. Mr. Hewlett devoted himself to the Vernacular Department, while in May, 1862, Mrs. Hewlett received charge of the Female Schools from Mrs. Sherring.

In consequence of his wife's ill-health, he removed to Almora in March, 1863, and became colleague to Rev. R. C. Mather, M.A., LL.D. His industry and power to labour were a great joy to his veteran colleague. When at Almora he was impressed with the forlorn condition of the lepers in the asylum. He visited them; and, with his accustomed earnestness, taught these neglected ones that there was hope—even for them. Several conversions followed, and with what joy did he baptize his converts, and soon after he formed the first leper church in India! After two years further service at Benares Mrs. Hewlett died, and he returned with his family to England in 1869. While upon this furlough he took the B.A. degree at the London University, the privilege being given him of taking both the intermediate and final examinations in the same academic year.

In June, 1871, Mr. Hewlett removed to Mirzapur where, with other duties, he superintended the Mission Press. He married, in 1873, the widow of the Rev. R. Wilson, B.A. (of Hankow), who proved a valuable helpmeet, and died at Mirzapur in 1878. In 1881, Mr. Hewlett again visited England. He then took the M.A. degree with honours, and his health being restored, he was appointed to succeed Rev. M. Sherring, M.A., LL.B., in the superintendence of the Central School, Benares. Here he continued the excellent work of Mr. Sherring, until the institution developed into a college teaching up to the B.A. degree.

(From a Photograph by Messrs. Lombardi and Co., 13, Pall Mall East, S.W.)

In 1881 Mr. Hewlett married Miss Brett, a lady missionary in Benares, under the Indian Normal School Society. This gifted lady has been a valuable worker both in educational and Zenana work.

During a large part of the next seven years Mr. Hewlett had to perform his arduous duties amid the anxiety caused by the prolonged illness of his eldest son. Although in need of rest while visiting England in 1888-9, he did much deputation work. Indeed, his power of concentrated effort was so uniform that it is surprising he could continue it for so many years. When taking a holiday he never worked less than six hours a day, and the habit of persistent effort continued strong up to the last few days of his life.

The chief work of Mr. Hewlett was done at the Benares College, where his lovable disposition, his sympathetic and careful oversight of the students, as well as his willingness and ability to teach them many things beyond the ordinary curriculum, gave him great influence. Yet there was no lowering of the missionary into a schoolmaster. It was essentially a Christian college. Every day, in the presence of all the students and staff, he had prayers, exposition of Scripture, and usually an address upon some leading truth of Christianity. At all times and in everything his enthusiasm and moral earnestness in his efforts for the good of others were apparent. Many of the actions of his life, unthought of by him, had great effect upon the watchful students. One especial quality struck them—his unselfishness. Hindus live in the habitual conviction that greediness and love of money is the basis of an Englishman's actions. They do not exempt missionaries. Here was one, however, who ungrudgingly gave them his time for extra studies, and pursued them with the same earnestness without any fees! Here was one who was always ready to do a kind action and to give a helping hand.

He was a good vernacular preacher, and Hindus preferred to hear him rather than their most eloquent native preachers. He was well acquainted with modern theology, but held firmly to evangelical teaching. Most gladly would he have given more time to preaching—that is, in addition to the usual services in the church, he would fain have visited the bazaars and roamed among the villages. One of his most recent desires was to enlarge and carry on, in a wider circuit, the evangelisation of the agricultural districts, with the town of Dudhi as a centre. But the needs of the established work, both at Mirzapur and Benares, put educational duties upon him. For these, his wide classical and mathematical acquirements, and his knowledge of ancient and modern literature, qualified him, as well as his powers of teaching and his intuitive knowledge of the needs and ways of thinking peculiar to native students. In this work he was justly distinguished. He rendered valuable assistance in establishing the University of Allahabad, being the only missionary upon its senate; and he kept his vocation in view there with great faithfulness.

Mr. Hewlett did not write anything in English beyond articles in missionary magazines, but in Urdu and Hindi he worked well. There are translations in Urdu from the originals of the "Confessions of Augustine," and of á Kempis' "Imitation of Christ"; and in Hindi there is a translation of the "Imitation." These are monuments of careful work, full of force and idiomatic expression. He was recently engaged upon a new Hindi version of the New Testament, circumstances having left it principally in his hands. His removal leaves a great breach in the slender forces of the London Missionary Society in North India, where his brethren will miss his loving counsel and vigorous help. His most earnest wish has been graciously allowed by the Master, that he should die in active service. A brief illness suddenly terminated one of the most loving and useful lives ever spent on the mission-field.

A NEW LIFE OF MR. SPURGEON.

A new and exceedingly interesting memoir of Mr. Spurgeon, written by his intimate friend, Rev. James Douglas, of Brixton, is in the press, and will shortly be published by Messrs. Morgan and Scott under the title of The Prince of Preachers. In this and succeeding issues we purpose to give brief extracts from some of the chapters:—

CHILDHOOD'S DAYS.

Most striking of all the events connected with his early days is what transpired in the course of a visit paid by Mr. Knill to the house of the grandfather at Stambourne. The custom was for the child Charles to read the Scriptures at family worship. It was so on this visit. Mr. Knill, who had come in readiness to preach for the London Missionary Society on the following Sabbath, noted the little fellow; commended his reading; and, by a little judicious praise, won his confidence. Enlisting his services as guide, the veteran missionary rambled through the garden; and the acquaintance thus begun deepened in interest. The soul-winner was too well instructed to seek, even with a child, to have all the say. He sought to draw out his little protégé; to awaken and direct his thoughts to the grandest of all themes: "Jesus, and the pleasantness of loving Him;" nor was prayer forgotten. In the garden was a large yew arbour, of sugar-loaf shape; and here, with his arms encircling the lad, this devoted ambassador of Christ poured forth fervent cries to God in his behalf.

These walks and talks together, mingled with earnest pleading, were repeated many times during Mr. Knill's brief stay of a few days at Stambourne; but the circumstance most impressive of all in connection with this visit was the remarkable prophecy which Mr. Knill uttered as he was about to leave the dwelling. With the child Charles on his knee, and the whole household assembled, Mr. Knill observed: 'I know not how it is, but I feel a solemn presentiment that this child will preach the Gospel to thousands, and that God will bless him to many souls;' adding, that he was so sure of the prophecy made, that he would like the lad to give him a promise that when in due course he preached in Rowland Hill's Chapel, he would give out the hymn beginning:

> God moves in a mysterious way
> His wonders to perform.

This promise, which was readily given, was, in after years, kept, when the prophetic announcement concerning the child was fulfilled.

As Mr. Spurgeon was a strong believer both in the Divine election unto eternal life, and in the Divine call to the ministry, we cannot wonder at the importance this incident of childhood's days assumed in his mind; nor is it surprising, considering the future in store for this lad, that the earnest solicitude of the missionary should have been sealed by an assured prophetic conviction as to his place and service in the kingdom of God. 'The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him'; and still, as in olden time, the Lord, uncovering the ear of those in close league with Him, whispers the things that are to come.

MR. ALEXANDER GRANT, of Tottenham, who took part in one of the afternoon meetings at the Mildmay Conference, writes that, with many others, he has given up the title of "Reverend."

A GOOD WORK IN CAMP.—Many readers of The Christian kindly responded to an appeal to send tracts, &c., for the South Wales Borderers encamped at Brecon. These papers were distributed with the happiest results. The men had a good example set them by Colonel W. Jones-Thomas, their commanding officer, who is an abstainer and an ardent advocate of temperance. They also had a coffee canteen and reading-room. The men seemed much interested in the religious and temperance literature given them.

MISSIONS IN MANCHURIA.

In The Scotsman of July 6, there is a long and interesting letter by Mr. Duncan M'Laren, giving his impressions of Manchuria as derived from a recent visit. We give the greater portion of his remarks on the question of missionary progress:—

Christian Missions are having wonderful success in Manchuria, the inhabitants being more willing to listen to a new doctrine than in most parts of China. The first Protestant missionary who visited the province was the well-known Rev. William C. Burns, who had lived in South China for over twenty years, and came to Newchwang in 1868, where, after a few months, he died. The following year an Irish medical missionary came to the port, but his period of work was brief. In 1872 Rev. John Ross, of the United Presbyterian Church, came across from Shangtung, and, with the approval of the Mission Board, resolved to settle in Manchuria. He was soon followed by other missionaries from the same Church and from the Presbyterian Church of Ireland. Three years later Mr. Ross proceeded inland to Mookden, where at first he resided in a native inn, and afterwards in hired houses, none of which he was allowed to occupy long. Other missionaries, medical and evangelistic, from Scotland and Ireland followed, settling in Mookden, Liaoyang, Haicheng, and Jinjow. After a time land was freely sold, on which houses, hospitals, and churches have been erected, while in the busier streets houses have been rented, which are turned into preaching chapels, being open every afternoon and evening, where Presbyterian missionaries or native evangelists proclaim the Gospel to passers-by, who frequently enter in large numbers. Thirteen evangelistic, medical, and Zenana missionaries of the United Presbyterian, and five of the Irish Presbyterian Church are now settled in Manchuria; all of the former are living in the interior, the United Presbyterian being exclusively an inland mission, and of the latter only one resides at the port.

There is, so far as I know, no mission in China which has gained so many converts during its earlier years as the United Presbyterian Mission in Manchuria. It is only seventeen years since the first missionary entered Mookden, and the number of members on the roll, including Tieling, Kaiyuen, Maimaigai, and other places worked from that centre, is above eleven hundred. In other cities there are over 450 members. The Irish Presbyterian membership is nearly five hundred. Thus the total number of converts gathered into the Presbyterian Church of Manchuria within twenty years is upwards of two thousand. To this have to be added those who have been baptized, but who have since died or have left the province. The Scottish and Irish missions work together. Last year a united presbytery was formed, the aim of the missionaries and the Boards being to build up a strong united native church, who shall know nothing of the differences which separate the various sections of the Church at home.

One most encouraging feature is the willingness of converts to tell the "doctrine" to others. When a man is convinced of the truth of the Gospel, he does not keep the good news to himself, but makes it known to his neighbours. By far the greater number of the converts have heard the truth before ever seeing a foreign missionary, and so the tidings spread. A man from a distance, being at Mookden or other city on a visit, hears the "doctrine," seeks to hear more, and carries the new faith to his home in some far-off valley, where, when some months later a missionary makes an evangelising tour, he finds a people prepared to receive him, and anxious to listen to his message. Two of the Irish missionaries have moved to the central province, and reside at Kwan-cheng-tzu. They hope before long to establish themselves in Kirin, the chief city. In the north of the same province, two of our younger men are doing pioneer work in the neighbourhood of the Sungari, the principal affluent of the Amur, or rather it should be said the Amur is the affluent, as the Sungari is the large river.

At a missionary meeting in Newchwang, Mr. Daniel Robertson delivered a most graphic and interesting address, describing the conditions of life in that far-off region. Robbers and brigands abound. Some four hundred were last year executed in Kirin, although there is no guarantee that those who were punished were the guilty men. Foreigners, however, have no cause to fear violence. Things have greatly improved during late years. Thirty years ago no one went unarmed in any of these provinces, as murders took place daily. One band of ruffians, calling themselves "Sword-racks," levied a tax on all goods going up country, and if the owner resisted, he was cut to pieces, as a warning to other men. chants. Now, however, crime is rare and brigandage unknown, except on the Russian frontier.

The attitude of the people towards Christianity may be described on the whole as friendly. Many of the official class also manifest friendship. When in Mookden I called with one of our missionaries on the Mandarin Shing, the Governor of the Province, and on General Tso, of the Chinese army, who had charge of putting down the recent riots in Mongolia. They received us most courteously, and a day or two later both returned the call, each accompanied by a large retinue, who filled the terrace on which the mission houses stand. When at Liaoyang, I was asked to open the new hospital which had just been erected. A large assemblage attended the ceremony, including three Chinese and three Manchu Mandarins.

A widespread feeling of toleration exists; so long as a man conforms to local customs, he is free to worship as he likes. While the early converts were reviled and persecuted to some extent, those who join the Church now have little to suffer. Missionaries are at liberty to travel where they choose, without fear of molestation. The shameful attack on Dr. Greig last year was an isolated case, actuated by personal motives, the leader of the band believing that he had made away with his child. No other resident in Manchuria felt any uneasiness as to personal safety, and could not understand the anxiety felt by friends at home. Personally, I should not hesitate to travel in any part of Manchuria, if accompanied by a missionary, the life and property of a foreigner being as secure as in Scotland, and much more secure than in some parts of Ireland. There is perhaps no land which presents greater opportunities for Christian work to men and women of the right stamp who are not deterred by difficulties, who are willing to learn, and who are resolved to consecrate their whole lives to the work which is given them to do.

MEDICAL MISSION IN BENGAL.

It may interest your readers to hear a little about our medical mission in Sereebnaghar, about sixty miles from Calcutta. We have two dispensaries in charge of a young Bengali lad who has been trained at our mission hospital at Amritzar, an earnest missionary who not only heals the bodies, but seeks to lead our Bengali sisters to the Healer of souls. There have been two Bengali women led to Christ through coming to our dispensaries, where they heard of the Saviour, and have forsaken all to come to Him.

Not only does our medical worker attend at the dispensaries, but she also goes to the homes of the women when called. The work has grown; God is blessing it. Medicines and instruments are required to carry on the work efficiently, and this means money.

While in England on furlough, I am trying to get some medicines to send out. Thirty pounds is required for a supply. Will any of the Lord's people help us to enable this work to go on, and thus relieve the dear missionary in charge as her medical worker? (Miss) C. Harding.

The Grindelwald Conference.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

July 11.

AMONG the most searching and profitable addresses in connection with this Conference must be mentioned that of Rev. W. HAY AITKEN on Sunday afternoon, July 10, in the Zwinglian Church. The mountains with which we were surrounded suggested his theme. From the fact that they were so many and so various, and yet were a chain of hills bound together and forming one substantial unity, he drew the lesson that God is not going to work out this desire for unity by casting us all in the same mould. Uniformity is not the unity God makes. The union for which we look is one of spirit, of heart, of charity, of power, of work, of sympathy.

A still more valuable lesson was suggested by the pure snow which covered the high peaks, which received and reflected the light of the sun. So are we not only to behold, but to "reflect as in a mirror the glory of the Lord" (2 Cor. iii. 18). We have caught the light, not that we may enjoy it, but that we may reflect it upon this dark world. If the darkness of sin and infidelity is to be dispersed, it must be by every believer catching and reflecting the light.

But what if we be "found false witnesses of God"? What if men, seeing our inconsistency of life, our bickerings and quarrellings among ourselves, our rancorous bitterness in controversy, are stumbled by us? Edward Armitage's picture of Julian the Apostate looking contemptuously upon the ecclesiastics wrangling fiercely, and with every mark of passion upon their faces, was too true a picture of the attitude of the world towards the controversies of Christians.

Yet we may be as the beacon-light amidst the storm, warning of the presence of danger, and pointing out the harbour of refuge. But we can only reflect while there is nothing between Him and us. Clouds intervening between the mountains and the sun hinder the reflection of the sun's glory. What do we lose by a foul conscience, a sullied purity? Not our joy and our growth alone, but our testimony. When Moody was leaving for America he said to Mr. Aitken, "Whenever you think of me, pray for me. If I were to slip how would the enemy triumph! I would rather die than lose my testimony." Let our testimony be more to us than our life. God can enable us to say, "I shine in the light of God." Trust Him to clear our skies, to blaze upon us in all his glory.

The sermon of Dr. GLOVER in the evening was upon John iii. 16, which he described as containing a summary of the Christian creed in the words of Christ. Christian union must rest upon Christian creed. To give up the Gospel is to lose the whole of truth. The most cultivated Englishman is as dark as any heathen if he abandons the light of Christ.

The creed contained in the text gives us light concerning God, concerning Christ, and concerning man. The personality of God is assumed. God loves—loves the world; not the race as a whole, but each individual man, even the guiltiest. He loves in the deep sense in which Christ understood love—a sense which involved self-sacrifice. Christ, as the only begotten Son of God, is given to men, strong to save, able to give eternal life. God could do no more than that. If He were less than God He could not do it. His enemies never gave Him a small name. Man is declared to be loved by God, needing a Saviour, responsible, capable of faith, and to have salvation within his reach. The various parts of this creed were emphasized with singular tenderness and power.

NATIONAL CHRISTIANITY.

July 12.

The important week of the Conference has now commenced. Notwithstanding wet weather, there was a large attendance at the Zwinglian Church on Tuesday, July 12, to hear Rev. H. PRICE HUGHES on "National Christianity." The address and the discussion that followed were alike interesting and profitable in character.

One of Mr. Hughes's contentions was that an Established Church was not necessary to national righteousness. In the controversy upon disestablishment, neither side understood exactly the position of the other. At a remarkable convention held in Dr. Parker's City Temple some years ago, Canon Curtis expressed the conviction that the aim of the Liberation Society was to rob the Church of England of their buildings and to destroy their corporate unity. This was a mistake. On the other hand, Nonconformists sometimes affirmed that Churchmen were zealous for the Establishment because they wanted to retain the emoluments. This also was a mistake. Churchmen were actuated by a much higher motive—that of retaining a national recognition of God. What Mr. Hughes insisted on was that this national recognition of God was as important to the Free Churchman as to the Episcopalian. He believed that Nonconformists never made a greater mistake than when they accepted a secular platform on the subject of National Education at the suggestion of the Birmingham School. He rejoiced that they had now learned their error, and that that platform was abandoned. That it was the duty of the State as well as of the individual to be Christian, they fully believed. But Constantine's method had proved a failure. It made the Church worldly without making the world Christian. "He that doeth righteousness is righteous" was as true of the State as of the individual.

That State may be called Christian in which every law is favourable to virtue and unfavourable to vice. What is its attitude towards intemperance, gambling, ignorance, physical vice, pauperism, war? No State is Christian that does not discourage these.

The foreign policy of such a State will be one of peace. Mazzini said that it was the duty of good men to capture the Foreign Office. How could the nations of Europe be called Christian, when six millions of men were kept ready for war? To call England Christian, in spite of its Opium Traffic, is to make the very word Christian odious. Genuine national righteousness does not require the establishment of any particular Church, but the united efforts of all. The political privilege of one Church often prevents union and co-operation with others.

In the discussion which followed, Rev. W. HAY AITKEN expressed regret that in Ireland, where the Church had been disestablished, there was the same unwillingness on the part of Churchmen to co-operate with Nonconformists. Though a Churchman, he would be slow to defend the principle of establishment. If, for the first time, the establishment of religion were proposed, he would vote against. But they had to deal with the fact that there had been for centuries an Established Church in this country. If the Liberationist aimed only at the work of liberation he would join the Society. Could not disestablishment be contemplated without disendowment?

Mr. JOSEPH RADLEIGH (Society of Friends) stated that in Belfast there was a manifest coming together of Churchmen and Nonconformists in the Holiness Conventions. He gave many testimonies from Churchmen themselves concerning the great progress in every direction which had been made by the Church since its disestablishment. Canon FREMANTLE agreed with the description Mr. Hughes had given of a Christian State, but added two other matters requiring the attention of such a State—(1) the relation of classes one to another in the community, with a view to adjusting differences and preventing strikes and lock-outs; and (2) the care of the poor. The Old Testament ideal of a State was one in which the king, as a righteous ruler, paid special regard to the poor. That was the model of a Christian State.

Dr. MACKENNAL, replying to Mr. Aitken's question concerning disestablishment and disendowment, said that the question was not one between Churchmen and Nonconformists, but rather one for statesmen to settle. Years ago Edward Miall had said that the course of the Liberationists would be easier if they could deal with disestablishment alone; but no statesman would listen to the proposal, regarding, as he would, the endowments as national property.

Rev. A. R. BUCKLAND, editor of The Record, pleaded for dealing with the individual. It was not their organisations, but the men that worked them, that caused the difficulty.

In his reply, Mr. HUGHES regretted that the subject of the Establishment had occupied so great a part of the discussion. He had not aimed to raise that question at all, but simply to correct the idea that an Established Church was the best method of securing national recognition of God. Referring to the subject of pauperism, Mr. Hughes denounced the condition of things that had millionaires at one end and a million of paupers at the other. This state of things was tending to the growth of revolutionary Socialism. A man who had been reclaimed through the work of one of Mr. Hughes's lay agents, often described himself as having formerly declared that his doctrine was "Down with everything that's up." Now a change had taken place, and his doctrine was "Up with everything that's down." There are thousands of men in London who are aiming by every means to "put down everything that's up." We were walking upon a volcano, and the fires of social revolution might at any time break forth. To prevent this a united effort on behalf of national righteousness was necessary.

ECCLESIASTICAL BARRIERS TO UNION.

July 13.

According to the original plan the All-day Conference was to be held on Tuesday, but to meet the wishes of many who were anxious to remain later in England, it was deferred until Wednesday, when three meetings were held. It had been announced that the subject should be in the morning, "Ecclesiastical Barriers to Union"; the afternoon, "Theological Barriers"; and evening, "Reunion from a Social Standpoint." Wisely or unwisely, this division of the subject was not observed. The theme introduced in the morning was continued in the two succeeding sessions.

That the discussion has been full of interest may be concluded confidently from the names of those who have taken part in it. The three chairmen for the day have been Revs. W. Hay Aitken, Dr. Mackennal, and Hugh Price Hughes; and among the speakers have been Dr. Glover, Mr. R. F. Horton, Canon Fremantle, Rev. Herbert Stead, and Mr. Percy Bunting.

Very properly the speaking has been representative of almost every section of the Church, including the Society of Friends and the Moravians. On the side of the Church of England there have been the three schools—High, Low, and Broad. And it is gratifying to have to record that, while some very plain, straight things have been said, the kindliest feeling has pervaded the entire discussion.

The sentiments uttered have been very diverse. Dr. MACKENNAL emphasized the true spiritual unity already existing, and pleaded for a fuller recognition of that. Mr. HORTON aimed at what Mr. Price Hughes called "the glorification of the status quo." He seemed able to recognise only the advantage of dissent, and had no eye for discerning the terrible evils of disunion. The divisions of the Church were, in his judgment, better than any corporate and manifest unity, of which he found an uninviting example in the Church of the Middle Ages. He might have gone back to an earlier exhibition of unity, which existed before men attempted to call themselves by the name of Paul, and Apollos, and Cephas. He would surely have found no reason for objecting to that.

Mr. AITKEN took a different line. As a Churchman he sought to emphasize the proposals of the Lambeth Conference, and to show how liberal and generous was the spirit of those proposals. The Episcopate did not represent to him, though it did to some of his brethren, Apostolical Succession. Why should not Nonconformist ministers, in future appointments to office, accept Episcopal laying on of hands as an addition to their present ordination service? And why not accept a modified form of confirmation in receiving members into the Church? Mr. Aitken was evidently actuated by intense earnestness of desire to secure reunion; but his suggestions appeared to us to be such as High Churchmen would reject, because they gave away everything but the form of what was very real to them; while not a few Nonconformists would refuse them because the forms were suggestive of what they regard as serious errors.

It is not surprising, therefore, that Dr. MACKENNAL and Dr. GLOVER should both, gently but firmly, decline to accept such terms. After reading some of the words used by the Bishop in the ordination service, Dr. Glover declared that no Nonconformist minister could consent to an ordination in which such words were used. But he advanced what he conceived to be a Scriptural ground for reunion in the two ordinances of Baptism and the Lord's Supper. The first confessed pollution, desire for cleansing, faith in the work of Christ, and acceptance of the doctrine of the Trinity. In the second there was an expression of faith in the atonement of Christ. All who could honestly accept these two ordinances were in the true Church, and our Church organisation must recognise them.

Mr. HUGH PRICE HUGHES showed greater disposition to accept Mr. Aitken's suggestions.

Probably he was correct in saying that if the same spirit had been shown two hundred years ago Dissent would never have attained its present gigantic proportions. For Nonconformists to accept the Lambeth proposals, would make the Evangelicals in the Church of England to be a large majority. His last sentence was, perhaps, more calculated to lead to the issue than the too hurried adoption of any scheme. "In Christ we are one now; let us abide in Him until we become ecclesiastically one." True unity must be a development from the life within, and cannot be forced.

The speech of Canon Fremantle showed great catholicity of spirit. The Church, in his judgment, was not a mere assembly for public worship, nor were the ministers appointed to lead in the worship its only ministers. But there was an element of danger in the very wide view he took of the Church. He would seem to imply that every company of persons gathered together for the good of their fellows might claim to be "gathered in the name of Christ and to have Him in the midst." We do not believe that the New Testament teaches this. The unconverted world will accept a Christless philanthropy as well as a Christless morality. The Gospel goes deeper, and makes a demand to which the proud heart of man finds it difficult to submit. There is need for caution, lest in these efforts to promote union we should surrender any part of that faith once for all delivered to the saints. We are stewards, and cannot give away the smallest part of the truth committed to our trust.

Mr. Price Hughes instanced several cases in which sections previously divided have become one—notably the Primitive Methodists and the Wesleyans in Ireland; the six forms of Methodism in Canada, and the two sections of Baptists in England. We are not sure that such methods are the best. They appear to us to strengthen rather than to weaken the denominational spirit. But for the purpose of aggressive Christian work the example of the Nonconformists of Bradford, to which Mr. Price Hughes also referred, could surely be followed in other places, and the Church of England clergyman could be associated with his Nonconformist brethren for such a work. This would be possible now without the sacrifice of any principle on either side.

A BISHOP'S COUNSEL.

At the afternoon session a letter was read from the Bishop of Ripon, who was unable to attend. Here are some sentences: To meet for controversy would be, I believe, worse than valueless; to meet for mutual interchange of thought, animated by the wish to understand one another's position, while praying earnestly for the guidance of the Holy Spirit of wisdom, can only end in good. This good may not be the good which any of us expected or desired; for God's ways are not our ways, nor our thoughts his thoughts. The end may not be—it would not be well that it should be—the wholesale surrender of views in one direction or another. But more to be desired than any approach to identity of opinion, or any hollow profession of spurious agreement, is the bettering of the spirit in which we hold our views. Deepened sympathy and loftier elevation of aim may be given to those who yet agree to differ.

It may be an open question indeed whether federation of variety is not more advantageous than pale, perhaps insincere, uniformity of thought. But however that may be, conference gives men the opportunity of understanding one another's language. Too many of us are creatures of phrases. Conference teaches us to translate them, and the terrible and repellent phrase not seldom becomes innocuous, and even welcome, when it is translated into the speech of the people And it is no small gain to understand what is not meant by a phrase, and to be able "to read out" of the language we have misunderstood the ideas which were never intended by those who used the phrases. The removal of misapprehensions such as these is like the lifting of the white mists which gather round the mountains and valley, and obscure the beauty of the landscape. The thing to be sought above all, as it seems to me, is the power to follow Christ in the Spirit of Christ. Prophecies, tongues, gifts—how transient they all are! But the Spirit of Christ, which is love, outlasts the strong mountains and the noisy strife of tongues.

A correspondent of The Echo says:—"To work together for a month or two among the poor of Whitechapel would bring the members of the 'Grindelwald' closer to one another than a month's picnicing in Switzerland."

MR. MOODY IN DARLINGTON.

Darlington life was stirred last Sabbath as it has not been for years. Mr. Moody, whose visit with Mr. Sankey nearly twenty years ago is still a well-remembered event in the religious life of Darlington, began a three days' campaign by holding a series of crowded and earnest meetings distinguished by deep, serious feeling. Mr. Moody appears in answer to an invitation from the Young Men's Christian Association. Mr. Burke, who is accompanying Mr. Moody, sang several solos at each meeting, and his fine voice was greatly appreciated. The first meeting was held in the morning in the Central Hall at 9 a.m., and was specially for Christian workers. There was a large attendance of those specially interested in religious work, and the pithy address by Mr. Moody was very much appreciated.

In the afternoon an open-air meeting was held in the Darlington Cricket Field. It was to our mind one of the largest—perhaps the largest meeting ever held in Darlington. The thousands present listened with keen attention to the fluent, homely, practical, and wisely-witty discourse delivered by Mr. Moody. Incidentally he gave vent to a cool and quiet, but striking and forcible, denunciation of the drink traffic, which, he contended, furnished an awful harvest of sin and misery to those concerned in it; he not only exhorted the publicans to give up what he termed the unholy traffic, but urged men, whether of professed Christian belief or not, to renounce all pecuniary interest in public-houses.

In the evening, for the benefit of those who were not in the habit of attending places of worship, a meeting was held in the Theatre Royal, when every part of the building was crowded to excess. Mr. Moody delivered a telling discourse. A meeting was arranged for eight o'clock in the Central Hall. The building, though overcrowded, was found to be totally insufficient for the numbers desirous of hearing the preacher. It was then arranged to hold an over-flow meeting in the Mechanics' Hall. The two halls, however, proved unable to accommodate the multitude, and consequently Mr. Moody decided that the gathering should take place in the open-air. He addressed from the Market steps near the Town Hall an enormous crowd, who attentively listened for nearly an hour. Later, Mr. Moody addressed another meeting in the Central Hall.—Northern Echo.

Costers' Donkeys and Ponies.

One of those triennial shows which have done so much to develop a kindly feeling among costermongers for their four-footed friends was held last Monday afternoon, under the superintendence of Mr. W. J. Orsman and Mr. H. E. Boulton, at the People's Palace, Mile-end-road. More than two hundred animals were exhibited. The grounds were crowded with spectators. Twice there was a "march past." Most of the donkeys and ponies looked as though they were uniformly well treated, and many of them were adorned with home-made embroidered cloths.

At the close of the day in the Queen's Hall, which was filled to overflowing, the prizes awarded by the judges were distributed by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, who was most enthusiastically received. The Marquis of Lorne, who presided, stated that he had never seen so fine a collection of ponies and donkeys. Mr. H. M. Stanley gave some lively incidents of his experience with donkeys in Africa. One of them named Miranda could bray with vim and alacrity at the word of command, and so enabled him to go through thousands of miles of hostile country without firing a shot. Other gentlemen delivered addresses. Perhaps the most gratifying statement was that of Mr. J. Colam, who showed that within the decade 1881 and 1891 convictions of costers for the maltreatment of their animals had decreased thirty per cent.

BRITISH HOME FOR INCURABLES.—H.R.H. the Princess Christian laid on Saturday the foundation-stone of the new Home being erected for the British Home for Incurables in Crown-lane, adjoining Streatham-common. After an inspection of the grounds and building by the Royal party, a short service was conducted by the Bishop of Southwark and the chaplain. Several addresses having been read, the Princess received a silver trowel from Mr. Arthur Causton, the architect, and laid the stone. After a collection had been made, Master Gofton Salmond presented £1000, the gift of "two sisters," for the purpose of founding a bed in the Home to be called "Rest for the Weary." Before leaving the ground the Royal party spoke to a few of the patients, who were able to be present, and planted some trees to commemorate the occasion.

RABBI LICHTENSTEIN'S WORK.

All friends of Israel, and especially those who have contributed towards the free distribution of Rabbi Lichtenstein's masterly work, "Judaism and Christianity," will be interested to know that large parcels of these booklets have been sent to, and most gratefully received by, missionaries in various parts of the Continent—Hungary, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, and France. I should be very glad to forward copies to any worker among the Jews who may wish for them.

This booklet contains a description of the Rabbi's conversion, proves the oneness of the Old and New Testaments, and shows the Divine glory of Jesus the Messiah. One of the main objects of the pamphlet is to show the beauty and perfection of the New Testament, in order to induce the Jewish reader to search this portion of the Divine Word, and thus be led, like the Rabbi himself, to Christ.

The Rabbi offered me, a few days ago, another MS. for publication. All who know the Rabbi's writings are convinced that there are no Jewish mission tracts to be compared with them. His being an old, well-known Rabbi still in office gives the writings peculiar weight. Lovers of God's ancient people are therefore earnestly solicited to help in this important and blessed work, to enable us to distribute still more widely his writings, and to publish his newest work. The Hon. Treasurer is Mr. Richard Cory, J.P., Oscar House, Cardiff.

"ONLY A TELEGRAM."

Splendid night; all well, behaving nicely; much love. Praise the Lord.

This message has just been flashed from Moville to the Home of Industry. "All well," telling us of another (the sixty-fourth) party of sixty children, rescued, trained, outfitted, and now on the waters for our fair Dominion, where our kind fellow-labourers are ready to receive them, see them carefully placed out in life, and watch over them until manhood and womanhood be reached.

"Behaving nicely" tells of the loving obedience learned in our Home life at Hackney by these uncared-for children, now showing their gratitude by their ways, amid all the upsetting of a ship.

"Much love" tells of the precious bond uniting us all in this blessed work these long years, during which the total sent out to and cared for in Canada has been over ten thousand children and young people.

"Praise the Lord" is our continual song for permitting us to pioneer into Canada in 1870, and now to have young relatives more equal for the strain to go forth in full charge.

We ask the prayers of the Lord's people for a fresh and continuous shower of spiritual blessing to rest upon the work here and in Canada.

Would all join us in thanksgiving for mercies received? Not one thing needful was wanting: health and strength given to each, means of supply sent just day by day, filling our mouths with an ever "Praise the Lord."

We take this opportunity of thanking all our kind donors who have contributed to the work through The Christian, or by sending direct to us throughout the past year.—Yours gratefully,

Annie Macpherson.

DARE TO BE FAITHFUL.

Man-pleasing is both endless and needless; if thou wouldst thou couldst not please all; and if thou couldst, there is no need, if thou pleasest Him who can turn all hearts and bind all hands. They speed best that dare to be faithful. Jonah was afraid of his work, and ran away to avoid it, but how nearly did he lose his life in attempting to save it! Jeremiah seemed the only man likely to lose his life by his bold preaching; yet he had fairer quarter at last than the smooth preachers of his time.—Gurnall.

SPIRITUAL POWER IN PREACHING.

If a man would have spiritual power with men, and prevail, he must be real with his Lord. What he says he must first know, he must first live. As regards HIM who is at once his Master and his Gospel, he must indeed "know whom he has believed," and, in calm but entire simplicity, "submit himself under his hands." Granted a true creed and a humble faith in its Subject, he must in quiet reality "yield himself unto God," if he would be used by Him.—Rev. H. C. G. Moule.

THE SCRIPTURE GIFT MISSION.

That "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God"—that the Scriptures are able to make wise unto salvation," is an elementary fact in the Christian life; and the most pressing of all questions in evangelisation is how to get that Word of life into the hands of the people. Hence Bible Societies and other agencies for the translation and dissemination of the Scriptures. Approaching the same problem from another direction, Mr. Walters, of the Scripture Gift Mission, is devoting himself to preparing and circulating Bible portions," without note or comment," in such form and type as are likely to attract attention, awaken interest, and lead many to read who never read before. Those of us who know the Book—alas! how imperfectly—only lament we do not know it better, for we have found "Thy Word is sweet unto my taste"; but none the less must we sadly confess that vast multitudes even of our fellow-countrymen have never discovered its sweetness and value, and actually regard this wondrous volume as "a dry Book"—a view which can only be excused on the ground of inacquaintance with its contents.

In order, in some measure, to meet this ignorance of and disrelish for the Scriptures, Picture Portions have been prepared with the greatest possible care, in large clear type, on toned paper, with ample margin, in readable paragraphs, and, above all, beautifully illustrated, not with the conventional and even grotesque pictures familiar in our old Family Bible, but by scenes and figures drawn from life in the Holy Land by well-known artists, and reproduced in admirable woodcuts, and at such a price as to come well within reach of distributers. The full-sized edition (twelve pages, each issue giving about two chapters), is supplied for free distribution at a halfpenny; while even now a fresh edition of smaller size is being prepared at a farthing per copy, to distributers. So far as my own experience goes, I regard this small edition as the more suitable of the two for general distribution and open-air work, while the larger is certainly the ideal edition for use amongst aged people, in hospitals, Unions, cottages, and so on. Both are of great value, and ought to be largely circulated by

EVERY TRACT DISTRIBUTER IN THE LAND.

Apart from these separate portions, specially designed for use as tracts, the four Gospels have been issued in four volumes* in cloth and printed on good paper. The series contains fully a hundred beautiful pictures, and will prove of the utmost service to Bible-class and other teachers, who will find therein a fund of valuable illustrations of incidents in the life of our Saviour while on earth. Imaginative delineations of historical scenes are, however, wholly avoided; nor is there any attempt to depict the Lord Jesus in bodily form, the aim being rather to make Eastern life, customs, and scenes familiar to the readers of the sacred narrative. Mr. Harper's sketches are chiefly interesting and historical landscape views, while Mr. Clark portrays rather the life and labours of the peasantry, mainly as illustrative of the parables of our Lord.

For myself, and I feel sure for many others, the main interest of these Picture Portions lies in their value and usefulness for general distribution amongst those who care but little for Bible reading for its own sake. Thus led to read, they may quickly discover a beauty and energy of which they had never dreamed, and by the power of the Spirit of God may "be born again...by the Word of God." On this account, all who themselves know the power of the Book, will surely seek to help in sending it forth in this form far and wide.

Already, many will be thankful to hear, a generous friend has enabled Mr. Walters to issue of the Gospel of John, which can be sold at 1½d. Another edition is preparing in Italian, and ere long, it may be hoped, similar editions of the Gospels will be issued in many languages. A missionary in China thus writes as to the value of such an edition for the people of that great empire:—

A SPECIAL EDITION IN ARABIC

"The Gospels, if widely distributed, with such exquisite and attractive pictures as are prepared and printed by you, cannot fail to draw men to study that life, and make them fall in love with a character so perfect, so sympathetic, and so divine. We cannot force our Gospel into the hearts of men, but we can use every honest means to win men to love Christ and to follow in his lowly footsteps.

"If, then, in England with all its privileges, its many thousand of ministers and Christian workers, its great opportunities for hearing the Gospel truths, we admit the advantage of such aids in distributing the Word of God, how much more must it be true of China that we need to woo men to love Christ by a study of his life. How much more must we be glad to avail ourselves of any and every method that is good in a country like China, where ignorance, superstition, and vice combine, as with a threefold band, to choke and destroy all holy and Godward desires.

THE CHINESE DEARLY LOVE PICTURES,

though they do not always readily understand them. But they are far more likely to grasp the meaning and to enjoy looking at these pictures of the Holy Land, and of life there, than our English pictures; for the Jews and the Chinese are alike Easterns, and so have many features of their life in manners and customs in common."

Missionaries in North Africa, who have already had the Arabic Gospel, write warmly as to its usefulness; while many workers at home bear strong testimony to the value of the Picture Portions amongst all classes. What is really wanted is that Mr. Walters should be enabled to extend the operations of the Scripture Gift Mission, to print yet more largely, and to increase his grants to home and foreign missionaries—such grants, it is obvious, depending on the funds furnished by the Lord's stewards. The Scripture Gift Mission should be addressed, Mr. W. Walters, 79, St. Paul's-churchyard, London, E.C.

CONFERENCE AT HARROW-ROAD.

Three days—July 13-15—were set apart for conference and prayer last week, by the invitation of Rev. H. G. Thwaites, who has been lately appointed to the Lock, now called Christ Church, Harrow-road. A good number of Christians in the West of London met in a tent and church-room for the double object of deepening the spiritual life and increasing interest in missionary work. The morning and afternoon meetings were very well attended; the evening meetings were large and most hearty.

Rev Canon Taylor Smith, who has been working on the coast of West Africa, gave some most helpful thoughts on Acts viii., specially dwelling on ready obedience in v. 26. How unlikely a place to find work for the Master, and yet at his command he goes. How exactly he does what he is told. "Arise and go," and "he arose and went." "Go near and join thyself to this chariot," and "Philip ran thither." Not only ready obedience, but exact obedience to the Lord.

Rev. F. B. Meyer left some equally precious thoughts on our memories from Acts x., specially as to the action of Peter. God knew where to find Peter—not a congenial place to stay, specially for a Jew, at a tanner's house, and yet the cloud rested there; and so long as there, Peter must be there. God can't find us for his work unless we stay under the cloud. A man of prayer (v. 9) is sure to be used by God, and so Peter waits till three men knock. We want, like Peter, to be simple-minded, claiming no high position. "I myself also am a man."

The missionary address by Rev. B. Baring Gould was most valuable. Responsibility, expectation, success—all calling to renewed effort.

Lord Kinnaird presided over a large meeting of workers—City Missionaries, Bible-women, &c., on Thursday night, many of whom had accepted an invitation to tea previously. This meeting seemed so very happy and useful that it was decided to have another such meeting in October, and to hold meetings for prayer each month from that time. Rev. H. G. Thwaites, Christ Church, Harrow-road, W., undertook to send out invitations to this meeting, and will be glad to receive the names of any who may wish to be invited. The names may be sent at once.

All were so encouraged by these meetings, that a hope was expressed that year by year the same three days in July may be set apart to the same purpose.

LEPERS ON ROBBEN ISLAND.

At a drawing-room meeting, held at St. Matthew's Vicarage, Brighton (Rev. W. J. McCormick), on Tuesday, July 12, Miss Clara Boyes, recently returned from South Africa, gave a most interesting account of her self-imposed and touching work amongst the lepers of Robben Island. Introducing Miss Boyes, Rev W. J. McCormick alluded to the prevalence of leprosy in the West Indies, Sandwich Islands, and Africa, while half a million of lepers are to be found in our Indian possessions. In Norway they are on the decrease, on account of the law of segregation being enforced. Mr. McCormick credited the Moravians with having first started work among the lepers in South Africa some two or three hundred years ago.

Miss Boyes' graphic description of leper life had about it a pathos which was all its own, as she told not only of the terrible physical suffering, but of that which comes from the enforced separation from dear ones left behind; of little children coming to that island as to a living grave; of the loving care of the lepers one towards another; some who have hands carrying those who have no feet, and so on; and, above all, of the intense anxiety of those who have found in Jesus Christ a Saviour and a Friend, in all their suffering and loneliness, to tell to others the story of a Saviour's love. Miss Boyes asked very specially for good and suitable literature for the lepers—not, as she laughingly said, such books as "Paley's Evidences," of which they had a number sent, but bright good reading, and, remembering the poor leper's infirmities, light to hold. Such books as Horner's Penny Series and similar were much appreciated; also pictures and paint boxes to while away the weary hours, and hammocks, which busy fingers could make; she stated that both the Union and Currie Companies will forward, carriage free, anything labelled for Robben Island.

The hon. sec., Rev. W. J. McCormick, St. Matthew's Vicarage, Brighton, has in the past two years collected £100 for this work. Miss Boyes' simple account of what she really has seen and knows should go far to stir up public interest on behalf of these poor sufferers of our common humanity.

HIMSELF.

"Himself hath done it."

Once it was the blessing,
Now it is the Lord.
Once it was the feeling,
Now it is his word.
Once his gifts I wanted,
Now Himself alone.
Once I sought for healing,
Now the Healer own.

Once 'twas painful trying,
Now 'tis perfect trust.
Once a half salvation,
Now the uttermost.
Once 'twas ceaseless holding,
Now He holds me fast.
Once 'twas constant drifting,
Now my anchor's cast.

Once 'twas busy planning,
Now 'tis trustful prayer.
Once 'twas anxious caring,
Now He has the care.
Once 'twas what I wanted,
Now what Jesus says.
Once 'twas constant asking,
Now 'tis ceaseless praise.

Once it was my working,
His it hence shall be.
Once I tried to use Him,
Now He uses me.
Once the power I wanted,
Now the Mighty One.
Once I worked for glory,
Now his will alone.

Once I hoped in Jesus,
Now I know He's mine.
Once my lamps were dying,
Now they brightly shine.
Once for death I waited,
Now his coming hail.
And my hopes are anchored,
Safe within the veil.

COMMEMORATION DAY at ADDLESTONE.

That a gathering so suggestive of pleasant promise as Commemoration Day in the Princess Mary Village Homes should for three successive years be completely ruined by the rain is a misfortune indeed; and many will doubtless sympathise with Mrs. Meredith and her loving helpers who have thus seen their carefully-planned fete marred and spoiled. Still, whatever may have been the feelings of the damp visitors on Tuesday week, the good work is as good as ever, the cottages are as bright and peaceful shelters, the girls are as carefully and lovingly trained, and indeed in every department the operations are full of hope, and ought to commend themselves to every lover of the forlorn, friendless, and endangered.

The twenty-first annual report states that "during the last twenty-one years we have erected eighteen semi-detached cottages, each built by donors of the cost of the building. Besides these Homes, we have erected a School House, with two wings, one for the residence of teachers, and the other called Shaftesbury House, for the hon. managers, one of whom is always in charge of the whole Institution, and lives in this building. We have also a detached laundry, with drying ground; and an infirmary, which has accommodation for ten patients, with nurses' rooms, and dispensary; and a chapel for Divine service. The number of children living in the Cottages during the last year was two hundred. Each Cottage has a widow for 'mother,' and some of them have a little one of their own admitted as part payment of their salaries. 'Mothers' are selected from Christian women, who have filled respectable humble stations in domestic life, and are adapted by their dispositions to take an interest in the little ones we rescue from the contamination of their natural guardians. In this matter, we are thankful to report, we have much success. Many hold their positions several years."

After a thanksgiving service in the chapel, conducted by Rev. T. H. Sparshott, the Cottages were visited by the hardiest of the friends, while others hastened to the schoolroom, where a delightful programme had been prepared by the ladies. The girls sung very sweetly various pretty songs, while some of the very wee ones sang and recited little pieces. Then came dumb-bell exercise and musical drill, followed by the distribution of prizes by Lady Harriet Lindsay for excellence in studies, laundry, and other work, Scripture knowledge, good conduct and steadiness in situations, young servants having kept their places for periods varying from three to ten years.

A short meeting followed, presided over by Canon Girdlestone. In the course of an interesting address Mrs. Meredith stated that the Homes were founded entirely by ladies. The Princess Mary, Duchess of Teck, had taken an active interest in the movement ever since its origin in 1871. The Homes were for girls only born into criminal classes, or in similar hapless plight, and the system adopted was to place about ten of them in a semi detached cottage under the care of a widow, who acted as mother. The girls were trained chiefly for domestic service, and many of those who had passed through the institution were now in respectable positions. Mrs. Meredith stated that the average failures amounted to only 1 per cent. Last year against the 37 cases admitted, 35 of the girls had been discharged well provided for.

The Chairman spoke in praise of the work done by Mrs. Meredith and those associated with her, and gave the text, Rom. xii. 21, "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." He was sure that if the Government would devote more attention to the young they would prevent a great amount of crime, and reduce the expenses of the criminal laws. Rev. J. Seaver proposed, and Mr. Stocks seconded, the following resolution:—"That this meeting, having heard Mrs. Meredith's report, and witnessed the good behaviour of the children, rejoices that the foundress has been spared to see the Homes attain their majority, and earnestly prays that God's blessing may continue to rest on the work, and on all those who are engaged in it."

We may add that a boy's band and some eighty-one boys from the School of Handicrafts, Chertsey, under the care of Rev. Dr. Hawkesley, were present, and not only added interest to the proceedings, but apparently greatly enjoyed them.

A MISSION VESSEL, built for the Mission to Seamen on the Tees, has been launched at Stockton.

WORK IN CENTRAL FRANCE.

Dear Sir,—Last April you were good enough to allow me to call the attention of your readers to a most useful work which is being done in and around Le Puy by the pastor of the Eglise Réformée of France. This work is in connection with the Société Centrale of France, and has been affiliated with the Consistory of St. Voy, Haute Loire. It is the only Protestant church or mission of any kind in Le Puy. M. Abel, the present pastor, is greatly desirous of building a small church. At present the only Protestant place of worship in the city is a small dingy room in a very low part of the city. There are several Protestant Government officials who would like to attend the services, but they are ashamed to be seen in such a neighbourhood, and still more ashamed to invite any of their Catholic friends to accompany them. The Catholics are extremely bigoted, as a rule, but some are beginning to turn away from the Papacy, and might doubtless be much helped by attending Protestant services. Several have done so in spite of the unpleasant surroundings, and have said to the pastor afterwards, "We like your service; it is simple, and we are tired of Catholic ceremonial. You pray in our own language, and we like your expositions of the Bible. But what a pity it is that you should hold your meetings in this low neighbourhood."

Some souls have been brought into the light already and others are seeking. Pastor Abel, a personal friend of mine, is a most zealous worker and an indefatigable visitor. He goes amongst the people, and is thoroughly in touch with them, knowing their difficulties and hindrances. He has been working hard to collect the money needed to erect a suitable building. The French Protestants—a very small body, alas! (out of thirty-six millions of inhabitants there are only six hundred thousand Protestants all over France)—have helped him to their utmost, and now he knows not where to turn for the rest. Surely the Protestants of England will respond to this call for help, and will aid to spread the Gospel in this centre of Catholicism. The work is unostentatious, but it is a very deserving and needed one. As I am spending the next few weeks in England I shall be very glad to give any further details to those who may be led to take an interest in this cause.

I could give several instances of blessing received. One young soldier who was converted by the ministrations of Pastor Abel has bravely confessed Christ before his comrades. An old man who will soon pass away to the better world says joyfully, "I know whom I have believed, and am not afraid to go."

I may add that Le Puy is a most interesting old city, and is situated in one of the most picturesque departments of France. It would well repay a visit, and Pastor Abel would be most encouraged to see any Christians taking a personal interest in his work.—Yours affectionately in Christ,

Auguste Berthe,
Pastor of the Eglise Réformée of St. Voy.
Care of Mr. W. Green, Moorlands, Bickley, Kent.

Christ Church, Lambeth.

A large congregation assembled on Tuesday week at Christ Church, Westminster-bridge-road, on the occasion of the jubilee of Dr. Newman Hall and of his retirement, after thirty years, from the pastorate of that church. Mr. George Williams presided, and the chancel was filled with ministers of various denominations. Letters of sympathy were read from the Dean of Norwich, the Archdeacon of London, Professor George Adam Smith, Rev. Dr. Cuyler, Sir Fowell Buxton, and others.

The members of the congregation presented Dr. Newman Hall with a service of plate and a cheque for £200. Dr. Newman Hall, in reply, said he had discouraged any large donation, having received in former years so many tributes of their affection. The money he would be happy to devote to the institutions of the church. Addresses were delivered by Mr. W. J. Palmer, Lord Kinnaird, Dr. Henry Reynolds, Dr. Monro Gibson, and Rev. R. Downes.

Dr. Newman Hall then announced that Rev. F. B. Meyer had accepted their unanimous invitation to be his successor. He was a Baptist, but, as the pulpit was open to all who held evangelical truth, this was no hindrance, and he himself would feel great pleasure in providing a baptistery, hoping thus to help in breaking down the middle wall of partition which had too long separated denominations holding the same doctrines. He then took the hand of Mr. Meyer and welcomed him as his successor.

Mr. Meyer briefly responded, saying he hoped to commence work in October.

THE EVANGELISATION SOCIETY.

"Through another year we have done o utmost to maintain a clear Gospel testimony; a the Lord has been true to his promise and h honoured his own Word." So the Evangelisati Society opens its new report and the accoun and incidents given from all parts of the kingdo amply show that its loyal adherence to the sir plicity and fulness of the Gospel has been large used of God in awakening the unconverted an calling many to Himself. "Wherever (it is state our evangelists go, whether in London or th home counties to take Sunday services, or more distant parts of England and Wales conduct missions of two, three, or four weeks, find that the clear, faithful message the carry with them is honoured of God.

Many extracts are given of the most interes ing character, but here we can only glean o forceful and typical paragraph:—"We a thankful to have been permitted to see the fru of the work, but we know the promise, 'M Word shall not return unto Me void.' I mu express how greatly we value the work of yo Society. Were it not for the evangelists' simp and faithful preaching of the Gospel through o land, many country places would still be in igno ance of the way of salvation."

One testimony may be selected as an illustr tion of many. The writer says as to a missio held twelve months previously, and which, ther fore, had been well tested:—

"It is difficult to put in a letter many detail which to us, who see and know them, are u mistakable tokens that the work is of the Lor Himself. Some of the interesting cases I hav lost sight of, there having been removals, &c which have made it difficult to follow them up but there are enough left to stir our hearts wit unbounded gratitude to our Heavenly Father fo giving us such gracious evidences of His smile.

"There is one case I should like you especiall to know of; it came to my knowledge a fe months ago. We had noticed at our usual Sunda evening meetings at Potterne a young man, th son of a godly, respectable farmer. I wa greatly struck with the young man's attentio how he followed the reading, &c., and how i the open air he would come near and stand t to listen. I mentioned this to a friend at Po terne, and advised him to write to the youn man and ask him, plainly and definitely, if h were a Christian. A few days after I had a no from my friend enclosing a letter received fro the young farmer, in which he told us that h was brought to the Lord during the mission hel in the Temperance Hall, now a little more tha twelve months ago. You could not, of cours possibly read all the letters which reach yo from workers all over the country, but I do wis you could have read that one. It was so gratif ing, showing as it did such a simple, but, at th same time, enlightened trust in the Lord Jesus

The tent season having now commenced, co siderable interest attaches to Captain Smith's r ference to the work under canvas. He says:- "The wear and tear of tents involved an expen diture in the early part of the present year probably £500 to enable us to start as many ten on their mission of mercy as last year. Th tents make it possible for us to get into man country places where there are no Christians in good position of life to invite our co-operatio —into which places we regard it as a great priv lege to be able to take the simple Gospel if a entrance can be found."

An account of the work of the Scottish branch the Evangelisation Society was given lately in ou pages, hence we need only add here that the secr tary expresses profound thankfulness for the wor done in the north, and gives some encouragin testimonies received from many parts.

We observe that the income for the past yea has been £11,017 1s. 3d., while the total numbe of Gospel meetings held have been 21,023. It stated that "To maintain the whole work at i present magnitude requires about £1200 p month; but we regret to say that for many co secutive months in 1891 we received only a litt over £600 a month, so that our financial anxieti were great, and retrenchment rather than expa sion was necessary. Many of our loved frien and supporters have been gathered home, and w are earnestly asking the Lord to raise up ne friends, who, for his sake and the Gospel's, w entrust us with the needed funds to sustain work which is undoubtedly being greatly owne of God." Communications should be made the Hon. Secretary, Evangelisation Society, 2 Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

GRACE AND GRATITUDE.

COMMUNION ADDRESS AT MILDMAY.

REV. GEORGE WILSON, OF EDINBURGH.

The voice that breaks the silence of this still ur at the table of the Lord ought to be very ft and very gentle and very reverent. This is t a time for teaching. It is a time simply for rring up our minds by way of remembrance.
hat have we come here to see? Jesus, and sus only. What have we come here to listen
? The voice of Jesus, and the voice of Jesus
ly. What have we come here to receive? The fts of Jesus; nay, the Giver, with all the gifts
e brings; we have come to receive Himself.
here are mysteries here, mysteries not to per-ex, but mysteries of length and breadth and ight and depth. "Eye hath not seen nor ear ard, neither hath it entered the heart of man," at things the Lord hath prepared for his people his table; but they are revealed unto us by the ly Spirit. I pray that I may be the voice of e Spirit this afternoon, as it tells us what Jesus to us, as He takes of the things that are rist's and shows them unto us, and shows them us, that we might arise and go forth to be his gan as He shows them to the world through

What is Jesus to us as we sit at his table?
e is our shelter from the sentence of doom.
There is now, therefore, no condemnation to em that are in Christ Jesus." That sentence for ever dismissed; that doom is for ever lifted.
e sit here at peace with God, through Jesus rist our Lord. He is our acceptance with the ther; we are "accepted in the Beloved"; we e in the place of children; we are in the bosom the family; we calmly rejoice in our adoption accepted of God. God is satisfied with us.
sus, as the ground of our acceptance, is here
th us at his table; and we respond to Him and y, "The Lord our Righteousness."

Yet again, He is our New-creator. "If any an be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature"— new creation. This is not a promise, but a fact.
e are new. We are the workmanship of Christ, ose redeeming work we this afternoon cele-
ate. We have got a new spring to our life—
s love; we have got a new purpose in our life—
s glory; we have got a new power in our life—
s omnipotence. Jesus is to us our New-creator, r Regenerator; He has made us new.

Yet, again, He is our divine Indweller. "I a crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet
t I, but Christ liveth in me." "I in you, d ye in Me." We are all, this afternoon, up at e right hand, in the heavenly places, there in sus Christ; but there is a more blessed thought that Jesus Himself is down here now—more an with us, in us by his indwelling—cleansing, ving peace, liberty, joy, transformation.

Yet again, He is our mighty Keeper. The eat Shepherd is among us this afternoon, and er us He is saying, "They shall never perish, ither shall any pluck them out of my hand."
e are kept by the mighty power of God, through mple trust in Him.

Yet again, brethren, He is our purity. "If we lk in the light as He is in the light, we have llowship one with another," interlaced in fellow-ip with Jesus Christ; and the blood of Christ cleansing us from all sin—the sin-soiled feet our pilgrimage, the sin that we have not disvered, but may discover in the light of this ly place this afternoon; the sin that the more rnished holiness of to-morrow may bring to e vision of our souls—is cleansing us from all

And He is our Prospect. He went away one y, but He said He would come again and take s people to Himself, that where He was there ey might be, and always be. I know that was e coming back at Pentecost; but I know also at the fulness of the meaning is his coming for s people again, to take them into his kingdom.
These are seven things the Lord is to us; and ay we not, with hushed hearts, just bow at his essed feet, and say, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, d forget not all his benefits."

May I be also the voice of the Spirit as to what u are to Jesus. Have you nothing to tell Him is afternoon? He has told you that He is all is to you, and I have been but on the fringe of s fulness for you. Have you nothing to say to m this afternoon?

May we not all say to Him as we sit at his ble, that we have an unshaken confidence in
m. "I know whom I have believed, and am rsuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed to Him against that day." I am "rejoicing in Christ Jesus," and I have "no confidence in the flesh." Beloved, when you have a drooping heart, which sees no sin that you need to give up, yet is unrestful, a heart which knows not what is wrong beyond the dull, painful consciousness that you are not as you would like to be, and are not as God would have you to be—possibly then He is just waiting for the outgoing of that confidence in Himself, "Jesus, I will trust Thee, and trust Thee now." May we not all say, here and always, in unbroken communion to Him, may we not say with David in Psalm cxxxix., "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?" Nothing would induce me to part from Thee. I want to walk my pilgrimage in the perpetual presence of my Lord, may we not say that this afternoon, and I want my heart to burn all the way, because He is ever with me, opening up to me the Scriptures, and filling me with his own blessed fulness.

May we not say this afternoon, that we all unite in making a humble but courageous confession of his name? Let us stand where Thomas stood when he said "My Lord and my God," and make this confession of our adorable Redeemer. As we go out into the world, let us say as Peter said, "Whether it be right to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye; for, we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."

May we not say that, here and now, we calmly consecrate every energy of our life, and our every possession unto Him? Oh, for grace to stand before Him, as Mary stood before the Lord, and said, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word."

May we not further say, God give us grace to say it truly to the Lord this afternoon, "We are willing to accept the chastening of thy loving hand. If we need to be broken, come and break us; if we need to be cleansed, come and cleanse us, though it be with cleansing fire; if we need to cut off the right hand, come thou and do this operation, we are ready; if we need, if we need to pluck out the right eye, give us the power of the Spirit to drop the thing and fling it away at once, that we may stand before the Lord without sin, "Nothing between, Lord, nothing between."

May we not say yet again, that we calmly consecrate the energies of our life to the doing of his will. The Lord wants us to put everything into his hand, and as we heard this morning, He will then appropriate us and work his blessed will on us and through us. He wants us to consecrate our working power, our witnessing power, our enduring power, our whole power, to consecrate that to the doing of his will. Can you say to your Master, as you look into his blessed face this afternoon, "Master, thy word, thy will is my deepest delight?"

Lastly, may we not say that we love Him, and that we longingly wait for his coming again? We close this service by singing "Till He Come." The Church is to observe this ordinance "till He come," and when He comes He will take this cup, and He will take this bread, and He will fling them into the sea of his forgetfulness, for they will be no more needed, and He will take us to Him into his kingdom.

May I sum it all up? What is the word of the Master to the disciple? "Without Me, ye can do nothing." Blessed Master, at thy feet, like a little child, I learn that lesson, I take it in, I take it home; henceforth, I will put it into my life; attempt nothing, desire nothing, do nothing, without Thee. May I sum up what I have said about the disciple? It is a beautiful answer, I think, to the Saviour's beautiful word, "Without Me ye can do nothing." It is this, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

May our communion be a keeping of the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace; and may it be a reception again of our blessed Lord, under these symbols of bread and wine by simple faith, yielding all we are and all we have to his purpose and to his use.

THE EARTHQUAKE AT SUMATRA.—Full particulars of the earthquake at Sumatra have not yet arrived at the Barmen Mission House; but it is known that much of the Mission property is destroyed—one of the stations entirely, and probably two others. All the Khenish missionaries and their families, with Mr. Snuggs and Miss Needham, together with all the native Christians are uninjured. Dr. Schreiber writes:—"Thanks be to God who has saved the lives of all our friends!" The volcanic eruption was on one of a group of islands, where some Dutch missionaries were located, but nothing is yet known of them.

THE STRUGGLE IN UGANDA.

At last letters have been received by the British East Africa Company from Captain Lugard and Captain Williams. They tell the story of recent occurrences in Uganda, and although not written in reply to the charges of tyranny and cruelty made by the Roman Catholic priests, they furnish cogent and complete answers to the numerous questions that have been raised.

Captain Lugard tells us that on January 12 the French Bishop, Monseigneur Hirth, who had gone to meet a batch of priests coming from Europe, returned to Mengo, the capital of Uganda. Almost immediately afterwards things began to assume a critical aspect. The peace previously established with so much trouble was disturbed by daily difficulties and quarrels between Romanists and Protestants, and, so far as Captain Lugard could judge, the mischief arose in every instance from aggressions on the part of the Romanists, who had a great preponderance of strength, and were pretty secure from attack by the weaker party. The growing disorder culminated in the cold-blooded murder of a Protestant by a Romanist in the streets of Mengo.

The king, who had sided with the Romanists, declined to punish the murderer, and the bearer of a protest was told that, in case of interference, Kampala would be looted, and Captain Lugard's soldiers all killed. On January 24 the French party got under arms, and, being in a very large majority, attacked those who were looking to the company for protection. Captain Lugard says:—"A very large number charged down towards Kampala, but I drove them back with the Maxim, and the final result was their defeat. They fled to the islands and unfortunately managed to secure the person of the king. The importance of this is not to be over-estimated in Uganda, where the people are devoted to the king, and will acknowledge no substitute. I offered to reinstate the king and the French party in all their former positions and influence and to forget the war. I received constant letters from the king in reply, saying he was most anxious to return.

"However, Monseigneur, the head of the Catholic Mission, who advocated a complete separation of the two parties, went down to the islands where the king and chiefs were, and I heard from various sources which I could not doubt, that the bishop had used all his influence to prevent the king's return. He had promised me he would do all in his power to bring him back. He had also told me he was going to Sese, instead of which he remained in the islands with the King. Finally, we were forced to attack the islands, and we drove out the enemy with much loss. All the Waganda have always unanimously agreed that in case of fighting here the Mohammedans were absolutely certain to bring war and endeavour to place their Sultan Mbogo on the throne in Mengo. The king having fled, the Waganda of all parties look upon it that he has been driven out by us. Consequently all the common people in the districts are against us."

Captain Williams's letter, dated March 7, conveys more cheering news. The missionaries are safe and the fighting at an end.

SPRINGFIELD SCHOOL FOR WORKERS.

This school has closed one of the most successful years in its history. The "Commencement" exercises proved a fitting consummation of the year's work, and I trust are truly indicative of the "commencement" of the future growth. The main address of the evening was by Rev. Edward Judson, D.D., of New York City, on "The Missionary Spirit embodied in City Evangelisation." The indications are for large classes of both young men and women in the Fall, and surely with the additional departments of music under the efficient instruction of E. Cutter, jun., leader of the Apollo Club of Boston, and the Orpheus Club of this city, as well as the half-time course which has been highly commended, the department of Physical Culture, and by no means least, the Missionary Department, under the charge of Rev. Harlan P. Beach, of Minneapolis, for six years a missionary in North China, the school is in a condition to be especially useful as an active agent in advancing the cause of Christ.

NORTHFIELD SUMMER SCHOOL.

This is now a thoroughly established institution in Eastern America. It has met and separated for the seventh time, the dates of session being July 2—13. The attendance was larger than ever, all the New England States being well represented. Being himself absent and busy in Great Britain, Mr. Moody secured Dr. A. J. Gordon as Chairman of the Convention, and from the accounts to hand it appears that there was every sign of undiminished interest.

The Convention was called to order on Saturday evening, when there was a large attendance in Stone Hall. A brief opening address was given by Mr. J. R. Mott, a well known Y.M.C.A. man, who gave the students some excellent counsel as to how they could make the most of the Convention. He advised them to secure a proper proportion of time for quiet meditation and communion with God, and not to look too much to man for the blessing they sought. Two great perils to be avoided were the spirit of criticism and the spirit of self-sufficiency.

Mr. Sankey was called to the platform, and gave the students a hearty note of welcome on Mr. Moody's behalf. Mr. Sankey was cordially received, and the mention of Mr. Moody's name evoked a burst of applause.

The Man and The Word.

The address of the evening was by Dr. Gordon on "The Word of God and the Man of God," from Heb. iv. 12 and 2 Tim. iii. 16. It is important, he said, to see the relation of these two, the agent and the instrument. The consecrated missionary, Francis Xavier, did not take even a Bible with him, only a stray leaf of Scripture. He worked magnificently, but every vestige of his work was wiped out. On the other hand, some have supposed that if they sent abroad the Word of God, scattering it far and near, men would be brought to Christ by it; but all missionary experience proves that where you have the man of God without the Word of God, or the Word of God without the man of God, missionary efforts will be comparatively futile.

The man of God is a disciple of Jesus Christ, inbreathed by the Holy Ghost. It was through reading David Brainerd's journal that William Carey derived the inspiration which led him to become the leader of the nineteenth-century missionary movement. Henry Martin, who had such a temper that he threw a carving-knife at a fellow-student, picked up David Brainerd's memoir, and was so moved that his whole spirit was changed and he became among the most consecrated of the missionaries of the cross. James Brainerd Taylor, whose rule was the spirit of Christ is everything, was only a second David Brainerd in the marvellous power he had over those to whom he preached the Gospel. It is only by being indwelt and swayed by the Holy Spirit that we are worthy to have that title, man of God.

The Word of God is exactly what the man is, a word indwelt by the Spirit; as the agent is indwelt, so the agency is indwelt by the Spirit. Just as the blood pulsates in my body, in every artery, in every vein, sent from the central heart, so from Jesus Christ is sent forth the Holy Spirit, and that Spirit, sent into every mind, is like a sentence of these Divine Scriptures. In preparing missionary lectures I have been struck by the fact that country after country has been born again out of A single text of scripture.

Hans Eged, of Germany, preached fifteen years in Greenland without winning a single disciple. He returned from the field in despair, but another who took up the work read the passage, "His soul was exceeding sorrowful, unto death," and that single word attracted the attention of Eged, and he was renewed, and the work then began which moved all over Greenland. In Lapland it was thirty-three years before they saw any evidence of good results; they were about to abandon the field, when one day an outcast woman heard the missionary read these words, "The Son of Man has come to seek and to save that which was lost." She became suddenly entranced, entered into the extremest agony, and as she prayed, suddenly light came to her and spread from one to another till it seemed as though all Labrador was going to be converted. Remember how that New Testament, dropped by some English or American man-of-war into the Bay of Yeddo, in Japan, was picked up by a Japanese, who had it translated, and was so charmed and entranced that he asked his neighbours to hear it, and two or three of them were very soon baptized, the first in Japan. There has been no instance in all the history of missions of such sudden and astonishing results of the Gospel as we have seen in Japan, and yet it was all started from one Scripture that was dropped in the bay.

Let us go to the Word with a desire for search. Pray before the Scriptures when you read them, and answer the Scriptures' prayer to you. You will find that the Scripture has many a prayer to us.

A COLONY OF WASHERMEN.

I desire to tell you a little about a work my sister and I are doing; and to ask you to help us.

On the slopes of Landour—one of our Himalayan stations—near a perennial stream, live, in small clay-washed huts, about five hundred souls, a colony of "dhobies" (washermen) and their wives and children. It has been laid upon our hearts to do what we can to teach them the way of salvation, and to give those who are suffering any simple medicines we ourselves can prescribe. More serious cases we have sent to the Charitable Dispensary with a note to the native doctor in charge, asking him for advice, and promising to see that his directions are carried out.

But the ignorant natives of India are much averse to going to a dispensary, and such is the faith of these dhobies in our abilty, that we have often been told by them that they would rather die under our treatment than be sent away. It is sad to see how especially the women and children suffer; and all the women and bigger children help in washing, starching, and ironing the clothes. Many a poor little infant has been scalded by falling into the boiler, or burnt by the large fire below it; and the ignorance of the parents causes the delicate little ones much-added suffering. We also find many cases of rheumatism, low fever, goitre, toothache, earaches, sore throats, ulcers, and boils to relieve.

There is much drunkenness among these people, I am sorry to say. Most evenings after the day's work, they go to the bazaar and drink at the liquor shops, and bring back for themselves and others bottles filled with a nasty spirit mixed with injurious drugs, which they call "dároo." When we endeavour to show them the evils of drink, they say, "The 'sahib-log' (gentlemen) drink plenty of 'sharáb' (liquor)." Would to God the Europeans in India would see how the natives watch them and often truly despise them! "Do not use bad language," the Christian worker teaches, and he receives this reply, "The sahib-log swear and call us bad names."

These poor people are astonished that we should care about their comfort, and begin to see there is something in Christianity above ordinary kind-heartedness, for it is utterly unlike the heathen teaching to bear one another's burdens. These heathen never hear of Christ except when my sister and I are able to say a few words to them, and all are never able to be present at one time. When, in March, I left India for a health trip, my sister and I agreed that we ought to get somebody to live near, and carry on a regular work among them. I can find a worker; will friends help us with gifts towards the expenses? I shall be happy to give further details to any who are interested.—Your fellow-worker, (Miss) M. L. Parsons.

South African Exhibition.

In September next our South African Exhibition will be opened at Kimberley, and thousands from all parts of South Africa will flock to it. We have taken a stall for the sale and distribution of religious literature, feeling this to be a splendid opportunity for reaching so many visitors. We would be so thankful if your readers would send us some good grants of booklets. We will be able to get rid of a large number of these silent messengers; and liberal grants would be both acceptable and welcome. Any sent to our secretary, Mr. A. Mercer, 2, Berkeley-terrace, Wimbledon, and marked for Kimberley Exhibition, would be forwarded to us out here.

We are at present seeing much blessing in the work. W. Spencer Walton, Director.

THE ENGLISH YEAR-BOOK OF Y.M.C.A.'s (1s.), pubished at Exeter Hall, is a valuable handbook of Y.M.C.A. work and officers, not only at home but in all lands. Those interested in such service for young men will find it a storehouse of information on many matters of real interest, and general evangelistic and mission organisation.

Letters to the Editor.

EQUADOR.

Equador is closed to the Gospel. Her Custom Houses will not allow Bibles or Testaments to enter; evangelization would not be permitted. Her people are steeped in superstition, vice, and ignorance, to an extent that would not be credited in Christian England. Should not the representatives of the Gospel devise some means to be at least represented there? Can anything be done for Equador?

I have thought much upon the subject and will offer the results. Equador does not question the few foreigners who reside there of their religious beliefs only that they do not interfere with Romanism. Why not plant there a colony of Christians? The country is fertile, and where well-drained, healthy. In no part of the world will a little labour, well directed, pay so well. Cocoa, tapioca, and other products would soon place such a colony upon a solid, self-supporting basis—in fact, in a flourishing state.

Such a colony would be a practical object-lesson to the people around, and by the wisdom of the serpent coupled with the gentleness of the dove, better things could be done. At least, in Equador the Cross would be represented. Singly, any family could not hope to survive the ostracism, bigotry, and persecution which would fall upon them; but a colony assisted from home until established, could stand.

Certain it is that Equador should have some one to represent the Master, so that we could not look to it as one of the countries where the Gospel was excluded. Geo. D. Coleman.

THE MORAL CRUSADE IN LIVERPOOL.

Dear Sir,—In the columns of The Christian and several other periodicals I have observed a correspondence regarding a recent great reformation in the suppression of places of bad repute in Liverpool.

As an old resident, and a worker in the reformation department, will you allow me to state that of neither of the persons named—especially the new-comer of two or three years' standing—can it be said that they have had much to do in helping forward such a reformation.

The work of reformation commenced in Liverpool nearly forty years ago, when there was a great contention amongst the moral and social reformers regarding the deplorable condition of the lower portion of the town. I myself brought the matter before several of the Mayors and members of the Corporation: the result was that an Act of Parliament was obtained called "The Insanitary Building Act," which placed it in the power of the Corporation to deal with, and, when necessary, to pull down insanitary property. Under this Act, from time to time the Corporation have pulled down and cleared away over twenty acres in the lower and central portions of the town. It first commenced at Wapping in the formation of the Wapping Dock, when a large quantity of old property was demolished; it then extended into Park-lane on to Paradise-street and Whitechapel, where hundreds of old houses, the hot beds of vice, were cleared away. From Whitechapel to Dale-street a clean sweep was made of about ten acres. A street, now called "Victoria-street," was formed right through the centre; and here some of the finest buildings in Liverpool have been built. Away up in the centre of the town a notoriously low neighbourhood, called "Nash-grove," was completely demolished, and in its place the Corporation have built a large block of buildings suitable for the working-class, and called "Victoria buildings," with a large square in the centre called "Victoria-square," with good accommodation for washing and drying clothes. Altogether, any one now visiting Liverpool after an absence of thirty years, such has been the improvement that the place would be scarcely recognisable; so that for any new-comer of two or three years' standing to set himself up as having effected great moral and social improvements in Liverpool is altogether ridiculous. What they could have done in such a short time is only like a drop in the ocean compared with the great work which has been going forward in Liverpool during the last thirty years.—I am, respectfully yours, Alexander Innes.

"THE ACCUSER OF THE BRETHREN."

In reply to the following remark of Mr. Beachey, in our last issue, "Mr. Robert Brown appears to have fallen into a strange error in supposing that Christ and Satan reign now in the world together," Mr. Brown replies:—

"Of course, I am perfectly aware (as my numerous works testify) that Satan is the god of this age; and that Christ is sitting on his Father's throne until his enemies are to be made the footstool of his feet; and that He has not yet taken to Him his great power and reigned. But nevertheless, He even now reigns in the hearts of his people (which was what I said); just as David, who had been anointed king in the days of Saul, reigned over those Israelites who acknowledged him as such, although he had not then ascended the throne of Israel. For we are expressly told that believers; as such have been "delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the Kingdom of God's dear Son" (Col. i. 13).

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, JULY 24.—LEVITICUS VI.

When it was a question of sin against God, the appropriate sacrifices took the first place; but when it was sin against man, restitution came first. When the gift was brought to the altar and conscience recalled some wrong done to a brother, the gift must wait until restitution was made for the wrong done. What a significant lesson is taught in the burning of that perpetual fire upon the altar of burnt-offering, indicative of the undying flame of love in a believer's heart, which is ever glowing, fed by the oil of the Holy Spirit. But we are reminded that the only secret of perennial efficiency is in the feeding on the heavenly meal, part of which burns in the sacred fire of the Divine participation, and part is eaten by the priest. See how carefully the Holy Ghost guards the character of our substitute, who was made sin for us. It is repeatedly said of the sin-offering, "it is most holy;" and only those who were engaged in direct priestly service—"the males"—might deal with it. It reminds us of the repeated declarations that gathered around the dying Lord, "innocent blood," "nothing amiss," "He did no sin."

MONDAY, JULY 25.—LEVITICUS VII.

In this repetition of sacrifices and offerings already considered we are reminded of the accuracy and minuteness of God's requirements. It is most important to bear these in mind, for though the blood of Jesus has put away sin, its full efficacy is only experienced by those who reverently and rightfully apply it. The soul that ate of peace offerings whilst it was unclean was to be cut off from the people, which teaches that we must be repentant, sincere, and willing to live to the level of our light ere we can properly avail ourselves of the finished work, or feed on the flesh of our Saviour Jesus. How memorable the prohibition against eating blood, because it contained the life! What sanctity in blood! No man might incorporate the life of a mere animal. But we are bidden to eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of man, because we may incorporate his life to the uttermost without hurt. Indeed, we must drink the emblem of his death, i.e., we must have fellowship with Him at the cross, for it is only so that we can receive his life. "I am crucified with Christ...Christ liveth in Me." How careful the Lord is of his servants; it is not enough that He becomes their portion, but He arranges for them a worthy portion for this life also.

TUESDAY, JULY 26.—LEVITICUS VIII.

And in this chapter we have the Priesthood of the great High Priest presented in miniature. The whole congregation was to be assembled at that great inauguration of Aaron and his sons, as if each of us were reminded of our right to behold and to make use of the office of the Son of God as God's appointed Priest. Each portion of the High Priest's dress told of some attribute or qualification in Jesus. That girdle of his service, that robe and ephod of his oneness with his people, that breastplate of his representation of us and our needs, that Urim and Thummim of his wisdom to direct, that mitre of his holiness in which we, too, are accepted. And the garments of the priests, the sons of Aaron, remind us of the spotless dress in which we should do all the daily work of our lives, ever ministering in the tiniest offices for God. We, too, must be anointed with the precious oil of the Holy Ghost, and must first appropriate the precious efficacy of the blood that was shed for our redemption. But what a delightful picture is that presented by the rites of consecration, whereby hands and feet and senses were alike touched with blood; and then all the new-made priests were shut up in the precincts of the tabernacle for seven days. So must we be wholly for Christ, and be content to be hidden with Christ in God, so that when He is manifested, we shall be manifested with Him. There are great depths in this chapter, demanding careful thought.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 27.—LEVITICUS IX.

The eighth day is the day of resurrection. Aaron and his sons, after having been hidden for seven days, are brought out to the congregation. Aaron in each case killed the various offerings, and his sons completed the sacrificial rites. And that figure, so lovely in its various offices, is surely significant of the great High Priest so far as mortal man may aspire to represent Him. And those assistant priests, concerned so closely in the sacred rites, are surely significant of our part in appropriating for ourselves, and in passing on to others the priceless benefits which accrue from that gift, which combines in itself once for all everything conveyed in the sin, the burnt, and the peace-offerings. But oh, my soul, behold that holy spectacle of the High Priest coming forth to bless the people, whilst the glory of the Lord appears to them, and the fire of God proclaims his favour, for herein is a foreshadowing of that other day, when He who is now hidden shall come forth in glory before our eyes, and shall lift up his hands toward us and bless us. Oh, when will the seven days be complete, and that eighth day dawn for which the whole creation waits?

THURSDAY, JULY 28.—LEVITICUS X.

What a sad chapter is this! How soon does God's fair design become overcast! This offering of strange fire is a warning to us to-day, lest we should neglect the Divine prohibitions, and offer the fire of our own passion, or emulation, or self-will. How much of the worship and service we render is in danger of being charged with the accusation of strange fire. Nothing will avail before God which originates in nature's energy or in the fervour of nature's devotion. Aaron held his peace. He was dumb because he could not but acknowledge the justice of God's vindication of Himself and his own commands. His sons, too, must not allow their natural feelings to overpower their reverent recognition of the righteousness of God's dealings. This destruction of Aaron's sons corresponds to that cutting off from active service of those who wilfully and presumptuously ignore the Divine behests. We must beware of wine and strong drink, whether literally or figuratively, putting away all that would promote unhealthy and unnatural excitement. It is very beautiful to notice the distinction in this chapter between the presumptuous sin of the earlier verses, and the failure arising from the anguish of bereaved human nature in the latter ones. Such things had befallen that the priestly family could not eat their accustomed food, but no judgment befell. He knoweth our frame, and distinguishes between wilful rebellion and natural infirmity.

FRIDAY, JULY 29.—LEVITICUS XI.

How marvellous that God should give so much time to this catalogue of articles of diet, showing that all our life, as his priests, passes beneath his searching judgment. And concerning it all He has a distinct will and choice. A clean animal was that which chewed the cud and divided the hoof, a double qualification in which many have seen an illustration of that godly character which meditates on the Word of God, and preserves a separate walk, divided from the world around. Meditation and separation are the two chief characteristics of a holy soul; neither is sufficient without the other (ver. 7). The true believer also needs the fin for movement, and the scale for protection. It might not be possible in all instances, as in some, to trace the reasons for the distinctions made, but it was enough that God had spoken, his word was the end of strife. Not eating only, but touching was forbidden, because of the holiness of God, whom they served. We often say that temptation is not in itself sin, and it is true, but it may be that we are more often soiled than we think by the very approach of evil. How wonderfully all these distinctions were swept away in the Christian dispensation! Righteousness no longer stands in meats, and drinks, and divers washings, but the answer of a good conscience to God which is cleansed in the blood and clothed in the righteousness of Christ, Acts x. 11-16.

SATURDAY, JULY 30.—LEVITICUS XII.

This chapter takes thee back, reader, to thine original fallen nature. We were shapen in iniquity and conceived in sin, and, therefore, are unclean in the sight of the Holy God. The birth of a male involved seven days' ceremonial defilement, of a female fifteen. Yes, and we all need the circumcision of Christ, described by the Apostle as consisting in the putting off of the body of the flesh. The very nature that we inherit involves us in guilt which needs atonement. As members of the first Adam, we require the mediation of the second. And there must be the daily use of the knife, cutting away all that pertains to self and evil. But how merciful is God! There was a gracious gradation in the sacrifices, so that the poorest might find it within his means to obey; and it is a memorable fact that the mother of Jesus brought two fluttering birds—meet emblems of her gentle nature—when she bore her new-born babe to the Temple to present Him to the Lord. "Though He was rich, for our sakes He became poor." Blood is needed for all, and has been shed for all, but our appropriation of it varies almost infinitely. We must all rely on the blood of Christ, but to some how much more it means than to others. Oh, give us to know the fulness of Thy great redemption, and make us every whit clean.

International S. S. Lessons.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 31.

PETER AND JOHN BEFORE THE COUNCIL.
Acts iv. 1-18.

GOLDEN TEXT: Verse 12.

THE preaching of Peter, consequent upon the healing of the impotent man, was too personal and too bold to be allowed to continue. This lesson narrates a formidable yet a futile effort to silence these bold witnesses for Jesus.

I. POWERFUL OPPOSITION (1-4). Note by whom it was led (1). Josephus frequently speaks of a temple guard, consisting of Levites, and probably commanded by one of the high priests. It was a combination of men who were violently opposed in many things. Yet priests and Sadducees are made one in their opposition to Jesus. (See Matt. xxii. 15-16.) If the enemies of the Gospel sink their differences for an evil purpose, should not the Church of Christ be manifestly one against the common foe? The reason for their opposition (2). The Sadducees objected to the doctrine of the resurrection; the priests objected to their teaching at all, as an invasion of their own privileges. It was not the miracle, but the word which Peter taught which roused their opposition. The name of Jesus was hated; and the resurrection was the fact that gave that name its power. The world can endure the preaching of a Christless morality, but still opposes the doctrine of the atonement through the death and resurrection of Christ. Their powerful weapon (3). Fearless witness for Christ has led many a man to the prison (comp. Jer. xxxvii. 15). Yet in spite of their efforts the work continued (4). The preachers of the Word may be in prison, but the Word itself is not bound (2 Tim. ii. 9). There is something inspiring in the view which this verse gives of the onward progress of the Gospel in spite of the puny resistance of man. Is not this a fulfilment of Psa. ii. 4?

II. PETER'S BOLD DEFENCE (5-12). It was "eventide" (3) when the apostles were arrested; on the following day a full meeting of the Sanhedrim met. Among the persons mentioned are Annas and Caiaphas, before whom Jesus had appeared, and by whose wicked plotting He had been put to death. They were mistaken in supposing that the cross would be the end of Jesus. The question put to the apostles (7) admits the fact of the miracle, and gave Peter his text for a further Gospel testimony. It is specially noted that Peter's reply was given when "filled with the Holy Ghost" (8). It was this that made him so fearless and undaunted in the presence of such an assembly.

The points of Peter's defence were these:—(a) The act performed was an undoubtedly "good deed" (9); why should they be punished for that? (b) the authority for working the miracle and the power by which it was wrought were in Jesus of Nazareth, now raised from the dead (10); (c) the Sanhedrim, so far from finding guilt in the apostles, were themselves guilty first of rejecting (11), then of crucifying, this Saviour (10); (d) through this same Jesus all salvation comes, so that rejection of Him leaves us without any other hope (12). It was a noble defence, and showed less regard for his own safety than for the salvation of those who heard it. Such a testimony, given in the power of the Holy Spirit, was a fulfilment of Luke xxi. 15.

III. THE RESULT (13-18). The first effect was amazement (13). The Council could not understand such freedom and boldness of speech in men who had never learned in the Rabbinical schools. The very deportment of the apostles reminded them of Jesus when He appeared before them. They were like Him because they had been with Him. Such a testimony from the enemies of the Gospel is invaluable. The next effect was perplexity (14-16). The man who had been healed was present, and silently bore witness to the truth of Peter's words. With such a fact before them what could they do? They knew that no law could secure a conviction of men for performing such a deed of mercy and power. The last effect was a foolish charge (17-18). Observe that it is the preaching of Jesus which they fear more than the miracle. But how could men obey such a charge (19-20)? As well command the birds not to sing, the rivers to cease their flowing. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth must speak (Luke vi. 45; Jer. xx. 9).

Learn (1) when a good work is being done Satan stirs up many adversaries. If the world is letting the Church alone may it not be feared that the Church is ceasing to be what it should? (2) The world can tolerate and support a Christless morality and a Christless philanthropy, but will oppose the preaching of a once crucified, now risen, Saviour. (3) When God's witnesses are called to suffer for Him they find special grace to meet their need. Do not shrink from a duty because it is difficult and dangerous. He who leads you in will lead you through.

OBITUARY.

MR. G. N'KWE OF WEST AFRICA.

This venerable native helper of the Baptist missionaries in the Cameroons was suddenly lately called home, through an explosion of gunpowder. His loss will be greatly felt by the missionaries, who trusted him; by the Christian native church, which was led by him; and even by the heathen, who respected him. For many years he had devotedly served his God, the mission and the people.

MISS JACKSON OF HOSHANGABAD.

Many will hear with regret of the death, on July 4, of Miss E. E. Jackson, one of the Friends' Missionaries at Hoshangabad, India. Formerly a member of Mr. Spurgeon's congregation, she was led in 1884 to offer for service in connection with the Friends' Foreign Mission Association. For 1889 she sailed with the party who went out in the autumn of that year. She at once attached herself to the work in the Girls' Orphanage, where A. L. Evens has ever since found in her a kind, devoted, and diligent helper.

MR. A. ALSOP, MANCHESTER.

We record with deep regret the death of this energetic and earnest worker among the poor and degraded in Manchester. He was carried to his last resting-place on Saturday last. A correspondent in Manchester writes: "His place is empty, and Manchester is much the poorer. The children in his orphan homes have lost a father; the roughs have lost a friend; the city has lost a great civilising agent; the Gospel has lost a powerful preacher; and the Church of Christ has lost a devoted and earnest servant."

DR. C. CULLIS OF BOSTON.

This well-known leader in the faith-healing movement in Boston and founder of the Consumptives' Home, died of heart disease on June 18. Born in Boston, 1833, he had an interesting and varied career. While known widely as an advocate of faith-healing views, his work has reached in other directions, and during his lifetime he built the Consumptives' Home at Grove Hall, the Faith Cure College in Boston, the Boydton Orphanage and Institute in Virginia for coloured children, the Chinese Mission in California, besides two schools in India, the Cancer home at Walpole, the Deaconess' House, and the Spinal Home.

MR. THOMAS COOPER.

The death is announced, at the advanced age of eighty-seven, of Mr. Thomas Cooper, who has been successively known as Chartist and poet, infidel lecturer and Christian apologist. The times have vastly changed since the political agitator was imprisoned on charges of conspiracy and sedition. Of humble birth, and naturally talented, Mr. Cooper early gave serious attention to mental culture, and was very powerful as a public speaker and writer, first as a journalist, then as a prolific author. His works on the evidences of Christianity have had a large circulation, and are still well worthy the attention of students and thoughtful Christian people.

MRS. SCOTT OF MUSSOORIE.

We hear that Mrs. Scott, Principal of the Girls' School at "Woodstock" Mussoorie, after great suffering for some six weeks, passed away on June 2. She had laboured for nearly forty years in India, both in the mission field and as the able and devoted leader in thorough Christian education. The Girls' School at "Woodstock" is recognised by all who know it, as one of the best girls' schools in India, and it has reached this high standard by the noble and able efforts of Mrs. Scott. Girls from families as far apart as Calcutta and Lahore have come to "Woodstock" for education, and they have all more or less carried away the noble impress of her soul.

REV. JOHN THOMAS, D.D.

Many will hear with deep regret of the death last week of Rev. John Thomas, D.D., of Liverpool, whose illness we have repeatedly mentioned. His ministerial jubilee was observed but a few weeks ago, he being too ill to take any part. Dr. Thomas was elected in 1885 to fill the chair of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, when Dr. Rees died before he could enter on the office. He delivered two addresses full of Cymric fire and practical wisdom on "Pulpit Power" and "Spiritual Religion: its Perils and its Power." In Liverpool, in Wales, in England and among Welshmen everywhere, the news that the voice of Dr. Thomas will never more be heard, and that his spare, active figure and snowy head will never more be seen, will come as the news of a personal loss, and in that loss Welshmen will have the deep sympathy of their English brethren. We hope shortly to give a portrait of Dr. Thomas with some account of his life and labours.

RAM CHANDRA BOSE.

This earnest servant of Christ, whose death has already been mentioned, passed away on May 30. He was a convert of Dr. Duff. After finishing his college course he acted as headmaster for many years in the L.M.S. College, Benares. Later on he joined the educational department of Government Service in Oudh. While there he came in contact with the American Methodists; their fervour and fire attracted him, and leaving his Government position he henceforth devoted his life to the service of the Gospel, accepting as a preacher one fourth of his former salary. His talents were brilliant and found scope in lectures to educated Hindus. Twice he travelled to America, where he aroused great interest in Indian missions. Latterly became an agent of the C.M.S. at Lucknow. He was lecturing in Calcutta some two months back, when his health suddenly gave way, and he returned to Lucknow to die.

Mrs. Thoburn, who was with him to the close, writes:—He knew the end was very near, but he was not thinking of heaven, of how or when he would live again, but only of seeing and adoring the King in his beauty. "All my odd notions are gone," he said with emotion, "and I am only a poor sinner, clinging to Christ."

MR. JOHN MACGREGOR ("ROB ROY").

We regret to hear that this well-known writer and Christian worker passed away on Saturday evening at his residence at Bournemouth. Mr. Macgregor had been in failing health for some time, and had for long retired from active service. He was born at Gravesend January 24, 1825, and he was the first to be rescued from the Kent, East Indiaman, when that ship caught fire in mid-ocean on March 1, and on board of which his father was at the time with his regiment. Being educated for the law, Mr. Macgregor, as a young barrister, practised open-air preaching in London; and when on his adventurous travels in many lands he ever took advantage of his opportunity to distribute Christian literature. The Open-Air Mission and the Pure Literature Society may both regard him as their founder, while in the interest of ragged school boys he also founded the London shoe-black brigades. He worked with enthusiasm in various departments of Christian work. A letter from his family says:—"The end was very peaceful, though all through the day he had terrible convulsions, but was, thank God, perfectly unconscious." There were some days of delirium, but not very long before his death a gleam of consciousness returned, and when reminded that he was going to be with the Lord, he said, "I go to see Him." The funeral was arranged for yesterday (Wednesday).

Evangelistic Notes.

Chesterfield.—Mr. A. E. Dearden has held a capital mission here with evident token of good issue.

Mr. G. B. Linton has been holding special services in various parts of Cornwall with great blessing.

Mr. William Forbes closed a Mission in Edinburgh on Sunday, 10th. Last week he held a series of meetings at St. Andrews, in the Town Hall and at the Congregational church.

Mr. W. Henry Collins, who is now in Chicago, has been holding meetings in New York and elsewhere, and hopes shortly to commence a series of special missions in various towns.

Tunbridge Wells.—Mr. Henry Varley has been having grand meetings here. On Sunday week nearly five thousand people came to hear the Gospel. Open-air meetings on the common were much blessed, and evidently a deep interest has been aroused.

Padiham.—A three weeks' evangelistic mission, conducted throughout the excitement of the General Election, has been concluded at Padiham by Messrs. Clark, Shaddock, and Philpotts, Joyful News evangelists. It is believed that much spiritual good has resulted.

Ireland.—The Methodist Mission Tent, under the charge of Rev. Jas. Kirkwood, is now at Tullinagoan, co. Fermanagh, where it is being attended by large congregations night after night. It had been previously for a month at Togherdoo, where several had been brought to know the Lord.

On Tyneside.—During the past few months, two "Out-and-Out Band" missioners, along with their Gospel Car "Victory," have been working on Tyneside. In the villages on both sides of the river services have been held both in chapels and outside, and large quantities of books sold. At Bell's-close Messrs. Young and Tindale spent ten days, during which time the whole of the place was visited, and the report is that a good work has been done in the village.

Burnham, Somerset.—We commenced our summer services for the people in this pleasant seaside resort on June 26. Our large wooden-sided Gospel tent, which for many seasons has been so much used of God in Weston-super-Mare, is now erected in the Pier field adjoining the Promenade. In addition to the daily services of preaching and Bible-readings in the tent, we conduct open-air services on the sands for the young, and also adults, when weather permits. A widening and deepening interest is being manifested, and the Christians are somewhat waking up to a sense of their responsibility in regard to the unconverted around them. For seven weeks we have had a tent at work in the large and needy district of St. Werburgh, Bristol. On July 24 we commence Gospel services in another tent to be erected at Bishopston, a populous and rapidly-growing suburb of Bristol. Prayer for rich and large blessing to accompany these efforts is earnestly asked.—JAS. A. VICARY.

Temperance Notes.

THE Victoria House of Assembly has resolved ve considerably to raise the duty on spirits, wines, a beers.

Public opinion in Canada is decidedly on the si of prohibition, and each year this sentiment ga ground.

A campaign for temperance is about to be i augurated in the Young People's Society of Christi Endeavour, U.S.A.

Mr. Thomas Rosbottom and friends concluded four weeks' Gospel Temperance Mission in the Ha market, Newcastle, on Sunday evening.

In Texas, as the result of local option, not a dr of intoxicating liquor can be had along one particul stretch of railway four hundred miles in length.

General John Bidwell, of California, has be nominated as candidate of the National Prohibiti Party for the Presidency of the United States.

Dr. Richardson has commenced to publish, The Asclepiad, a series of notes upon his work senior physician in the Temperance Hospital.

M. Pasteur, the famous Paris specialist, authority for the statement that men who habitual use intoxicating spirits are more difficult to cure bitten by a mad dog than temperate men.

Dr. Roose advises that children should be educat to do without alcoholic liquors, and says it "may granted without demur that, to the healthy in vidual, alcohol is by no means a necessary article diet."

During the last month the National Temperan Society and Publication House (New York) has h the pleasure of receiving the sum of 1000 dollars fr the estate of Mr. John B. Gough, being a lega which he left in his Will to the Society under cert conditions.

Says the Melbourne Age:—"A nation which po down its own throat every year, in the shape of b and whisky, a sum sufficient to provide the coun with two navies and two armies, and an entire ci service thrown into the bargain, is either in a diseas state of thirst, or at a very imperfect stage civilisation."

Mr. Barcroft says:—"In reviewing the legislat work of the past ten years in regard to alcohol, revealed in the Blue Books, it seems to be growing importance each year, and not only so, but we f that the tendency is in one direction only, and t direction the ultimate prohibition of the sale alcohol."

Dr. Roose, writing in The New Review on the s ject of alcohol, admits the "terrible accumulation evils, moral and physical, caused by alcoho drinks," and that these things "entitle people describe it as 'the devil in solution,'" also, that is "impossible to exaggerate" the evils of drinki Nevertheless, with strange inconsistency, he defe the moderate use of alcohol.

In Georgia, where out of 136 counties one hund have adopted Local Option and prohibited the liq traffic, a justice of the Supreme Court, in his cha to the grand jury, spoke as follows: "I have p sided as judge in almost every section of Georg and I find that violations of the criminal law nearly three-fourths as great in those counties wh whisky is retailed as in counties where prohibit is enforced and respected."

The following telegram from Zanzibar appea the other day in the London papers:—"Owing the refusal of the Portuguese Consul to allow Po guese subjects to take out liquor licences under terms of the Brussels Act, the Zanzibar Gove ment, acting at the instance of Mr. Gerald Por the British Consul-General, has decided to t measures for forcibly preventing the sale of spiritu liquors by unlicensed dealers."

A man said to have been respectable and ha working, was sentenced lately in Queensland to l imprisonment for manslaughter, the cause on own confession being drink. Said the judge, Si Lilley, "Drink, drink, drink; it's always drink t is at the bottom of the cases that come before me trial. That has been my experience in my p fessional life in this colony. I wish my country would, if they wish to be merry, be wise; and if t cannot be merry and wise, let them be wise."

At the Huntingdonshire Assizes, last week, Justice Hawkins, referring to a case of manslaugh that originated at a public-house, expressed the w that there were some means by which men could kept sober. He knew that it could not always done, but much more might be done in prevent men from over-indulgence in liquor. If a man drunk in a public-house and was supplied w liquor, and the publican himself was aware of it, deserved, said the Judge, with strong emphasis, protection from the law.

Mrs. Gilbert Kirlew addressed the last mon meeting of the Manchester Women's Christian T perance Association and Police Court Mission, spoke specially on the force of personal examp the matter of total abstinence. Mrs. Broxap st that 258 women and girls had been dealt with at Manchester police-court since January, many been restored to friends, some sent to homes, others placed in service. The Salford police sionary is also doing similar good work. friends pray for this branch of the Women's T perance Association? It may be noted that the Mrs. Macalpine was deeply interested in this ciation, and until her marriage was its secretary

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Arrangements are being made for a series of simultaneous meetings in London on behalf of the C.P.A. next November.

The C.M.S. Committee has appointed Rev. D. H. D. Wilkinson to succeed Rev. Mitchell-Carruthers as assistant secretary.

Dr. T. Chaplin is visiting the following North European Mission Stations: Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Konigsberg, and Hamburg.

Mr. Nicolla, a missionary to Jews in Ispahan, whose six months' banishment from the city has now expired, has been forbidden to return and resume his labours.

A second Protestant Van, provided for the Church Association by Mrs. Fleming and Mr. Tufnell, was dedicated to the service of God last week, and sent out on its good work.

Great and grievous has been the destruction of church property—the cathedral, the bishop's and clergy houses, synod-hall, and schools—in the disastrous fire in St John's, Newfoundland.

It is stated in The Victorian Churchman that the see of Melanesia, rendered vacant by the resignation of Bishop Selwyn, has been offered to Rev. A. Penny, vicar of Tunstall, who was formerly at work in Melanesia.

The incumbent of St. Paul's Church, Liverpool, has decided to dispense with the sermon during the summer months. A sermon, however, will be preached later on, as a separate service, for the benefit of those who may desire to remain.

Rev. W. R. Mowll, vicar of Christ Church, North Brixton, unveiled a monument on Wednesday evening in the church in commemoration of his predecessor, Canon Hussey, D.D., who officiated as minister of the church for thirty-six years.

An appeal signed by the Bishops of Bangor and St. Asaph has been issued for help towards the building of the new North Wales Church Training College at Bangor. The college, which is at present at Carnarvon, was partially destroyed by fire last summer.

The annual conference for the diocese of Canterbury was opened last Thursday at Lambeth Palace. The Archbishop, who presided, congratulated the members on the passing of the Clergy Discipline Act with the assent of both political parties. The next point of general interest which in the Upper House of Convocation he intended to take up would be that of Church patronage, and it was hoped to pass a Bill through Parliament to get rid of some of the anomalies which were at present so glaring and so offensive.

A remarkably outspoken address on Ritualism has just been delivered by Rev. R. Glover, in St. Luke's, Holloway. He illustrated the approximation of Ritualistic practices to those of the Church of Rome by describing a visit he paid to a High church. He referred especially to certain points in which the two modern forms of worship coincided, viz., the "idolatry of the Mass" and "fasting Communion." The first point was established by the facts of the elevation of the cup, the concentration of gorgeous ceremonial, altar lights, incense, and vestments at the celebration of the Mass, at which occurred, on the occasion referred to, no less than three separate rinsings of the cup by the officiating priest, a ceremony altogether void of meaning other than that the veritable blood of Christ was believed to be contained therein.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Gwonfardd Edwards, D.D., of Cardiff, has gone to America for some weeks.

Rev. R. H. Lovell has returned to Bromley from Bavaria, and resumed his ministry.

Rev. G. D. Bartlett, of Highgate, has gone for three months' work in Scotland.

Rev. Dr. Goodrich, of Manchester, held interesting services last week in Farnworth.

Rev. T. H Darlow has accepted an invitation to become minister of New College Chapel, Hampstead.

Rev. W. Morley, who has done good work at Littlehampton, has resigned, and is leaving for Australia.

Rev. J. H. Stimpson, at the eighteenth anniversary of his settlement, said that he had welcomed into the church at Darwall 374 persons.

The Summer School of Theology at Mansfield College opened on Monday, the studies embracing Biblical, apologetic, and dogmatic themes.

At the first anniversary of Rev. G. E. Thorn's work at Lower Edmonton, forty-three were admitted to church fellowship, making a total of 157 new members. The Sunday-school has increased from 120 to 370 scholars, with thirty-six teachers.

At the farewell meeting to Rev. W. J. Woods, at Clapton-park, London, on his assuming the duties of secretary of the Congregational Union, it was stated that he left his church in a highly prosperous condition, 404 persons having been received into its fellowship during his pastorate of five years.

Rev. J. B. Paton, D.D., of Nottingham, is greatly interested in a scheme for extending the influence of Sunday-schools by the formation of a home department. The plan is to divide the neighbourhood of the church and school into districts; appoint to each a visitor, who shall call at the homes of the families of the congregation and the children of the school; and form all who are willing into classes for the study of the Scriptures, the subject each week being the current International Lesson.

BAPTIST.

Interesting services have been held at Ebbw-vale, Mon., by Rev. G. Harris, of Cardiff.

After doing good work at Bridge-street, Banbury, Rev. S. Cheshire has resigned his charge.

The anniversary services at Nottingham Tabernacle have shown tokens of a good work going on.

The Baptist Congo Mission has opened a fresh station at Tungwa, where the chiefs have been asking for a teacher.

The Baptist Missionary Society holds its great Centenary celebration, mainly for Sunday-schools, at the Crystal Palace on Saturday.

Pastor W. S. Godfrey, late of the South Croydon Mission, has received a call to the pastorate of the Luton (Wellington-street) Baptist church.

Three more new chapels are to be erected under the auspices of the London Baptist Association—one at Highgate, another at South Bermondsey, and a third at Sydenham.

The annual meetings of the Cornwall Association were held last week at Truro, Rev. H. V. Hobbs being elected president for the ensuing year. The secretary's report showed that the total sum raised for foreign missions was £364 4s. 10d.

There was a large gathering at the public recognition of Rev. Robert Wood (late of Cavendish Church, Ramsgate), as pastor of Albemarle Church, Scarborough. There is already an increased attendance at the Sunday and week-day services.

A writer in The Baptist, discussing "The Question of the Colleges," admits that "hitherto the best results have not been secured by our college system," and proceeds to offer practical suggestions as to the "men to be trained," their "special training" for the pastoral office and other useful points.

The subscriptions towards the endowment of the president's chair in the Brighton Grove College, Manchester, amount to over £4000. Now that the uncertainty caused through the negotiations with the authorities of Rawdon College for amalgamation have come to an end, the matter is to be pressed to a conclusion.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The ministerial jubilee of Rev. A. L. Simpson, D.D., of Derby, is about to be held.

The work at Stafford, under the care of Rev. D. R. Cowan, is reported as flourishing and successful.

On Sunday week Rev. Dr. McEwan held a flower service in Trinity Church, Clapham, the flowers being afterwards sent to St. Thomas's Hospital.

A new wing of the Newcastle Infirmary, to be known as the "Bruce Wing," in memory of the late Dr. Collingwood Bruce, is to cost some £5,000 to £7,000.

Dr. Gibson reports that evangelistic work is being carried on successfully at Whitefield Church, Drury-lane, under the superintendency of Mr. Stark.

The church erected in Sunderland to the memory of the late Rev. John Black has, owing in great part to the generosity of Mr. James Westoll, been opened free of debt.

The Selection Committee have recommended the Presbyterian Church, Regent-square, London, to call Rev. J. Denney, of Broughty Ferry, to the pastorate, as successor to Rev. John M'Neill.

Dr. McKay, of North Formosa, gives in the Monthly Messenger a story of Dr. Gavin Ru-seli's work, which now may be regarded as a touching tribute to him who has gone so sadly and suddenly.

The Presbyterian Mission in Formosa are pushing further into the interior. A new station has been opened in an important market town, Phoa-kha; while it is hoped soon to begin work in Moa-tau, which two hundred years ago the Dutch made a centre of their Christian work.

The following note was found the other day in the collection plate at the Memorial Church, Sunderland:—"The writer when young got sixpence to put into the plate, but the sixpence was pocketed. The sixpence is now enclosed with one sovereign." There was no signature to the note, which seemed to be in a lady's handwriting.

METHODIST.

The annual assembly of the United Methodist Free Church, was held last week in Wesley's Chapel, City-road, Rev. John Truscott being elected president.

During the Wesleyan Conference at Bradford, services will be held in thirty-one circuits, and from about one thousand pulpits sermons will be preached by ministers and others attending the meetings.

The Wesleyan Missionary Society has resolved to strengthen its staff at Fort Salisbury, Mashonaland, and both European and native agents at the Transvaal will immediately start for the mission recently established.

The new Wesleyan chapel opened at Whitwell, Worksop, provides accommodation for 350 persons, and occupies a central position, superseding a badly situated and dilapidated old building, much too small for the needs of the congregation.

On Sunday week, in Westminster Abbey, Professor Jowett preached on "The Religious Influence of John Wesley." The famous Oxford professor described John Wesley's influence as greater than that of any other man since the Reformation.

During the five years for which the fund for the extension of Methodism in South Wales has been in operation it has made grants in aid of the erection of thirty-seven new chapels; thirty are in places in which no Wesleyan chapels previously existed.

The Methodist Times states that the most serious financial problem before the present Conference is the alarming condition of the Children's Fund. The present strain upon the fund will cease before the end of the century. But the debt already amounts to £18,000, and before the year of relief comes, at the existing rate of growth, it will amount then to £40,000!

The Wesleyan Methodist Extension Fund Committee, at its monthly meeting, has made grants amounting to £2,441 to thirty-six applications for aid towards new erections and enlargements of country chapels. These chapels will give increased accommodation to 6120 persons, and mean an aggregate expenditure of not less than £30,550. The Committee has under consideration a scheme for giving substantial aid to the erection of new chapels in some towns where there is a rapid growth of the population, and where without special aid such chapels are not likely to be built.

SALVATION ARMY.

Mrs. Booth's Life is to appear in a three-volume subscription edition about the beginning of October.

Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, of Brooklyn, has become a member of the Auxiliary League of the Army in America.

The twenty-seventh anniversary meeting of the Army will be held in Exeter Hall on Monday evening, the 25th inst. The General will be in command, and will give an anniversary address. Colonel Lucy Booth will bid farewell for India in the same meeting.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

A new Free Church has been opened at Moffat.

Rev. John McNeill has had a brief but successful mission at Thurso. He preached at Tain on Sunday last, and will be at Inverness next Sabbath.

A correspondent of the Dundee Advertiser complains that the filling up of vacancies in Free Church pulpits is more and more falling into the hands of small coteries in congregations.

A mission steamer for the Church of Scotland African Mission has been launched at Glasgow. The steamer will enable the missionaries to evangelise the Makololo a other river tribes, and it will convey missionaries and m sion goods from the Chinde mouth of the Zambesi to P Blantyre for the mission stations.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Revs. Jas. Salters, and W. W. Shaw, Irish Presbyteri missionaries in India, have had to return home un medical advice.

The bequest of £5000 left by Sir Wm. McArthur to fou scholarships in the Methodist College, Belfast, will beco available during the present year.

General Booth's Farm Colony.

On Monday more than two thousand Salvationists fr London visited General Booth's farm colony at Hadleig near Southend. The earlier part of the day was spent exploring the settlement and conversing with its occ pants. Major Wright, the governor of the colony, afford every explanation to the visitors. He incidentally stat that it was intended in time to reduce the number of acr given up to farming, and to increase the market garde ing acres. Of poultry and rabbits a very considerable number are being reared on the farm; and General Booth butcher's shop in the village was said to be already paying concern. Another source of revenue is in the co modious house called Park Farm, where visitors may co and board for days or weeks, or months, just as they lik Difficulties in regard to brick making are being surmounte and the colony has succeeded in making one capital kiln bricks. Three hundred men can be accommodated at t colony. At present the occupants number about 260.

After the visitors had had time to look over the sett ment and enjoy the contemplation of the scenery, wh looked charmingly fresh after the rain, and also to enjoy sight of the sea in the distance, a meeting was held und the shadow of old Hadleigh Castle, where an address w given by Miss Eva Booth. Among recent visitors to t colony was Sir John Gorst, who expressed great satisfa tion with what he saw.

Rev. H. W. Brown.

This evangelist, who recently came across from t United States, has been holding some interesting a fruitful services in Scotland. He is now in London, a may be addressed 14, Queen-square, W.C.; he is open preaching engagements. He will conduct the servic next Lord's Day at the Edinburgh Castle, Limehouse, E and next Monday will address workers at the Noon Mee ing, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

Personalia.

Rev. J. A. Clarke sailed from Antwerp on July 6, on his return to Lukolela, on the Upper Congo.

Dr. Charles Ray Palmer, of Bridgeport, has given to Yale University a scholarship of two thousand pounds in memory of his son who lately died.

Rev. H. T. Cousins, Vice-President of the Transvaal Baptist Association, has just returned to England after nearly fourteen years' work in South Africa.

Rev. B. Senior has been reappointed to Surrey Chapel, where his work has been such that he could not well be spared. An assistant has been given him to lighten the labour somewhat.

Signor Capellini, of the Military Church, Rome, is at present on a missionary tour in Sicily. His wife writes:—"Pray that a great blessing may accompany the Word distributed in new fields, and the bearer of the good news kept from illness during this season in that hot country."

Rev. N. Abraham, who has done noble work in Cape Colony, but whose health for the past eighteen months has been causing the gravest anxiety to his friends, arrived in England from South Africa on July 5. The voyage had not, however, the beneficial effect upon him that was hoped.

Rev. R. W. McAll, D.D., has received from the President of the French Republic the decoration of the Cross of the Legion of Honour, in consideration of his twenty years of unselfish devotion to the good of the poor in France. This tribute will be a help to the work of the McAll Mission, and will be pleasing news to many friends in Great Britain and America.

Mr. Eugene Stock and Rev. R. W. Stewart, of the C. M. S., have been accorded a very hearty reception by the friends of missionary work in New South Wales. They have stirred up a lively interest in foreign work, and will be pretty fully occupied to the end of July. Mr. Stock has impressed upon his hearers the duty of supporting existing missions to the Chinese, the Aborigines, and the people of New Guinea and Melanesia.

Rev. F. E. Clark, D.D., of Boston, U.S., the founder and president of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavour, is going on a tour round the world in the interest of the Endeavour movement. He sails from San Francisco on August 19, and purposes visiting the Sandwich Islands, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, China, India, Palestine, Turkey, Greece, Italy, and Spain, returning home by way of England about the middle of next June.

Rev. Jackson Wray in March last conducted Sunday and week-day services at Westminster Chapel. The great interest awakened, and the large and increasing congregations gathered Sunday by Sunday, made many wish that he could have undertaken the work continuously. A proposal was made that Mr. Wray should enter into an arrangement to occupy the pulpit for twelve months, but after consultation with eminent physicians this hope had to be relinquished. The church, however, is encouraged by his kind promise to undertake occasional service, and it is hoped that he will supply the pulpit during October.

Rev. John Truscott, the new President of the United Methodist Free Church, remarked in his presidential address last week that the great spiritual awakenings of the land—that of the Quakers in the seventeenth century, Methodism in the eighteenth, and the Salvation Army in the nineteenth—had all been characterised by the recognition of the office and work of the Holy Spirit, by the cultivation of personal holiness, and a zeal for the conversion of sinners. This was an age of construction. The Œcumenical Conference in America had distinctly spoken for Christian unity. There had been rents in Methodism, but flowers were now growing where the scars had been made.

Lower Abbey-street Gospel Hall, Dublin.

On December 31, 1835, the Gospel Hall, Lower Abbey-street, Dublin, was opened for Christian work. Thousands have since heard the Gospel within its walls simply and lovingly proclaimed by Christians of all denominations, and from almost all parts of the globe. Many who had once professed to love the Lord, but had grown cold, have been restored to the joy of his salvation, and wandering ones who knew not God are now safe in the Shepherd's fold.

Such results encourage the workers, who purpose branching out into a new sphere of endeavour, viz., visiting in the lanes and alleys of the great city, the Lord having raised up two Christian ladies, fully qualified, who have given themselves to this service. The premises just now present a very unsightly and dilapidated appearance, not having been painted for years. The expense will not exceed £25.

Communications may be addressed to Mr. Thomas H. Reilly, jun., 24, Grafton-street, Dublin.

CHRISTIAN POLICE ASSOCIATION.—It is proposed to hold a meeting in connection with the Lord's work amongst our Police Forces at Keswick during the Convention. Any one working among the police or interested in them who will be at Keswick is earnestly requested to communicate with Miss C. Gurney, 22, Station-road, Keswick.

St. Giles' Christian Mission

CHILDREN'S HOLIDAY FUND.

The Holiday Season is close upon us, and the Children attending the Sunday Schools of the St. Giles' Christian Mission are anxiously looking forward to their Annual Treat. Last year, in addition to giving a Day's Outing to

1500

Little Ones, drawn chiefly from the Courts and Alleys of St. Giles', we were enabled to send considerably over 200 for a fortnight in the country. We are anxious to do at least as much this year.

WILL YOU HELP?

Donations will be most thankfully acknowledged if sent to our Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard St., E.C., or to Mr. W. Wheatley, Superintendent St. Giles' Christian Mission, 4, Ampton St., Regent Sq., W.C.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.

Funds greatly needed to extend the work.

Irish-speaking readers are sent where required, and the work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Reports sent on application to Captain J. Kearney White, Offices, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin, and 9, Paternoster-row, London, where Donations may be sent; or to the Office of The Christian. John xiii. 35.

Please notice exact title of Society.

Christian Community.

CHILDREN'S HOLIDAY HOME.

President—George Williams, Esq.

THIS Home at Foots Cray, Kent, has been opened for the benefit of poor sickly children connected with the several Mission Halls occupied by the Society, all in localities where the poorest classes reside, and who are totally unable to pay for a holiday, and yet most urgently in need of it. The Home provides accommodation for 18 children at a time. The cost of each child is 6s. per week. Last year over 300 poor little things received the benefit, who found it to be a real boon.

To continue this for the present year an earnest appeal is hereby made to sustain this truly charitable work. Help in any form will be gratefully received by the Secretary, as under; or by the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., at the Bank, 54, Lombard-street, London, E.C.; or the Editor of The Christian.

JAMES ATKINSON, Secretary.

Blackheath.—Oct. 11 to 14. Hon. Sec.: E. P. Le Feuvre, 10, Aberdeen-terrace, Blackheath.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For children's services on Portobello sands, beginning July 25.—For evangelistic services in Raphoe, co. Donegal, conducted by Messrs. Nesbitt and Ross.

MALTA.—A correspondent writes to us: "Local lotteries are not prohibited, as was recently reported. The police superintend about three or four every week, and they take place by official sanction. For three or four Sundays there have been no sermons at the only Anglican church in Valetta, notice having been given of their discontinuance. Street preaching and tract distributing are strictly forbidden."

DISTRESS IN JERUSALEM.—Rev. A. Ben-Oliel writes:—"There is much misery and poverty among the Jews, particularly among recent arrivals. Only last Friday, July 1, I undertook to supply the tenants of the Montefiore range of houses with water. The local government has, for the first time, demanded the house-tax from them, about £2 10s. from each, and as they cannot pay, has put guards over the cisterns, and forbids them to draw water! This act is specially cruel to the children and aged in this hot weather."

FORTIETH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

"BOTH LUNGS DISEASED and HEART WEAK."—CASE of a LADY at HASTINGS.

Miss H——, of ORE, HASTINGS, whose name and address will be furnished to any bona-fide enquirer, applied to me in July last for advice and medicine.
Consumption had carried off several members of her family. Some years since she had rheumatic fever, and had been very delicate since then. Three months before writing me she took a severe cold. This was followed by loss of voice and appetite, violent cough, yellowish-green expectoration, pains in the chest, flushings, night sweats, palpitations, swelling of the feet and ankles, wasting of flesh and great weakness. Doctors reported that both her lungs were diseased, and that the heart was very weak. A patient at Bembridge, Isle of Wight, had recommended her to me.
Seven weeks elapsed, and she wrote:—"My health is much improved. Cough slight now, appetite improved, perspirations less, very little swelling of the legs and feet. I cannot speak too highly of your medicine."
In December last she writes me:—"I am quite well and strong. I can walk three miles without any fatigue. My doctor told my friends to prepare for the worst. He now looks upon me as a wonder. You can use my case should you wish, and it will give me great pleasure to testify to the value of your treatment and answer any enquiry."

NOTE.—CONSULTATIONS FREE at Coombe Lodge, Peckham, on TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings only. No charge except the usual charge for three or six weeks' supply of medicine. All Patients should read the Book first.

Street Arabs' Seaside Holiday.

The Waifs and Strays of our Homes are going (D.V.) to "Camp Out" at Littlestone-on-Sea, on Thursday, 28th July.

We are anxious to give them three weeks' change. Many of them are stunted and weakly, and we rely upon this annual outing to brace them up and start their growing. The result in many cases is simply magical.

We endeavour to make our sojourn, in a quiet, refreshing, country scene, a means of spiritual blessing, not only to the boys, but also to those living in the neighbouring villages, who are always attracted in great numbers to our Evangelistic Services by the novelty of the scene and the hearty singing of the boys.

£1 1s. covers an elder lad's railway fare and maintenance for three weeks; £5 pays the railway fare to and from of thirty-three tiny Waifs; £10 meets all the cost of travelling, and three weeks' support for twelve friendless orphan lads.

"Camping Out," a record of our Encampments from 1884-1891, may be had on application here.

Who will help in this loving service, for the Lord's sake, to "Nobody's Boys?" Would it not be an acceptable thankoffering from parents who are welcoming their own healthy, happy boys from school, to give a breath of fresh air and a glimpse of the sea to some fatherless, motherless, homeless little one? Even the smallest gift will be most gratefully acknowledged.

THE CURE OF CONSUMPTION

BRONCHITIS AND ASTHMA.

DR. ALABONE'S REMEDIES.

By the success of these remedies all barriers have been broken down, and it is now an acknowledged fact that CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, and ASTHMA are curable by this specific treatment, many thousands of cases having been abandoned as hopeless.

THE WHOLE OF THE REMEDIES ARE NOW, FOR THE FIRST TIME, AVAILABLE TO THE PUBLIC, and can be obtained from any chemist. Agent: J. Howard, 21, Queenhithe, London, E.C.

Dr. CRONIN, M.D., writes:—"You have done wonders for my patient. I hardly thought he could have improved so much under the treatment."

Dr. FAIRBAIRN, M.D., L.R.C.S., writes:—"The success of your treatment of Consumption is simply marvellous. I have had no less than 60 CASES OF CURE."

"Your remedy for Consumption has PROVED A SUCCESS in my own case, after having been GIVEN UP BY SEVERAL EMINENT PHYSICIANS." T. YOUNG, L.R.C.P., L.R.C.S., &c.

B. WATSON DAVIES, M.D., L.R.C.S. writes:—"I have great pleasure in stating that a near and dear relative of mine, who was in an ADVANCED STAGE OF CONSUMPTION when I commenced your treatment (several members of her family having died of that disease), is now wonderfully improved in all respects, and has entirely lost her cough."

Members of the medical and other professions are testifying to the extraordinary results obtained from the use of these remedies.

A TABULATED FORM FOR SELF-TREATMENT, POST FREE.

CHRIST AND THE SCRIPTURES.

By Rev. ADOLPH SAPHIR, D.D. Cheap Edition, tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards, 1s. 6d. Presentation Edition, cloth boards, 3s.; with gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"We met with this remark in the volume before us, which, as 'Christ and the Scriptures' is its great theme, we take to be its keynote: 'Christians on their deathbed invariably look to Christ alone, and to the mercy of God exclusively. They then understand clearly "righteousness without works." They see eternal life as the free gift of God.' 'Start with this,' adds the author; as much as to say, 'As you would desire to end, so seek to begin and continue.'"—Gospel Messenger.

A UNIQUE SWISS HOLIDAY FOR TEN GUINEAS.

The Review of the Churches

REUNION CONFERENCE.

A Twelve Days' Holiday with the Option of Prolonging the Holiday to Forty-five Days.

The success of the Conferences during July has surpassed all anticipations. A most admirable tone ha prevailed in all the discussions, and the conviction has been universal that the gatherings will effect great good. Fro the recreative standpoint, the pure air, splendid scenery, and glorious walks round Grindelwald have refreshed an delighted all the members of the Conference. It has been found perfectly possible to combine the most enjoyabl excursions during the day with the most animated discussions in the evening. In August no Conferences will be hel but there will be abundant opportunities for that enjoyable social intercourse between members of different church which has been one of the most profitable features of the Conference. The programme for September surpasses th July programme considerably in interest and importance, and already it has been found necessary to close the list f September 5th, but three supplementary parties have been arranged.

Full Reports of the Conferences will be published in "The Review of the Churches" for August September, and October. In the August Number the Hon. and Rev. Canon Fremantle will give h impressions of the Conference.

Notes and Comments.

EXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of Right Rev. A. R. ker, Bishop of Eastern Equatorial Africa.

Ir. Moody will (D.V.) preach at Keswick Saturday and Sunday next. After his three s' mission at Preston, August 1 to 3, ompanied by Mr. Burke, he will conduct tings at Carlisle, August 5, 6, and 7. yer will, we trust, be made for continued sing.

ith regard to the forthcoming campaign reland, a correspondent writes that Mr. dy's Belfast Committee are completing ngements for his approaching visit. A e number of citizens are anxious that Mr. dy should address meetings in the huge lion used for the great Convention in June It will seat more than ten thousand ons, and, when aisles and unoccupied es are filled, will accommodate over twelve sand persons. The exact date of Mr. dy's visit to Belfast has not yet been , but it is believed he will begin work in orthern capital by the middle or end of nst. Mr. Burke, who sang so sweetly at ghy, will accompany Mr. Moody on rish tour.

is very satisfactory to note that, despite alleged spread of Romanism in Great ain, and the development of Romish prac-, the number of Romanist Members of iament has not been increased during the t General Election. The fact is one to bankful for, seeing that, in regard to e, even toleration must always be from utside, seeing that she is in spirit and in ice essentially intolerant.

e following is in reference to a note in our written by a Dublin contributor:—

—In your issue of 21st. inst. you say: "Perhaps the most noteworthy facts in connection with cent Parliamentary elections in Ireland is that two-thirds of the Roman Catholic voters went ly contrary to the loudly-expressed will of their s and priests." Having been a candidate for an eat, and having taken a deep interest in the n throughout the country, I must be allowed this statement an unqualified contradiction. ost outstanding and startling fact about the struggle has been the triumph of the priests over the Parnellites. Apart from the Protes-onstituencies in Ulster, and two Unionist ses in Dublin, the interest of the election was d in the contest between the two Nationalist , McCarthyites or Clericals, against Parnellites i-Clericals, and the result has been the p.iests eturned 71 of their nominees against 9 of their nts. It is this absolute demonstration of the y power which makes the Protestants of Ireland e . . . It is from a feeling that some may be by your article that I ask you to insert this ation based upon the most intimate knowledge recent contest in Ireland. I could give endless les of the extraordinary priestly pressure and tion brought to bear upon the electors within n personal experience.—Yours faithfully, s essential that we rightly divide the of Truth; that we do not depreciate sion in order to magnify a later experi-and that, in seeking the promotion of ss, we do not detract from that which is ent upon regeneration. We shall not, iting the blessings which belong to life as such, enhance the possession of life more abundantly. The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ has blessed all believers with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ (Ephes. i.). The Ephesian saints were not all advanced in holiness; but, hearing the Gospel, they believed it, and on their believing were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, to the praise of the glory of his grace.

T. L. Corbett.

God's work is perfect. Every communicable blessing contained in Him who is the fulness of the Godhead bodily, and in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, is as certainly the heritage of the child born into the Kingdom yesterday as of the chief of apostles. Talents may vary, but redemption, and life, and sonship, justification and separation to God's service, sealing and anointing, baptism into the one body of Christ, and right to drink of the one Spirit—all these are the prerogative of every child of God.

One fact explains all the different degrees in which believers enjoy, and in which they convey to others, the blessings which they possess in Christ, viz., the differing measure in which they drink of that one Spirit, and therefore the different measure in which they are filled with the Spirit. How vitally important, therefore, is the command: "Be filled with the Spirit." How inestimable the privilege of being so filled.

Some of the questions recently raised in the discussion as to Inspiration do not so much affect the inspiration of Scripture as the righteousness of God. God put man under law that man might learn the depth of the Fall. Israel thought they could fulfil the law, and said, "All that the Lord hath spoken will we do and be obedient." "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth" was law, and was consistent with that dispensation. The real question is, was God justified in teaching men as they were able to learn? If the Lord Jesus Himself said to his disciples, "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now," how much less were Israel able to bear the full blaze of Gospel light when they came out of Egypt lusting after its fleshpots, worshipping its golden calf, sitting down to eat and drink, and rising up to play!

Men will question the righteousness of God's holy acts, as well as disregard his deeds of mercy. It is not for finite beings to criticise the judgments of the Infinite. Moral differences are not necessarily inconsistencies. Under the schoolmastership of the Old Covenant man was dealt with on the assumption that he was capable of moral improvement; under the New Covenant he is shown that it is impossible for such as are in the flesh to please God. The flesh must be crucified, and the spirit must be animated by the Spirit of God. The Lord Jesus Christ Himself announced this advance from the lower to the higher grade of treatment in the Sermon on the Mount: "Ye have heard, &c. But I say unto you" (Matt. v., 21-48.). Our duty is to recognise the admitted progression as according to the wise ordering of God, not to judge those who lived when the day-star was dawning by the same standard as we shall ourselves be judged by, as living in the full light of the manifested Word of God.

It is not strange that the prince of this world should desire to discredit Daniel, for if he succeeds in this he discredits the Lord Jesus, who committed Himself to what Daniel had foretold. It would be for the welfare of Christendom if its rulers studied Daniel; they would then govern with understanding of the times, as revealed by the only wise God, who sees the end from the beginning.

We are already familiar with the newspaper heading "The Labour Party," and we are becoming accustomed to "The Labour Riots;" but for the present "The Labour War" has only appeared as an American development. This increasing claim of the people to power, the way in which, half in jest and half in earnest, they are called "our masters," and the conflicts in all the countries between the governments and the peoples, indicate clearly enough the direction of present developments.

In our interesting American contemporary, The Forum, Professor Hyde has a remarkable paper on what he describes as the "impending Paganism" in New England; and, strange as it may appear, he attributes the large increase in the number of persons, both in villages and country towns, who "never go to church," and who in the census paper do not hesitate to describe themselves as "not professing any religion," to the abundance of sects, and, in a large measure, also to the "undignified competition" between the churches. The writer advocates what has frequently been urged in these columns, union in name and in effort between denominations whose differences are not on vital points of faith and doctrine.

The Sunday Opening of Museums is again being pressed by those who think such places ought to be available on the Lord's Day. We observe, for example, that a meeting, held recently, of delegates from Metropolitan Vestries and Boards of Guardians, resolved that a deputation should urge the matter upon the Government. It was pointed out, but in vain, that in one London district the opening of the Free Library had been a failure; and it is safe to say that in several provincial towns the innovation has been equally unsuccessful. It is strange that, while in France and Germany the blessings of the Day of Rest are being even more widely recognised, men who have been reared in this land of Christian privilege should desire in any measure to reduce the weekly Sabbath to the common work-a-day order.

About this season of the year, Mr. Punch generally makes a plea for the City children and their need of relaxation. "The Cry of the Children," in last week's issue, is pathetic as ever; we transcribe the closing stanzas:—

Hearken then, ye youths and maidens, favoured Children of the West, East and South and North are children, who are hungering for rest.
They have never seen the country, never heard the streamlet flow:
London pavements, London darkness, London squalor, —these they know.

Not for them to range the moorland, or to climb the mountain-side;
They must linger on in London, till the grave their sorrows hide.
From year's end to dreary year's end they must pace the noisy street.
Do you hear the ceaseless echo of their weary, weary feet?

Just one day without your wine, Sir! Madam, just one ribbon less,
And one wearied child in London from afar your name will bless.
Think, ere now you seek your boredom in fresh pleasure-draughts to drown,
Three or four benighted Millions still are left behind in Town!

Fresh and remarkable evidence of the silent spread of Christian influence in India, and of the dawn in native minds of a recognition of Christianity as a coming force, is afforded by a Hindu metrical work lately published and widely circulated among the lower orders. Rev. J. D. Bate, of Allahabad, having accidentally lighted on a copy, says that, about half-way on in the poem, there occurs a line on the reading of which he could scarcely believe his own eyes. "I rubbed them, and then read it over again. It seemed quite too good to be true, and it filled me with joy, almost to an ecstasy:

'Throughout our land to-day,
Jesus is everything, Rám is nothing.'"

This testimony, considering the quarter whence it comes, is of substantial value as an indication of progress made; and it is a genuine piece of encouragement to all those whose minds are interested in the growth of the Kingdom of the Redeemer. It is a piece of disinterested testimony from the pen of a man who had every motive for keeping silent upon such a fact, and who (we may be reasonably sure) would not have rushed forward to proclaim the decadence of idolatry so pointedly if he were not aware that he was giving utterance to a sentiment which his fellow Hindus (for whose instruction he wrote) shared in common with himself.

Judgment delivered on Monday by the Court of Appeal orders Dr. Barnardo to find and produce within three months the boy Harry Gossage, an organ-grinder's drudge, found wandering in Folkestone, rescued, cared for, and sent to Canada by the director of the institutions. What Dr. Barnardo's course of procedure may be we know not; but all will pray earnestly that he may be guided aright as to his action in the matter.

The Indwelling Christ.

How few Gentiles seem to understand the one topic on which their Apostle pre-eminently set his heart. Repeatedly in his Epistles he speaks of himself as commissioned to be a steward of the mysteries of God on their behalf. And he speaks as though love made him tell of something which had irradiated his inner life with supernatural glory, and which he could not, dare not, hoard for himself. In view of the convention at Keswick, which has been signally entrusted with the stewardship and promulgation of this same truth, it is opportune to consider once again its true import.

There are three steps in the Divine Life which follow upon a clear apprehension of three distinct and fundamental facts in God's dealings with men. We may best set forth these majestic truths by laying them on the three prepositions, "for," "with," and "in." The first fact that the soul needs to apprehend is that the Divine Man has become its substitute, dying for its sins upon the cross, and pleading for its acceptance at the throne. Then does the burden roll from the back, and the heart, long silent, begins to sing.

The next fact, the knowledge of which enters the soul like a rift of sunshine, is the consciousness that He who died for its sins has become the companion of its pilgrimage, and that He is beside it all the days, so that not a single furlong can be traversed without that Divine companionship, which, whilst it is the charm of heaven, is the heaven of earth. Thus much is realised by multitudes of saints, who never get beyond a devout appreciation of what He meant when He said "I am with you all the days, even unto the end of the age."

But there is a further fact, which the Apostle speaks of as a mystery, because it was hidden from ages and generations. Hidden in the Divine mind, it awaited a moment in the fulness of time, when previous dispensations had fulfilled their ministry of bringing the saints to a ridge of experience from which they might behold the dawn of a truth which, when once received, would fulfil the ancient prediction of an unsetting sun, an unwaning moon, an everlasting light, and the days of mourning ended for ever.

The Apostle speaks of the glory of the mystery, because all God's secrets when they are divulged, break in light. The hidden wealth of colour in the sunbeam, a mystery of beauty, is only disclosed when it smites some opposing cloud, and then it breaks into the rainbow hues that fling a glory over the abyss. The fragrance and colour hidden in the root, when revealed to the eye of man, are gathered up into flowers that seem the only untainted reminiscences of the glories of Paradise. The hidden nature of God, revealed upon the face of Jesus, encircled it with a glory that dazzled the beholders. And the mystery of the Indwelling of God, when revealed to the Apostle, emitted rays of such delight, and blessedness, and heavenly rapture, that he could only describe them as the glory of this mystery, "Christ in you, the hope of glory."

We sometimes wish that there could be a gathering of those who have apprehended something of this marvellous truth, to consider all other truths from its standpoint, and beneath its light. Questions of sin and deliverance from its power, and rest, and ministry, and Spirit-possession seem all subordinate to this unique and mighty conception, which as much transcends them as Mont Blanc transcends the Lower Alps, though they are not less part of the range from which it rises, as they are indeed the stepping-stones by which to climb its heights.

If once men would really apprehend that the Eternal God, incarnated in the person of Christ, was nevertheless prepared to tenant human hearts by his Holy Spirit, what a wealth of life, and strength, and hope, and bliss, would begin to pour forth into all the departments of their being! Well might the Apostle speak of the riches of the glory of the mystery. When a man once believes that God is in him, prepared to fulfil through him the good pleasure of his will, there is a ford to every Jordan, a passage through every Red Sea, a door in every Valley of Achor a pass through every mountain range. He mounts up with wings as eagles, and the stars become but stepping-stones across space. The word impossible is no longer found in his vocabulary, for even if he fails and faints, he is borne along by the energy of an indwelling Spirit, who flags not, who wearies not, who never waxes powerless, nerveless, forceless. The poorest character becomes rich with "the unsearchable riches of Christ,"—when Christ enters, having neither silver nor gold, but promising the believer a share of such things as He has.

"The hope of glory," says the Apostle, and in another place he says it is a hope that cannot make us ashamed. It is said of a certain scientific man that he can ascertain from time to time the rate at which a river at a distance rises after a fall of rain. "A metal organ pipe is fixed vertically in an inverted position, so that the water in the river acts as a stopper to the pipe, and the rise or fall of the water determines the note it gives when blown by a small bellows, driven by a very small water-wheel. To the upper end of this organ-pipe a microphone is attached. This is in circuit with a wire leading to a town station at some distance, where there is an exactly similar organ-pipe, which can be lowered into a vessel full of water while it is sounding. By means of the telephone the note given by the pipe at the river-side is clearly heard at the town station. The organ-pipe at this station is lowered or raised by hand until it gives the same note. The length of the organ-pipes under water at the two stations are then equal, so that the height of the water in the distant river is known."

This will afford us an illustration to set forth the truth of which the Apostle speaks. In our hearts there is a duplicate of the glory of Heaven. He who is the glory there is within us, and we know Him in the fulness of his indwelling life, his tenderness, and strength and beauty; we hear the note which is already sounding through the realms where He reigns, and we can gauge something of the fulness of their bliss. Such are the riches of the glory of the mystery of an indwelling Christ, which is the hope of glory; and so long as conventions like Keswick accentuate this truth they are performing an invaluable service for the universal Church of Christ.

WAITING FOR CHRIST.—True waiting for Christ is best expressed in the quiet discharge of accustomed and appointed tasks. The right place for the servant to be found when the Lord comes is "so doing" as He commands, however secular the task may be.—Dr. Maclaren.

THE SHILLING BIBLE issued by the Trinitarian Bible Society, 7, St. Paul's-churchyard, E.C., is a very useful edition. There are six coloured maps, and the book is bound in leather, and very attractively finished. It will be welcome for presentation to Sunday scholars.

THE ABBEY-ROAD MESSENGER (1d. monthly. R. Stone, 22, Boundary-road, N.W.) is a model of what a local church record should be. The August issue contains several very instructive articles, besides rendering account of work by Pastor H. E. Stone and others in St. John's Wood.

The Great Charge.

BY REV. I. R. VERNON,

AUTHOR OF "THE HARVEST OF A QUIET EYE," "GLEANINGS AFTER HARVEST," &c.

"Do the work of an Evangelist."—2 Tim. iv. 5.

This was St. Paul's charge to Timothy, first ishop of Ephesus. It embodies, however, in ief, the charge, given to every one of his fol-wers, of the Great Shepherd and Bishop of r souls.

"Evangel," in Greek; "Gospel," in Eng'ish; th, we know, have for meaning, "Good Tidings." hat a day was that for the world when the st Evangelist was sent from the Throne to the rowful and sin-blighted earth: sent with the mmission, "Do the work of an Evangelist." For e first Evangelist was the Herald Angel, and s announcement to the shepherds the first spel, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of eat joy, which shall be to all people. For to you is born this day in the city of David a viour, which is Christ the Lord!"

"Go and tell the good news!" With what joicing of heart the "Angel," the "Mes-nger," received the message. For his being s saturated with love to God, therefore, to d's creature, fallen, yet made in the Creator's nge. Nor, the message given, could the angelic st refrain: "Suddenly there was with the ngel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising d." There is joy among them over one sinner at repenteth. What joy, then, over the demption of a world!

Love to God, that is the fons et origo of evan-listic work. "Lovest thou Me?"—then "Feed sheep." And, surely those other sheep which e has, not yet in the fold, for whom, neverthe-s, He gave his life:—these are committed as a st sacred charge to those who, to his appeal, uld answer, "Yea, Lord, Thou knowest that I ve Thee!" Of that great Atonement which e Son of God had wrought with so much n and suffering, so much love and con-scension, He committed to his disciples the nouncement to the whole world.

"Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all e nations."—St. Matt. xxviii. 19.

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the spel to the whole creation."—St. Mark xvi. 15. Romans viii. 22.

That was more than eighteen hundred years o. How is it that many millions yet, even w, remain ignorant of the Advent, to this our dened earth, of the Saviour of the world? w is it that not yet "each remotest nation has ard Messiah's Name"? It is because of the guor of Faith, and the decay of Love.

He calleth his own sheep by name. "Simon, n of Jonas!" And his sheep, his own sheep ognise the call, and implicitly follow. They ow his voice, and believe, not because of the ing of others, for they have heard Him them-ves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, Saviour of the world. And in the true fol-ving Him, the sheep must necessarily become, their turn, shepherds. Well has it been said at "it can be nothing but receiving a revela-n which reveals nothing that can account for n being apathetic in spreading it." To have, ced, heard the voice, and to have followed its ding into the pastures of tender grass and the ters of quietness, and to be content to enjoy se in a selfish loneliness, would be to act the t of those lepers, before they, in the abund-e of the Syrian camp, reflected concerning, famine-stricken multitudes, who knew not of s supply: "We do not well; this day is a of good tidings, and we hold our peace!" s not too much to say that the necessity to ngelise, the "Woe is me," unless to my ver, and beyond my power, I am furthering sionary work, at home and abroad—that this sion for souls is an indisputable proof of true rituality, i.e., real love for the Master. Yes, e missionary work in its entirety as a trust-rthy thermometer to show heat or coldness in devotion to Christ. And, remember, that loves not to see that thermometer abiding at perate. "I would thou wert cold or hot!"

Have I then"—let each one ask who does pro-Christ-following—"Have I indeed heard His e calling me by name?" What is the certain of this? Simply the having implicitly wed Him. "He calleth his own sheep by name, the sheep follow Him, for they know his e."

nd in what does that voice speak more clearly n in this command to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to all the nations, beginning at Jerusalem?

How can any claim to love Him, to be follow-ing Him, who are dull-hearted concerning this parting charge of our risen and ascended Lord? "Beginning at Jerusalem."—And do any, save a mere handful of His avowed followers, give work, self-denying, laborious work, to the conversion of Israel, the Mohammedans, the Heathen? Is not slackness the rule, zeal the exception, in the exertions made by, shall we say, the more part of those who profess to be not of the world, but of Christ?

OUGHT THESE THINGS SO TO BE?

We need a great wave of love to the Lord to pass over the Christian world—love to the Master, and hence, and hence only, devotion to his cause, utter following of his command. Then, as did He, men and women in abund-ance would be found ready to leave the comfort and peace of the well-ordered and protected fold, and to go out into the wild and desert places, amid the briars and the pits, and the ravening beasts, counting not their life dear unto them, if they might lead from their dreary wanderings the sheep that are without the fold, and bring them, from their poison-food and draughts of death, to the green pastures and the still waters which they enjoy who follow the Lamb (who is also the Good Shepherd), where-soever He goeth. Then, as did his first followers, men and women would be ready at his call, to give—not the grudged guinea, and the un-gracious shilling, but to give up, if need be, "houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands," for his name's sake.

> Were the whole realm of nature mine,
> That were an offering far too small;
> Love so amazing, so divine,
> Demands my life, my soul, my all!

To sing thus, even emotionally, with the voice is not difficult. It is well, afterwards, to search and see whether the action of the life accords with the profession of the lips.

"If ye love Me, keep my commandments."

And He will accept no other test. "Why call ye Me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say?"

And his own sheep must really follow Him; not in profession only, not in intention, but in deed. "He that is not with Me, is against Me."

* * * * *

"A stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him, for they know not the voice of strangers."

May not this word of the Good Shepherd explain to us the want of enthusiasm which, as regards mission-work, we certainly have to deplore? Can they bear this test who profess to be of Christ's sheep, to have heard his voice, and to be followers of Him in verity? Do they flee from strangers? There is much food for thought, and for searching of heart, in this reflection.

"No man," the Lord says, "can serve two masters." And have not Christ's followers fallen into the way of trying to do this—of making too great concessions to the demands of the world?—its demands upon their time, its demands upon their money? Have not mere luxuries become as though necessities in our day? Do we endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ? Is not much money spent in self-pleasing, in satisfying the requirements of the world, in keeping up appearances, in entertain-ments not really hospitable, but hollow and in-sincere? Is not much time spent in "strenuous idleness," in excessive recreation and mere worldly amusement, in fulfilling the conven-tionalities of our modern,

ARTIFICIAL, UNEARNEST LIFE?

Is not the creed of the day too much, even among religious people, "All things are lawful for me?" and this even without the check upon it, "Not all things are expedient."

There is a decided loss, it seems to me, in our day, of the protest which the mode of thought called "Evangelical" used to make against occu-pations and amusements which may be described as merely worldly. There may have been excess in the earnestness of the protest; but in this world laxity is more dangerous than severity, and more common. This laxity has crept over the observance of the Christian Sabbath, and, indeed, over the consideration of the serious responsibility, as a whole, of the Talent of the use of our Time. And, if in this, and in the matter of strictness of life and of careful stewardship of income, there be slackness and indulgence, for self-denial, it is a sure sign that the world is gaining and that Christ is losing ground in the heart. The world and Christ! Modern Society would make these at one. But this cannot be. The world is strange, nay, is inimical, to Christ. He separates, in his prayer, his own sheep from the world, "I pray for them, I pray not for the world." He is, indeed, the Saviour of the world; but in this special prayer He makes a distinction between those outside the fold—hostile, many of them to the Shepherd and to the sheep—and those whom He calls his own.

And these his own are, indeed, to go into the world, and compel those outside to come into the fold. They are to overcome the world, to bring captives out of it for their Lord. But this is not to be done by yielding to its blandishments.

"The friendship of the world is enmity with God." "The voice of a stranger will they not follow."

Is it not the endeavour to follow both the Shepherd's voice and the invitations of the "stranger" that makes so many half-hearted, vacillating Christians? Is not the world, with its demands on time and money, the great enemy of evangelical work? The world is, in truth, Christ's antagonist, Anti-Christ. It is the destroyer of ardour for his service, of enthusiasm, of devotion. If talents, time, fair prospects, a large fortune, a brilliant career, are sacrificed—yes, that is the world's word—in Christ's service, does not the world lament

SUCH "FANATICISM"?

And are we not apt, in our careful listening for the world's voice, to grow dull of hearing to the voice of the Beloved? Do we not, who should dedicate all we have and hold to his service, too often make a compromise, and "keep back part of the price"?

Yet we cannot deceive Him! He knows his own sheep, in that they know his voice and follow Him. And a stranger will they not follow.

Yes, the world is a foe to enthusiasm. "Above all," she says to Christ's disciples, "no zeal!" Nor is it possible to be zealous for Christ and well in with the world. He demands sacrifice, whole devotion. But the world also demands this. For the world's requirements there are volunteers enough: nor does the world grudge giving up her sons and daughters to devotion to the world's requirements.* It has been noted how readily it yields these to dangerous service, and to deadly climates — soldiers, civilians, merchants, en-gineers, artizans, until the stream has to be checked because it is superabundant. But when it is the requirement of Christ that calls upon us, then the old begin to grudge and to deprecate, and the young fall back; and, "alas! this stream, hitherto so ample as to need rather to be checked than stimulated in its flow, becomes a faint trickle scarcely to be discerned. Provision for this world's needs—wealth, power, honour—for these prizes there is pushing and jostling of eager crowds. But those are few indeed to whom the prize is precious of souls, each one of whom is loved by our Father who is in heaven, and for whom Christ upon the cross shed, drop by drop, the blood of the Son of God."†

> 'Tis a point I long to know,
> Oft it causes anxious thought;
> Do I love the Lord, or no?
> Am I his, or am I not?

For such anxious thought and troubled ques-

* The late Dr. Bush, of the American Board of Missions, had a gift of rare eloquence, with which he addressed con-gregations upon his favourite topic—foreign missionary effort. But few were ever cognisant of a most pathetic fact in his own life. He had a lovely daughter just budding into early womanhood, upon whom all his hopes were centred. He had given her every advantage of education and social position, and she had graduated with high honours, and with more than the usual accomplishments of social aspirants. She was as the apple of his eye to her father, who anticipated many happy years in her society, now that she was exempt from school duties.

It was at this time that Dr. Bush preached a sermon famous for its pleading pathos, asking for missionary labour. He addressed himself to his audience with a fervour that was overpowering. He demanded youth, beauty, talent, all to be laid upon the altar of sacrifice. He addressed himself especially to the young ladies pre-sent, and drew a vivid picture of the reward which awaited a life of self-abnegation, ending with an eloquent appeal that touched every heart and bowed every head in tears.

Then one beautiful girl arose and went forward, her face glowing with the zeal of inspired purpose.

"I will go, my father," she said, in a firm voice.

It was his own cherished daughter.

He had never thought of this! Stricken to the heart, he walked home like one distraught, and entered his library. A small volume of poems lay upon the table. Mechanically, he took it up and read—

> "Oh fond, O fool, and blind,
> To God I gave with tears,
> But when a man like grace would find,
> My soul put by her fears."

It was like a voice of heavenly censure to the grudging father. From that moment he accepted the sacrifice in the spirit it was offered, and which he had himself in-spired. His daughter became a missionary, and carried out to the letter the advice he had given so bravely to others, and which had come home to his own.

† Bp. Douglas, 1573.

tioning there is his own answer, his own one test—"If ye love Me, keep my commandments."

And what a great and momentous commandment must that be—the last He gave before his Ascension, the parting charge as He went, to be seen no more by eyes of mortal man until He shall appear again to reckon with his servants. How strange that those two most solemn of all commands—that one bef re He died for us and that one before He ascended for us—should be the two the least heeded, the most disregarded, by those named with the Name of Christ.

Consider this last command, this most sacred of sacred charges—"I have died for you, for the world. I have redeemed you, redeemed mankind, not with silver and gold, but with the price of My own blood. I, your God, the eternal, the 'I AM,' was made flesh, and bowed my anointed head as low as death—even the shameful death of the cross—for the salvation of man. Go into all the world, beginning with my chosen people, who have rejected Me, but for whom I have prayed; tell the good news to all the nations, yea, to all creation that groaneth and travaileth in pain; herald the Birth, the Atonement, the Resurrection, the Ascension, of the world's Redeemer; go to those bound with the chains of sin and overshadowed with the fear of death, proclaiming the glad heralding, 'I am the Resurrection and the Life,' saith the Lord; 'he that liveth and believeth in Me shall never die!'"

Tell the good news, the Gospel, to the whole world; bring to tired hearts—

> The mighty answer to earth's asking,
> Prophets and kings desired to see, in vain!

"Freely ye have received, freely give."

Is it not a great command? Assist Me! The Lord of all deigns to ask your co-operation; aid Me in causing Me to see of the travail of my soul. What a momentous charge! And through the centuries since, how many millions have, through the apathy of Christians, been suffered to live in ignorance of the one Atonement, of the great Salvation, and to die in the dark, not knowing whither they were going!

Where has been love to the Lord? Where the burning zeal of the early disciples? A few began the work; to a mere handful was the charge at first committed. But each, as he received the good news, felt himself compelled to accept the Master's charge, and to pass it on. As with the mountaineers, their Chieftain's sign, and leaving, at the summons, tears, joy, labour, recreation, to carry it on, so, with each new convert, the Cross of Christ was to be passed from hand to hand. Have not we, in our favoured land, received the sign by means of the zeal of missionaries, long ago? Have we not, we specially, the message given us to pass on, restored to its ancient purity? Ought not each, who has indeed received it, with eager heart, with straining foot, to carry the summons to others; the summons to come from darkness to light, from the power of Satan to the freedom of Christ? Each new convert, as he receives, is also bound to pass on, the Gospel; and he is no true disciple, who is not also an Evangelist. It is not with the lips only, but with the life, that Christ's command may be carried out. By self-denial, earning money to further the work; by continual and instant prayer, by speech to others, by dedication of their life to the cause where that may be done without going out of the path of home-duty; by advocacy of it, in season and out of season, the work may be carried on by even the weakest and least influential. Even two mites, which make a farthing, may purchase tracts which may found a church.* To beat up recruits for a Missionary Meeting announced in a parish, this most useful work would be in the power of many. The old saying is here so true—"Where there is a will there is a way."† And every helper is required. It is a large command.

There is not only the first heralding of the news—not only the requirement to make disciples. The great doctrine of the Atonement, in all its fulness and sufficiency, has to be made known; and then, further, the duty of obedience to be enforced. Not preaching the Gospel only without teaching obedience, nor teaching obedience only without preaching the Gospel. The former would lead men to dream that they might safely sin, because of the Grace of God. The latter would render the Gospel itself nugatory. St. Paul visited and tended the churches that he had founded. And converts need building up. The work of the Holy Spirit was needed when the work of the Redeemer was completed. And we are to be fellow-workers with that Spirit; the instruments of his working. Even as the Apostles, having themselves received the gift, passed it on, forthwith, to "about three thousand souls." We must "make disciples," and also "teach them to do all things which the Lord has commanded." And earnestly—if they be indeed His disciples—teach them not to omit obedience to this very command, which He, ere His Ascension, gave to be binding upon all.

Let, then, the light first be lit in our own heart. Let its attractive and warming brightness shed its kindly radiance forthwith into our own homes and into our own neighbourhood, that those eager for foreign fields may not shrink at the question, "What have they seen in thy house?" that those nearest to us may see, and be won, by the mild and cheery gleam, even as benighted wanderers on some wide plain draw near gladly, for guidance and for shelter, to the humble ray shed, it may be, from some unpretending home.

LET OUR LIGHT SO SHINE

But let us not rest, as a goal, at personal religion; not even on home duties; not on home missions. Let us extend our sympathies, extend our work, and cast abroad the brightness of the beacon of our life. The most earnest home-worker is not, cannot be, exempt from that responsibility laid by her Lord upon the whole Church, and upon every member of it—"Go and preach the Gospel to all nations." "Do the work of an Evangelist."

Let every one, therefore, of his followers throw heart and soul into obedience to his charge. Let intense interest in it be aroused. Let us pray for it (St. Matt. ix. 37, 38); persuade for it; contribute to it; deny self for it. To these ends let us study its subject-matter, read its literature, be acquainted with its heroes and its martyrs.

And while men and women, alas! too few, but a sacred few, are giving up all—friends, home, lands, parents, life—to follow Christ, the Martyrs' King, and to declare his name and plant his cross in lands where the Gospel is yet unknown; while these are giving up so much, let not Christians at home be giving up nothing, doing nothing, in the mission cause. How little in earnest the most are about it; how, too often, cold water is thrown upon the heat of enthusiasm. How faint and feeble is the response to the appeal for help in this supreme work.

The love of Christ burns but dimly in most hearts, even of those where it does burn at all; else there would be no need of the vain entreaties which now besiege the apathy of our Christian land; else volunteers would be pressing in, and funds be abundant.

Henceforward let those claim their privilege who have hitherto let it lie uncared for. Let those redouble their labours who have worked in the cause at all.

The work of an Evangelist! Think what that is. It was an Angel's office, and yet the child and the penitent may embrace it; may carry the comfortable light into earth's dark places; may tell the bound, of a Deliverer; the sorrowful, of a Comforter; the orphaned, of a Father's care; the sinful and the lost, of One "Who cometh in righteousness, MIGHTY TO SAVE!"

† "THE OLD MAN'S WALK."—"I am this day called to bury an old man, eighty-eight years of age, who used to subscribe 10s. yearly to the society's funds. He was a clothier, and had saved a little money, which was lost by his sons entering unsuccessfully into larger manufactures. On the following season of collecting subscriptions I called upon him and said: 'I suppose I must not now ask you for your subscription, as you have lost so much?' He replied: 'Nay! I have summed (Yorkshire for "saved") it up!' And he counted out from a drawer 10s. in silver and copper, saying: 'I have nought now but what my lads allow monthly for railway fare to Huddersfield and back, and I'VE WALKED IT!' That is to say, that ten years since, when seventy-eight years of age, this poor old man had walked no less than 120 miles to manifest his sense of the value of the Society and of the services it had rendered in his own parish. I related this anecdote when speaking for the Society at T—— W——, closing my speech with a call on the audience for a sacrifice equivalent to that of Abraham Taylor. The response was £50."

THE PRINCE OF PREACHERS.*

MR. SPURGEON AS SCHOOL USHER.

Soon after his conversion, the lad becomes usher in a school at Newmarket (Mr. Swindell and joins the Congregationalists of that to "He was there" (says Professor J. D. Eve himself a teacher at that time in the sa school), "rather small and delicate, with p but plump face, dark brown eyes and hair, a bright, lively manner, with a never-failing fl of conversation. He was rather deficient muscle; did not care for cricket or other athl games, and was timid of meeting cattle on roads."

From the same authority we learn that "was proficient in the subjects taught in middle-class schools of those days." Latin mathematics seem to have been more especi his forte. In a diary which he kept, Profe Everett notes the fact that Mr. Spurgeon not go with the rest to see the races, not thi ing it right to do so. He also describes hi possessed of "a wonderful memory for passa of oratory which he admired;" and as delight to give perfervid descriptions of rousing prea ing services which he had attended at Colches Fair. He speaks of him, too, as "a delight companion, cheerful and sympathetic; a g listener as well as a good talker." "He was cast," he says "in a common conventional mou but had a strong character of his own."

From Mr. Spurgeon's own lips we have lea that his experience of chapel life while at N market was the reverse of stimulating. Congregational cause was there at a low e there was no trace of any spiritual movement the place, and such a thing as a conversion not been heard of for at least a generati Howbeit if there was stagnation in the cha the Sunday-school soon felt the throb of new in their midst. At one of the teachers' meeti the suggestion was adopted that the m teachers should in turn give a few words address on the lesson at the close of the sch alternating in so doing with the superintende "My turn," says Mr. Spurgeon, "came in course. After I had spoken, the superintend requested me to take his place on the follow Sabbath in addressing the school; and, whe had done this, he asked me further to keep on that line; as I did so well. But to this I murred, not deeming it fair to the other teach 'Well, on Sunday week I shall expect you give the address in my stead.' The preced instituted soon became a kind of usage; so t for a time it was usual for one of the teach and myself to speak on alternate Sabba Speedily something else followed. The o people took to coming also when I spoke; that ere long in such numbers that the audit looked more like that of a chapel than a scho a circumstance which the old pastor, jealous the seeming invasion of his province, did quite like."

Thus early does the youth begin to make mark, and to foreshadow the unique succ which all through life attended him as an pounder of the Word of Life. A weak nature moulded by circumstances; a strong nat makes its own environment. As yet he is merest lad, and hardly that if muscular stren and skill are to be the standard of computati but in soul he is of man's estate, a young pri in spiritual things come to rule, and not t ruled by, the things that are. His soul is gre than his surroundings; a diligent scholar w no leaning to the pedantic; a force but di revealed, yet even now describing in its hidden depths first, the greatness of its orbit.

A home of rest has been establish Brighton.

SAILORS' ORPHANS.—The annual meeti the Sailors' Orphan Girls' School and Home place last week at the Home at Hampstead. Ad Sir John Corbett presided and Lady Corbett tributed the prizes. Eighty-two sailors' c daughters were reported in the Home, and tw more were elected for admission into the institu where they are clothed, maintained, educated, trained for domestic service. The Admiralty tains a number of girls in the Home, in additi those elected by the subscribers.

LAURENCEKIRK.—A Conference, under the auspices of the Auchterarder Evangelistic Association, was held on July 23, in the Congregational Church, Laurencekirk, the subject being "Life in Christ." Various aspects of truth were clearly presented by Mr. and Mrs. Davidson, of Inchmarlo, Banchory; Miss V. Hislop, Auchterarder; and by three evangelists. The attendance was good.

GUZERAT.—We are glad to note that the Christians of the Presbyterian Mission in Guzerat recently met for three days to consider the state of the church and to quicken and deepen their spiritual life. A variety of services was held, and many received an impulse towards a higher life. It was stated at one of the meetings that in twenty-two years the Christian community had increased from 534 to 2162.

Christian Endeavour Convention.

The International Convention of Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavour was held in New York City, July 7-10, inclusive. Upwards of thirty thousand men and women, coming from every state in the Union, from Canada, Great Britain, Spain, Australia, Ceylon, India, Syria, Africa, China, Japan, and the Sandwich Islands, assembled at the meetings, which were held in Madison Square Gardens, and addressed by many well-known Christian workers. The garden is a big audience room, but it would not contain half the delegates who sought admission. More than twelve thousand persons were packed on the floor and along the sides of the great building at the first meeting.

At the opening gathering, Mr. E. P. See, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., Brooklyn, delivered an address, which struck a good note for the entire proceedings. Premising that the presence of the Holy Spirit was needed in order that the Convention might be productive of good results, he said three words will indicate the attitude we ought to be in, to receive the largest measure of spiritual blessing. They are "Desire," "Surrender," and "Expectation." The Spirit is sensitive and will not go where He is not desired. We can have just as much of the Spirit's presence and power as we unitedly want to have. Surrender is the second condition. Some people are afraid to surrender themselves entirely to the guidance of the Spirit because some cherished sin stands in the way. We must let go of sin if we are to get hold of the Spirit. Our attitude then should be one of expectation. Having fulfilled the conditions, the result is as sure as the promises of God.

The service of song throughout the Convention was led by Mr. G. C. Stebbins and other friends, while Mr. I. D. Sankey was present as a speaker as well as to sing some of his well-known solos. There were addresses of hearty welcome by Dr. C. F. Deems, of New York, and Dr. A. C. Dixon, of Brooklyn. The founder and president of the movement, Dr. F. E. Clark, of Boston, was warmly received, and he had the honour of presiding over several of the most important meetings.

PRESIDENT MERRILL E. GATES.

In a thoughtful address on the first day, President Merrill E. Gates, of Amherst College, explained the secret of successful Endeavour. He said: Endeavour is the secret of advance—the evidence of life. When an organism makes no endeavour as against its environment, it is dead. Endeavour makes all the difference between failure and success. While to "abide in Christ" is the secret of power for the Christian, unless there be the steadfast purpose and the strong endeavour to abide in Him, the Christian will instead abide too much in self and in the world, and failing to abide in Christ will not "bring forth much fruit." Yet if the highest result of all endeavour be simply to abide in Christ, and to have the life of Christ abide in us, surely there must be a Divine secret in this high endeavour. To abide in Christ is not to be passive, in the ceaseless, world-wide struggle between right and wrong. It is to be gloriously active and victorious in that struggle.

The true meaning of this word Endeavour, which gives a substantive value to the name of these Societies, can be understood only when you take with it the all-important adjective which precedes it. It is not the endeavour of mere restlessness seeking a change; it is not the unsanctified endeavour of wilfulness determined merely to make things different in order to make itself felt. It is Christian Endeavour, that is the reason for the being of these Societies. The "hiding of their power," the "secret of their strength" lies in that word Christian. The movement is to succeed, not because it is a popular movement of great numbers of young people associated in endeavour, however fiery-hearted and strong, but it is to succeed because it is Christian, and just in so far as it is Christian, and by no other power than the power of Christ, and through you only in proportion as the power of Christ is in you and works through you.

In that text so often quoted to make young men rejoice in their youth, "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong," the true and only source of the strength of young manhood, the only power that can redeem it from the awful moral weakness that always attends the vain overestimate of one's own strength, is given in the context as the reason why those young men to whom John wrote were "strong," because, he says, "the Word of God abideth in you." No young people, singly or in associated effort, are strong unless "the Word of God abideth in them." And just in so far as that Word of the Living God abides in you and makes you truly Christian, just so far and no further will you and the Societies you represent succeed in the work we have at heart.

As Christian Endeavour Societies you will succeed, and will bless the world. If the relative importance of these factors is changed, if the youthful characteristics, or the Society, or the endeavour becomes more prominent, you will fail! The secret of power lies for these Societies in the heart-life of the individual Christians who are enrolled upon the lists of members. If one by one the members live close to Christ, the Society will be strong. The Kingdom of God comes to human hearts one by one. That Kingdom prevails, as one by one loving hearts are made wholly loyal to Christ our King.

A personal loyalty to Christ that is ready for any service comes when we see clearly and say lovingly:—

> Thine was the life that was given
> And mine was the life that was won.

In the sweet consciousness of a redeeming love, unmerited, unlimited, measured only by the Father's boundless love of Christ, who says, "as the Father hath loved me," may each one of you find anointing for larger service.

Mr. J. W. Baer, general secretary of the United Society, had prepared an elaborate report. After eleven years' work the movement is now represented by 21 080 regularly reported societies, associated with thirty different evangelical denominations, and having a membership of 1,370,200. The enrolment of societies, ordinary and junior, still goes on. At the time of the last international convention 168,162 of the membership were in the associate lists. During last year over 120,000 of the members became church members.

THE FOUNDER OF THE Y.P.S.C.E.

Dr. Clark described the movement in its beginning and development. The four principles are: pledged individual loyalty, consecrated devotion, energetic service, interdenominational fellowship. He said: The only ground on which Christians can unite is the practical ground of Christlike effort—endeavour. They cannot unite on doctrinal grounds or on grounds of church polity. They can unite in Christian effort, which requires no oneness of doctrine or polity, no organic union, no ecclesiastical sameness. I rejoice that everywhere the denominations are accepting this thought, and more and more are recognising the Society in a broad and brotherly way.

Among the other speakers were the Hon. J. W. Foster, Secretary of State of the United States, and President J. W. Bashford, of the Ohio Wesleyan University. The latter urged Endeavourers to stand by the Word of God. He said: We must give our obedience to the laws of God which were laid down for man's material advancement, before the plague can be abated. We must obey the laws of the Old Testament as well as the laws of the New. The Old Testament is not a last year's almanac. It is the doctrine of law for man's guidance on earth, as the New Testament is the doctrine of love of Christ.

The early morning prayer-meetings were largely attended. On the second day there were five thousand persons at this six o'clock gathering. There was a quiet hour for pastors, with two-minute speeches, followed by a series of one-minute testimonies by delegates. A feature of the second day was an on "Watchwords for the Twentieth Century." The Church needed by the American future must be scientific, Biblical, and practical. It must be scientific by intellectual supremacy over rationalism, by the courage to think syllogistically, and on its knees, and to the thirty-two points of the compass. It must be Biblical by the spirit of the Founder of Christianity, by finding in the Holy Spirit a present Christ, by a sense that the nations are a theocracy and our Lord the world's Lord, by the doctrine of sin, by the doctrine of the atonement, by the hope of immortality, by a fair and fixed gaze on an eternal judgment. It must be practical by enlisting all believers in religious effort, by making human legislation a close copy of natural law, by leadership in all just popular reforms, by righteousness as a river, by everyday integrity and holiness to the Lord written on the bells of the horses, on bank vaults, and on the very dust of the streets, and by making all secular pursuits spiritual avocations.

Scores of earnest Endeavourers followed with short reports. Mr. Whitelaw Reid having said some hearty words, pleas were put in on behalf of India, China, and Africa by natives of those lands. Mr. John Wanamaker, Postmaster-General, expressed a conviction that the Society is the outgrowth of the great movement that swept over the world for young men. It was seen what young men could do for young men, and young people of the Church could do for all the young people, down to the smallest girl and boy that came under Christian influence. And so in this simplest, most practical, most commonsense way, on unsectarian lines, this brightest star in the Christian world has risen, sending out its pure light and its beneficence over the final years of this closing century, to usher in the dawn of a new century to the blessedness of Christian living all the world around.

Another speaker was Mr. William McNeill, who is described in The New York Times as "a bright-faced, solidly-built young man of twenty-one or so, possessed of a fine delivery, and an earnestness of expression that put him in touch with his hearers at once." He was introduced as a young Scotchman studying for the ministry in Chicago, and a brother of the famous preacher John McNeill, who until recently was pastor of the Regent-square Church in London. He spoke in warm terms of the Society and its work.

On the third day it was found that fully forty thousand people had gathered to the Convention, and the proceedings were stimulating them to new life and vigour in Christian testimony.

MISSIONARY CALLS.

Dr. Philip Schaff having taken part, Dr. Josiah Strong discoursed on Christian Endeavour and Home Missions. He said: Scattered as is this English-speaking race, more than one-half of its members are already found in the United States. North America constitutes seven-twelfths of the possessions of this race, and here its empire is unsevered, while the remaining five-twelfths are fragmentary and scattered over the earth. North America is twice as large as all Europe, and fully capable of sustaining 1,500,000,000 souls—the present population of the globe. Surely this majestic continent is to be the home of this majestic race, and from this land it will mould the future of mankind. This being true, the Christianisation of this country is important beyond exaggeration. The importance of evangelising a nation is not a question of numbers. It was more important that Martin Luther should be converted than that a thousand other German monks should see the light. My cry is not save America for America's sake, but save it for the world's sake.

"Giving for the cause of God" was the subject of two addresses, and then came foreign missions, which were advocated by Dr. H. C. Mabie, who said: Christian Endeavour Societies may recruit the ranks of the workers, now so meagre and so oft depleted. My own denomination, the Baptists, has lately been seeking for a whole year to find twenty-five new men for its great Telegu mission, where we have over fifty thousand converts, and I blush to say we yet lack several of the members asked for. Christian youth of our American churches, I haven't much of an estimate of a disciple who has reached twenty-four years of age and who has never felt like saying, "Here am I: send me." Not all are called to go, but some are.

On the fourth day there were simultaneous meetings in three large buildings. Rev. E. R. Young told the story of his work among North-West Indians. The Temperance question and Sabbath duty were dealt with, and a warning word was spoken against old Buddhism, which is to-day being presented in a somewhat modern dress. The religious possibilities of the World's Fair were considered, and a few words on consecration followed.

The memorable proceedings were made joyous by several songs from Mr. Sankey, who daily rendered some of his favourite solos. In one of his brief addresses he described his recent work in England. He added that Mr. Moody is a strong friend of Christian Endeavour, and recommends the movement everywhere. After Mr. Sankey had finished speaking the Montreal delegates started "God Save the Queen." As their voices ceased, the choir led the rest of the convention in singing "America," to the same air, amid a great waving of handkerchiefs. Then all sang "Blest be the tie that binds," while everybody stood up, and the convention closed.

My Waifs and Strays.

By T. J. BARNARDO, F.R.C.S.Ed.

Poor little Ned is one of my many crippled waifs. He will never be able to walk straight, and his life-outlook is a prospect solely of feebleness, decrepitude, and suffering. Ned was delivered, through the agency of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, from the custody of a stranger, under circumstances that imperilled his life. For many reasons the full facts of Ned's sad history cannot be divulged. I remember, the day I took possession of him and conveyed him in a cab to our own hospital, what a look of great content stole over the child's features; he was sufficiently old to understand the dangers from which he had escaped, and the nature of the prospect which lay before him then and now. A few days later, while he was sitting propped up in a chair before the fire in one of the snug wards of the hospital, my artist caught Ned's likeness, and here he is. Ned is a patient, uncomplaining little chap, and he has steadily gained in strength and spirits since he came under my care. It is touching to notice the kind gentleness and cons ant forbearance which at all times the healthy lads who are his companions show little Ned.

"Ned will never be able to walk straight."

Perhaps it will interest those who read these lines to know that for several years past I have acted upon the principle of not isolating my young cripples in a house by themselves, but rather of allowing them to spend their lives, as far as possible, in the society of healthy children. This has proved beneficial in its operation alike upon the cripples and upon their healthy companions. I remember, years ago, being greatly impressed and depressed by the weariness and dejection apparent both in the looks and bearing of a number of crippled children whom I saw in an institution specially devised for their benefit. They had in that home the kindest care, the best professional skill, and the tenderest oversight; yet it was a sad sight to look upon the poor deformed little people, and to observe the timidity and self-consciousness so apparent in each case. It helped me to arrive at the conclusion, which has guided me ever since, that the secret of wisely managing such peculiarly pitiable children is to place all of them who are not in need of constant surgical attendance in the daily companionship of the strong and the healthy. Thus while my little cripples join in the sports of ordinary boyhood and girlhood, they are drawn out of themselves and braced up to strenuous living; while the unmaimed are trained by the sight of feebleness and incapacity to daily acts of self-denial, forbearance, sympathy, and generosity. In fact, I have never known an instance in which a crippled or deformed child was ill-treated by his or her healthy comrades.

A widely different phase of the Lord's work in my hands is that which is carried on in the Labour House for Destitute Youths. During the ten years' existence of this branch some 2400 sturdy lads of all ages over seventeen have been rescued from the streets and common lodging-houses, and have passed in at one door and out at the other after a period of careful testing and training. Its proteges are those great fellows who were in process of becoming street loafers, odd jobbers, "corner men," purposeless "drifts" and "larrikins," with the workhouse and the gaol only a little way in front of them. The gates of childhood have, indeed, closed behind them, and in the perilous middle passage between boy and man, where dangers are so rife to all youth, these utterly destitute and friendless lads most sorely need the guidance of a pilot and the counsel of a friend. Temptation in myriad forms is ever assailing them, and yet how few are the agencies which come to them at the supreme moments of crisis to whisper, "Be strong." They are, indeed, the pariahs of philanthropy. Yet how rich and direct is the reward of the worker in this neglected field! Young children, if neglected, may become a burden to the State and a disgrace to a country calling itself Christian, yet they are not immediately able to inflict damage by active criminality. But these youths are ripe for men's work, either in good or in evil directions. States are made or unmade by its citizens between the ages of twenty and twenty-five; and neglect at the critical period of the later teens pays an instant penalty. Knowing all this, I began this branch for homeless youths ten years ago in fear and trembling, and now have to thank God for the wonderful measure of success He has already been pleased to bestow!

Look, for example, at Ralph. He is one of my old Labour House lads. See him as he appeared when first admitted. Plenty of muscle there; a face capable of being stamped with character for good or evil; in short, a bundle of force and energy, which seems to demand: "Direct me aright at your peril!" He was neither better nor worse than most of the 2400 which the Labour House has dealt with. Originally admitted at one of our free suppers for vagrant youths, I found that he had been fatherless for years, that his mother—a woman of bad character—had left him pretty well to shift for himself all his life, and that vagrancy had practically claimed him for its own for years past. He had had no home or shelter for years; he had "knocked about," he said, he had "roughed it," he had "scrambled for a living." These were his own phrases, and they summed up very accurately the facts I elicited after patient investigation. The condition of eligibility to our Labour House seemed to fit him in every respect, and he was soon among my stalwart band of wood-choppers.

Few of my lads have proved themselves more worthy of a helping hand. He earned himself at once a thoroughly good reputation, and even his frame and features seemed to undergo a change for the better after a month or two of residence. He set himself to deserve a place on my Canada list, and he came off with flying colours. In due course he left me for the Dominion; and straightway, from being a useless unit in an over-crowded city, he was eagerly competed for by several employers. I had the pick of half-a-dozen situations for him; and he entered one of these with the most satisfactory prospects. Ralph has since then gone onwards without a single check to his prosperity. Indeed, his annals have become monotonous: "Doing well," and "giving satisfaction," sum up his history in our visitors' reports. One day he will have a farm of his own; and the £20 or so that I spent over his rescue and training will have laid the foundation of his fortune, and will have made a man of him in a sense far higher than that of mere material prosperity.

For there is something better to be told in this case than a story of success in things temporal. The tender ministry of one of my dear colleagues was blessed to this lad's conversion while he was in the Home. A change of heart and life ensued, which proved the work to be genuine. For twelve months Ralph has now been treading, by God's grace, the narrow way, and from all I have learned of his progress since he left me, I make no doubt but that this poor East London pariah, who had reached an age which shut almost every other door in his face, is not only adorning the doctrine of Christ, but seeking to win others for his Lord. Ralph is a Christian missionary in the best sense, while pursuing his daily calling. Such cases are our best reward and our truest encouragement. To God be all the praise and glory! For the 4400 institute lads and lassies still under my care, I invite the prayerful sympathy of all who read these lines.

GOSPEL WORK at an ORANGE FESTIVAL.

For over fifty years Orangemen have been in the habit of assembling on July 13 at Scarva, a little village on the borders of Armagh and Down, in order to hold a "sham fight" in commemoration of the battle of the Boyne. Last year a few Christians tried to bear Gospel testimony amongst the crowds of pleasure-seekers, and this year some twenty workers mustered for the same purpose. From an interesting account sent us we learn that large numbers of tracts were distributed, while sixteen carefully-selected texts were mounted on boards, placed on poles, and held aloft, so there must have been few in the vast gathering who did not receive a Gospel invitation or a warning to flee from the wrath to come, in the very words of Scripture. Two meetings were also held with short testimonies and invitations to accept the Gospel message.

Noteworthy was the unity of various bodies of Christians. Some of the testimonies were very striking. One was that of a man who had been for many years the leader of a brass band at the sham fight at Scarva, but had given his life to God, and had no spare time for brass bands now, or for anything else than the work of extending his Master's Kingdom. Another man had been a lost and drunken soldier in the Queen's army, but was now a saved and sober soldier in the army of King Jesus. Several Orangemen spoke of changed lives, but one thing specially noticeable was that nearly all the speakers had been converted to God through the efforts of the Irish Evangelisation Society in one place or another. Ten years ago, in one of its tents the leader of the band had given his heart to the Saviour. Afterwards a smaller meeting was held in another part of the demesne, attended mostly by Christians. Several addresses having been given, the Lord's children separated, if not to assemble again for another day's service at Scarva, surely to "meet at home in the morning."

THE R.S.U. HOLIDAY HOMES.

The "Day in the Country" for poor children is generally supported as affording to the prisoners of the slums a glimpse of the fair, fresh fields or a few hours by the sounding sea; but in recent years the Holiday Home movement has taken firm hold. All who work amongst the poor are familiar with the sight of drooping, sickly children—not exactly ill, but pining like cage-birds for the freedom and freshness of rural life; fading and limp, like some pot-plant reared in the stifling atmosphere of a close room, and dying slowly for lack of air.

The toilers in the Ragged Schools of London—and doubtless of other great cities—have around them hundreds of these listless youngsters, whose dull, heavy eyes mark unmistakably their physical need of a change. Many a loving, though poor mother knows well that one or other of her young family is in such a condition. Probably the doctor has declared, "The child must have a change of air;" yet he knows only too well that the parents cannot afford it; and the little one must simply suffer on, and perhaps slowly fade away. Thus there is a pitiful waste of child-life, and even an early death is not the saddest consequences of alley and slum life; for many who survive do so only to a weary, fragile, unhealthful life, badly fitted for the hand-to-hand struggle for existence which is the lot of the poor.

IN A COUNTRY LANE.

FRESH AIR MISSIONS.

For some years it has been recognised that much of this evil might be obviated by a couple of weeks' stay and play in the country, or by the seaside. Hence Holiday Homes, although these did not altogether originate in this island. Speaking generally, there is considerable ground for the saying that "Christian charity has made this land her native abode." Yet in the matter of fresh air missions our neighbours are ahead of us. The importance of securing for poor little town-dwellers fresh access of health and strength by giving them a few days or weeks in the country has long been felt and acted upon. In not a few German and Dutch cities, associations for this purpose have been at work for years. Across the Atlantic, also, similar operations have been carried on—notably on a large scale in New York and Chicago.

EVOLUTION OF HOLIDAY HOMES.

For many years the Council of the Ragged School Union have devoted considerable attention to this matter. They began by sending enfeebled children to cottages in the country, boarding them out with villagers; but soon it was found that special Homes were preferable for many of the children, as permitting of personal supervision, bath and dietary arrangements essential to the well-being of the little holiday-makers.

As the work has gone on, its advantages have become more and more apparent. Hence the Ragged School Union has now nine Holiday Homes in use, beside many country cottages; and last year five thousand children and elder scholars were sent away, greatly to their physical and moral benefit.

"Never before," writes a teacher who spent some time supervising one of the Homes, "have we got into their home-life so thoroughly.

IT HAS LIFTED THE VEIL, and shown us many of the trials and sorrows of the poor we never knew before." Their childish exclamations of wonder frequently disclose unexpected and unthought-of shortcomings in family life. The quiet confidence of the elder scholars reveals much that is saddening in daily life and the temptations of the streets. The children also, as they contrast the abundance of food with the empty cupboard at home, or the familiarity with the dram and pawn shop, often unfold most pitiful phases of life. To get the comforts of a home, with wholesome food, fresh air, country delights and novelties, associated with a sunny atmosphere of Christianity, cannot fail to produce the best physical, moral, and spiritual results. Not a few children have received spiritual impressions, and have given evidence of a real change of heart. All this would be lost were these ragged-school children separated into general homes, even if such were available.

The R.S.U. Council has now, as I have just said, nine Holiday Homes open, but eight of these are leased, and those responsible have long been praying that God would provide one or more Holiday Homes, built expressly for the purpose, and owned by the Council. Now has come the answer, and in a very touching and beautiful way. I was invited on Saturday week (16th) to join a party going to Bognor to open Arthur's Home, and on arriving at this pretty seaside town all were delighted with the appearance and fitness of the new building—a building erected "In loving memory" of Arthur

TO MAKE CHILDREN HAPPY.

The story of the Home is deeply interesting; would I might tell it fully! By injunction of the giver I am, however, forbidden to publish it. I may, without causing pain, give the following outline of the story. A dear lad, who loved his Saviour and loved children, was lately called home. To the last he was wont to ask, "What more can I do for Jesus?" and to the last his thoughts turned to the children. After he had gone to be with Him he loved, it was laid on the mourning mother's heart that no sweeter memorial of her darling son could be devised than a Holiday Home for poor children—built, opened, and set apart for the joyless little ones of the Great City, and bearing the motto—

ARTHUR'S HOME.

Moreover, not only is there this touching story attaching to the Home, but a very practical interest is also furnished by the fact that it is the first—and so far the only—building designed specially, and built expressly for use as a Holiday Home. The architect, Mr. W. J. Ancell, has given great care and attention to such questions as adaptability, air space, and accommodation. The dining-hall, and, in wet weather, the play-room, forms the heart or core about which the whole is clustered. A gallery runs round, in which are forty-two cubicles; so that each child has a separate bed with complete privacy, while the air space of the great hall is common to the whole. Then, in the outer portions, are, on the one wing, the housekeeper's and household rooms and offices, including kitchen, stores, &c.; and, on the other, sanitary arrangements, stairs affording outlets from the upper floor, &c. In the square tower are bedrooms, bathrooms, servants' rooms, and a dormitory for elder girls. The whole seems neat and tasteful, while meeting every need likely to arise in accommodating parties of fifty-two at a time. Further, this beautiful and suitable Home is given to the R.S.U., and has been put in trust, securing for ever its use for the

that is, it has become, by the kindness of the donor, Ragged School property. Another freehold Home has just been secured at Ramsgate for the same purpose.

It may be hoped that Arthur's Home is but the precursor of many such; the first perhaps of seven or eight Holiday Homes, built on some such coherent plan to take the place of the present houses. The idea is a good one: probably the first example had only to be set—as it now has been—and others may follow in building and setting apart for these children suitable Holiday Homes in healthy spots, near breezy commons, or by the rolling sea.

Full information as to the Holiday Home Movement may be had from the secretary of the Ragged School Union, Mr. John Kirk, 37, Norfolk-street, Strand, W.C.

RAILWAY MISSION IN ALEXANDRIA.

There are a very large number of railway men here, of different nationalities, though of course the large majority are Arabs, and therefore Mohammedans. At the goods station and works at Gabbari eleven hundred men are employed, besides those at the two other stations in the European quarter of the town.

At the commencement of last winter a weekly meeting was held for Europeans and natives alternately, Italian and Arabic being the languages used. As some of the Mohammedans expressed a wish that a meeting should be held for them the request has been granted, and the day for Europeans changed from Monday to Friday, and there is also a small meeting of Copts on Tuesdays.

Visiting the men at the works and stations during their dinner and rest hour is a main feature of the work. One of the Mohammedans, I have reason to hope, has accepted salvation through Christ, whom he has for some time acknowledged to be the Son of God. This has led to some slight persecution from his own family, though I don't think they or he have realised how far he has drifted into the Christian faith. Amongst the Europeans, including our own country people, as also among the better-class Copts, I have many real friends.

Funds are needed to meet the expenses of the work, which are very considerable. It is necessary to provide the expenses of a worker, and accommodation for the meetings. I am anxious to obtain sufficient means to bring a lady out from England this autumn to join me, and work for a time with me, at the same time studying the language so as to prepare herself for ultimately taking the charge of the works. The Secretary of the Railway Mission is Mr. R. Nixon, 18, New Bridge-street, London, E.C.

Mr. Moody's Missions.

MEETINGS IN MACCLESFIELD.

At the invitation of ministers and laymen of all denominations, Mr. Moody paid an all-too short visit of two days to Macclesfield. Fears were expressed that, following so closely upon the election, it was the wrong time; but God showed, by the numbers who gathered together, the interest manifested and the blessing experienced by many, that He can and does overrule all things for the advancement of his own kingdom. Such large day-meetings had never been known in Macclesfield before.

At the first meeting the evangelist addressed himself specially to Christian workers, and spoke of the faith, courage, enthusiasm, perseverance, love for the work, and human sympathy, needed in work for the Lord. On Friday morning the address was specially to parents, when numbers were roused to a sense of their duty to their children and their responsibility in God's sight. In the afternoon a large company gathered again in the Drill Hall to hear the preacher speak on "Prayer and its Elements," and to prove their faith in its power by remaining behind to intreat God's blessing on themselves and their children. A still larger number assembled in the evening. The different refuges of lies in which so many trust for salvation, were faithfully dealt with and unsparingly exposed.

At the close of the last meeting, many names were given in as belonging to one of three classes: (1) those who lacked assurance, (2) backsliders, (3) those seeking salvation.

The evangelist was accompanied by Mr. J. H. Burke, whose sweet singing touched many hearts. His rendering of the now universal favourite "Throw out the life-line" was specially appreciated, and the song was repeated by request.

Mr. W. R. Lane, having been invited to continue the mission, held meetings on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday evenings, when he dealt powerfully with the heinousness of sin in God's sight, and the absolute necessity for the new birth. The fruits of these services will be known only in eternity; many openly confessed to having experienced blessing, and others, by tearful countenance and subdued manner showed how their nature had been stirred to its depths. Messrs. Lane and Richard Weaver addressed an open-air meeting on Sunday afternoon, when their words were listened to by a vast crowd of interested hearers.

THE STOCKTON-ON-TEES MISSION.

In response to a united invitation from the clergy and ministers of Stockton-on-Tees, Mr. Moody conducted a three days' mission there last week, commencing on Wednesday. During the previous week a meeting for prayer had been held daily in the library of the Y.M.C.A., at which it was made evident that there was not only fervent desire for, but great expectation of, blessing as the result of the mission. Wednesday being market day in Stockton, Mr. Moody's first meeting, which was held in the afternoon, was attended by a large number of people from the country districts round about. The Exchange Hall, accommodating over two thousand, was well filled in every part. Mr. Moody took for his subject, "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Many afterwards asked prayer for themselves or others.

In the evening the hall was densely packed in every corner, and it was found needful, as on each of the succeeding evenings, to hold an overflow meeting in an adjoining hall, where addresses were given by Mr. Telford and Mr. Mollison. Mr. Burke sang solos at both meetings. Of Mr. Moody's addresses it is not easy to say which were felt to be the most impressive; but, if any be specially mentioned, those on "Sowing and Reaping" and the "New Birth," and his address to parents on Friday afternoon, may be named. A special meeting for Christian workers was held on Friday morning, when Mr. Moody spoke on the work of the Holy Spirit; and his preaching on that occasion was felt to be "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." That message itself, had he spoken no other, was enough to render his visit memorable, and give occasion for thankfulness. Of the results of the mission, in cases of decision, it is impossible at this early date to speak with certainty; but after the first meeting for inquirers, which was held on the second evening, upwards of fifty names were handed in by the workers, and as many, if not more, on the Friday evening, and it is known that a large number of Christian people have had their spiritual life stirred and quickened.

The mission was brought to a close on Sunday evening by a meeting conducted by the clergy and ministers of the town. The suggestion was made, and well received, that the clergy and ministers of the town should organise themselves into an Evangelistic Association, with a view to the conduct of united Mission Services as occasion offers. Thus ministers and workers of all denominations have been brought closer together, and it is felt that there is much occasion for profound thankfulness to the great Head of the Church for the visit of his servant to Stockton-on-Tees.

VISIT TO MIDDLESBROUGH.

Middlesbrough has been stirred by a visit from Mr. D. L. Moody. For some time past the Christian community have been eagerly looking forward to the Mission, and hopeful as to its results. Now we rejoice to say that great as were our expectations they have been exceeded.

On Saturday afternoon we had a large congregation of people from the outlying country, who were in town attending market. For more than an hour Mr. Moody spoke on the "Grace of God," as revealed in Jesus Christ, in such a plain and forcible manner that many of his hearers were visibly impressed. The evening meeting was held in the Temperance Hall, and Mr. Moody enforced some plain truths regarding the "Office and Work of the Holy Spirit."

Sunday was a day never to be forgotten in Middlesbrough. We commenced with about six hundred people at the first meeting held at 7 a.m. Christian workers of every class were there, and listened with rapt attention to Mr. Moody's address on the "Baptism of the Spirit for Service." At 11 a.m. a ticket meeting for non-church goers was held, and about sixteen hundred people assembled. The afternoon meeting was announced for the open-air, but owing to the intense heat and the impossibility of making such an immense concourse of people hear, the meeting outside was shortened, and afterwards an adjournment was made to the Town Hall, where quite four thousand people were gathered. Here for another hour Mr. Moody held the immense audience, and as he forced home the truth of God, it was very evident the Holy Spirit was doing his convincing work.

In the evening we reached a climax. After crowding the Temperance Hall with an audience of more than two thousand, the Town Hall was secured for an overflow meeting, and about 3800 people were gathered there. Mr. Moody addressed the first meeting, and then proceeded to the Town Hall, where, for the sixth time that day, he faced a large congregation, addressing them with wonderful unction and power. How our hearts rejoiced at the close of the meeting to hear the "I wills" come up from all parts of the vast audience in response to Mr. Moody's question: "Who will now receive Christ as Saviour"? Mr. Burke's solo-singing seemed to take hold of the people in a marked way.

We who have had the joy of working with Mr. Moody in this Mission have had much blessing and much encouragement, and are praying that the God of all grace will enable us to keep hold of all who have in these meetings been won for our Master.

HOMES FOR LITTLE BOYS.—The summer fête was held last Saturday at Farningham. Lord Darnley, who presided, said that of the system of education pursued in the Homes he could not speak too highly. It was well calculated to develop and enrich the whole character. He regretted, however, to say that there was still an incubus of debt on the Homes. He trusted that the burden would not only be speedily removed, but that none of the departments, either at Farningham, where there were now three hundred boys, or at Swanley, which provided for two hundred boys, would be in any wise curtailed through financial difficulty. Mr. B. Clarke said the boys had made most creditable records at the recent Science and Art examinations. The Countess of Darnley distributed the prizes—some of them of considerable value—to a large number of the boys who had attained distinction at the Homes during the past year. Before leaving the visitors were addressed by Mr. W. H. Willans and several members of the committee, in support of what was not only of national but of colonial importance, as many of the boys would in after-life exert a wholesome influence in remote parts of the empire.

AMERICAN NOTES.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

Following the Republican Convention, the Democrats met and nominated Ex-President Cleveland as their standard-bearer. So the coming fight will be between candidates for a second term each. The Alliance party, chiefly composed of Western farmers and the Prohibitionists, have appointed their respective representatives. They, at least, hope to break the power of the two great parties which divide the suffrages of the nation. The Prohibitionists have weakened their cause by the prominence given to woman suffrage. Many conscientious temperance advocates shrink from the social disintegration consequent upon female political ascendency.

One of the greatest strikes of the century has been inaugurated against Carnegie and Co., the colossal iron manufacturers of Pittsburg, Pa. A company of watchmen under the Pinkerton detective agency, numbering three hundred, came to guard the foundries during the lock-out. They were met by a hostile crowd, composed of strikers, numbering five thousand. A fierce battle ensued, resulting in a score of deaths, and the maiming of a large number on both sides. The State militia, numbering eight thousand, under orders of the State governor, then left for the scene of battle. Sympathy is largely with the strikers. Thus far, July 16, they have been self-possessed, have ordered drinking saloons to be closed, and, apart from the fight with Pinkerton's, have acted with sobriety and wisdom.

Two of the Lord's noblemen have been summoned home. Dr. Charles Cullis for some years suffered excruciatingly, but to the end he rested on Christ. Some faith-curists detract from this good man because, while he advocated a moderate view of faith-healing, he practised medicine as a physician, and was in turn attended by physicians to the end. But little heed is paid now to the extremists. They have had their day; faith-curism is dead. Colonel George R. Clarke, of Chicago, has also fallen asleep in Jesus. He was the founder and promoter of the Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago, one of the most successful evangelistic agencies on our side to reach degraded men. Few preachers have preached more sermons than this business man, who for years delivered five discourses weekly. Thousands were led to Christ through his ministry during the last fifteen years.

A recent visit to Kansas impressed us anew with the vastness of that State. Millions of acres, formerly desert, have been irrigated, reclaimed, and cultivated. The land is extraordinarily rich. I counted 1200 grains of corn on one ear, and saw a stalk from a previous crop eighteen feet high. But corn was burned for fuel last year, being cheaper than coal. Think of church furnaces, house ranges, &c., consuming this splendid production, while in other lands people starve! Kansas farmers are now growing wheat extensively. What pleased us best is the wonderful growth of Bible study. Bible schools are springing up in Kansas, Texas, and Nebraska. The young men are making good use of the Scriptures, and are pushing all forms of mission and evangelistic work.

The Soldiers' Home, Woolwich.

Mrs. Dent, who, many will regret to hear, feels compelled to resign the superintendence of this Home, opens her new report by recalling how the Lord led her into the work, and how He has blessed it to many souls. She adds:—

"One deep source of thankfulness to God that we must mention is, that we have been so strengthened and helped by the Christian officers in the garrison, and also those retired from the service. Truly, the Lord supplied all our need—strength, helpers, and money. The year never closed with the Home in debt, or without abundant cause for thanksgiving. One more word with regard to ourselves ere we give a few statistics of the past year. Our personal share in the happy work is now over. The same voice that said so plainly, 'Go, work,' has spoken again as unmistakably, saying, 'Come apart and rest'; and in obedience to our Lord the work He gave has been surrendered to another, whom we trust He has fitted for it. Miss Maud Shubrick is now the Lady Superintendent of the Home. She has worked with us since 1887, and knows the trials as well as the joys of the work. Her desire and aim is to win souls to Christ, and many can bless her as the one who led them to Him."

The letters given in the report show that soldiers born to God in the Home are now witnessing for Him in many lands. Communications should be addressed Miss M. Shubrick, The Soldiers' Home, Hill-street, Woolwich.

For the Young.

RHYMES BY THE SEA.

By WILLLIAM LUFF.

[This may be made an interesting address by letting the children repeat the rhymes, and to aid memory the rhymwords may be written on a blackboard, or upon the slate.]

ONE day I saw some men go out in a boat from the sea-shore; they left a rope in charge of others, who remained upon the beach. They took a long net with them, which they cast out as they rowed, until they had enclosed a large half-circle by coming ashore some distance along the beach. Then they began pulling at both ends, still coming nearer and nearer together, drew a great lot of fish from the sea; some were large; but there were thousands of little fishes no bigger than a child's finger.

It made me think of the devil's nets, and how he catches grown people and young people too.

Sin catches all fishes,
Great fishes and small fishes.

How was it that those tiny things got caught? Because they were with the larger fish. Sometimes bigger boys and girls tempt the small ones to accompany them in evil; and sometimes the little ones think it makes them look big to be with bigger boys. If they are doing wrong, beware!

With big fish go,
Means death and woe.

I noticed that thousands of those little fishes died directly they were out of the water, and their pretty shining bodies lay like bits of silver upon the sand. It seemed sad that their happy little lives should be so suddenly cut off. Sometimes sin quickly ends life. Many die young who might have lived to be old, only they got caught in the net of drink, or some other evil.

Beneath sin's power,
Some die in an hour.

Others escaped immediate death, but only to linger on in a miserable life. Of course the children came with their spades and buckets to see what was being done, and when they saw the fishermen did not want the little fishes, they rescued some and gave them a bath in their pails. The poor things seemed to think they were free again, but as they ran their noses against the sides of their prisons, they soon found out their mistake. All do not die directly they sin, the devil lets some seem to escape, but they are his prisoners, and often suffer for many years.

Some linger long
Through woe and wrong.

As I sat with a friend upon the shore, something moved just at our side, as if a pebble had slipped. It made us jump too. Then we saw it was a young flat fish trying to jump back to the sea; so my friend took it up in his hand and did for it what it could not do for itself. He put it again into the water, and, wagging its tail as if to say "Thank you," it swam away. We have been caught like that little fish, young as well as old, for "All have sinned" (Romans iii. 23). We cannot get back to the ocean of life by ourselves; but Jesus, with his hand pierced for us, can put us back. Shall we refuse to let Him, and perish?

Jesus can save
From sin's dark grave.

As that little fish swam through the sea, I should think he would be very careful where he went in future. If going with the big fish, and doing as they did, had brought him into the net, surely he would avoid doing the same thing again. If Jesus has saved us, let us not go any more into sin. My friend did not die to save the little fish: Jesus died for us. Our salvation is in Him blood, for our sin was such a dreadful thing. Let us hate it. My friend did not love the little fish. Jesus loves us. Let us love Him, and hate evil.

Again in the net.

Another day I saw a different way of fishing: men were after crabs and lobsters, so they had some baskets made like traps, into which they put a tempting morsel, and sank them where the lobsters took their walks. Then I said,

With cunning bait,
Some fishers wait.

Satan is such a fisher. He does not always catch boys and girls because they go with others. He can put danger in their path when alone.

"Dear me," said a young crab, "how kind these men are to make nice houses for us to live in and put such dainties in the cupboard."

"You silly little thing," said a wise crab, "they only want to catch us and you too. Fishermen

Have no good wishes
For any fishes."

How different with God. Satan attracts to kill; Jesus attracts to give life. Whatever pleasure the devil gives in theatre, music-hall, public-house, concert, or entertainment, he does not give it because he wishes to bless. Oh no!

He gives to destroy;
God gives to enjoy.

When once the crabs get into these traps they cannot get out. Just like sin again, is it not? The tempter tempts in, but he never shows a door of escape.

They may wriggle about,
But they cannot get out.

One other little rhyme. If Jesus has delivered you, be thankful; and since Satan is so busy as a fisher, you try and be busy too. Try and catch the little fishes on the shores of life; bring them for Jesus and to Jesus. For if you do not catch them, the devil's net will.

For good, catch others,
Sisters and brothers.

THE BLIND COLLEGE AT NORWOOD.

THE loss of any of the five gateways of knowledge from the outer world is serious enough; but the loss of eyesight is the greatest of them all. How good and Christlike, therefore, is the work of ministering to those who are blind, so that their deprivation may be minimised as far as possible! Much is being done in these philanthropic days to ameliorate the condition of the sightless; and one of the very best institutions in this or any other country for helping our blind brethren and sisters is the Royal Normal College and Academy of Music for the Blind at Upper Norwood. For the last twenty years, under the able management and fostering care of Dr. F. J. Campbell, the College has been a centre of help and good cheer to hundreds of our afflicted friends—fitting them by a complete course of practical training, to take their part among the world's happy and useful workers. Wonderful are the compensations of Providence; when one sense has been lost there seems to be a latent aptitude for largely developing the others. At any rate the Norwood College has amply proved that the loss of sight is no barrier to an active participation through worthy channels in that labour for self-support and for the weal of others which dignifies human life.

Last Thursday afternoon the Upper Norwood institution had its annual assembly; combined with a reunion of old pupils and the formal dedication of several memorials of the late Dr. Armitage, one of the most wise and generous benefactors that the blind portion of the human race has ever had. The weather was favourable, and the assemblage of friends was large. A long programme was gone through, and there was plenty to interest the sympathetic visitor. Even those who have frequently inspected the College cannot help being struck with wonder on every succeeding opportunity at the remarkable skill and proficiency of the pupils in the various departments of knowledge.

Following the course of the programme, the visitor first of all examines the school classes at work in the garden. Here could be seen little groups of sightless young men and maidens writing to dictation; reading in turns from an embossed volume; sustaining a conversation in the French tongue; showing an intimate acquaintance with the geography of the world, map in hand; working out experiments in physics or problems in geometry, and manipulating figures in arithmetic. Everything was gone through with a readiness and celerity that spoke eloquently of close application and of skill in imparting useful knowledge. Indeed, it seemed as though the lack of outward vision were a help rather than a hindrance to mental deftness and capacity.

The pianoforte-tuning school was another busy scene, a branch of work in which many of the pupils find a livelihood. In the boys' gymnasium all kinds of healthful exercises were in process; gone through, in many cases, with a dash and precision that could not have been excelled by the aid of sight. A very touching and pathetic spectacle was afforded by the Kindergarten, where tiny blind people were neatly modelling in clay, or nimbly weaving cards, mats, &c.

After a choral service in the college chapel, led by a local clergyman and sustained with reverent skill by the blind choir, there came the more formal meeting held in the parade ground, and presided over by the DUKE OF WESTMINSTER, a tried friend of the institution. His Grace spoke some very hearty words as to the general scope and success of the College, and referred in specially appreciative terms to the services rendered by the late Dr. Armitage to the cause of the blind. Through the persistent energy of Dr. Campbell, the principal, a large addition has recently been made to the premises in the shape of a spacious adjoining home, and some four and a half acres of ground. This, it is hoped, will enable the number of pupils—at present over 140—to be ultimately doubled. A very encouraging fact stated by the chairman was that the pupils who have already gone out into active work in the world earned last year over £16,000. A large library of embossed volumes, for the use of the students, has been established as one of the memorials of the late Dr. Armitage. Another memento of that devoted friend of the work is a clock and chime of bells. The clock was set a-going by a youthful daughter of the chairman—Lady Mary Grosvenor.

A "memorial address" was given by the renowned Dr. Phillips Brooks, Bishop of Massachusetts. In a perfect torrent of smooth and graceful speech, he expatiated on the nobility of the work that Dr. Armitage had done, and on the general claim that our blind brethren and sisters had on our deepest sympathy and most effective help. While we can aid them in the struggle of life, we may also learn from them how, independently of outside forces and influences we can cultivate the inner life of the mind and soul.

Among the noteworthy incidents of the gathering was the presentation of a gift by the pupils to the matron, who retires after twenty-one years' faithful service, of another gift to Sir A. Manns, the musical director of the Crystal Palace, in recognition of his services, and the recitation by a little boy of a sonnet to the memory of Dr. Armitage. Sir Lyon Playfair added his quota of commendation, and Dr. Campbell, in a few final words, appealed for more annual subscribers to the College.

THE EVANGELISTIC MISSION.—The total sum raised at the recent anniversary meeting was £400, very far short of actual necessities; besides what is wanted for the summer work, the new hall in Willesden-lane, and the purchase fund of the Wilton House of Rest. We hear that Mr. T. A. Denny has offered to give £100 towards the first £1000 of the £8000 urgently required. We trust many may be stirred to aid liberally. Communications should be addressed to Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, 164, Alexandra-road, St. John's-wood, N.W.

NEWFOUNDLAND.—The hospital ship Allen, belonging to the Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, arrived at St. John's, Newfoundland, a few days ago, having on board a quantity of clothing for distribution amongst necessitous fishermen's families. The Governor's wife, Lady O'Brien, has kindly undertaken this task, and, in view of the augmented distress caused by the recent fire, such a supply of clothing will prove specially welcome.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., July 31, Luke xv. 11-32; Mon., Aug. 1, xvi. 1-18; Tues., Aug. 2, xvi. 19-31; Wed., Aug. 3, xvii. 1-10; Thurs., Aug. 4, xvii. 11-25; Fri., Aug. 5, xvii. 26-37; Sat., Aug. 6, xviii. 1-17.

SEASIDE SERVICES, 1892.

The following are the arrangements for the Children's Services on the seashore during the month of August, so far as made:—Mr. E. Arrowsmith at Eastbourne (and part of September); Mr. J. R. Naylor at Llandudno; Messrs. H. Hutchinson and W. H. Wilton at Bridlington; Mr. R. Callender, B.A., at Whitby; Mr. W. H. Roberts, B.A., at Filey; Messrs. Josiah Spiers and R. Westall at Blackpool; Mr. H. C. Lees at Colwyn Bay; Mr. H. Staines, B.A., at Llanfairfechan, and Mr. S. R. Webb, M.D., at Penmaenmawr; Mr. T. Lewes Sayer at Rhyl; Mr. W. R. Moore, B.A., at Ilfracombe; Rev. Martin J. Hall, B.A., at Bournemouth; Rev. W. T. Storrs, M.A., at Sandown; Mr. L. Carrott at Felixstowe; Mr. L. Parkinson, B.A., at Deal; Mr. A. G. Dodderidge at St. Leonards; Messrs. J. S. Tyler and E. Hughes at Worthing; Messrs. S. J. Hewlett and G. Goodman at Herne Bay; Dr. F. Churchill at Southwold; Mr. H. Steward at Fort Erin, I.M; Messrs. E. and C. H. Collier at Weymouth; Mr. Gilbert R. Kirlew at Lytham; Rev. Godwyn Storrs at Southsea; Rev. C. H. Nash at Scarborough; Mr. W. J. Small at Mablethorpe; Messrs. J. C. Rainey and T. C. Wilson at Paignton

Missionary Notes.

The Tyre Bible Mission is reported to be doing a good work in and around this ancient city.

Since the beginning of the year the Missionary Bureau has sent out twenty-four missionaries

Another party of missionaries lately sailed from Adelaide, Australia, for New Guinea. There were three English ladies and six native teachers from Samoa and Fiji with their wives and children.

Four fresh labourers have been accepted by the Missionary Bureau for work among the Hill Tribes of Eastern Bengal, and hope to sail in October; two are offering for Central Soudan; three for Bombay; two for East Africa; four for Jamaica; one for Rio de Janeiro; and one for Singapore.

The Missionary Pence Association, whose object is to gather in a multitude of pennies in aid of missionary work, is steadily adding to its membership, which now numbers nearly two hundred. As each member represents a number of contributors, ranging from six to twenty-four, it will be seen that those who are contributing regularly to the cause of missions by its means are already thousands. But it is hoped that many more will join its ranks. The Association aids any evangelical foreign mission that the members may select. The council includes Messrs. George Williams, R. C. Morgan, Reginald Radcliffe, Rev. F. B. Meyer, and Rev. H. Grattan Guinness, D.D. Application for membership should be made to the Hon. Secretary, Mr. John Jackson, St. Martin's House, 1, Gresham-street, E.C.

THE INDIAN FIELDS.

A fine old Sikh said lately to a missionary, "Sahib, these neighbours of ours, since they became Isais (Christians), have given up lying and thieving, and seem to be altogether changed."

In Amritsar and its neighbourhood the C.M.S. has a Christian community numbering 1177, of whom 277 are communicants. There were 59 adult and 70 infant baptisms during the year.

The Kanarese Bible Revision Committee have completed the Gospel of St. Matthew, which is to be published for circulation among missionaries and others. The committee will meet again later in the year in Mysore.

The report of the North Tinnevelly Church Council shows that a large amount of work has been done under the guidance of Rev. T. Walker, who is the chairman of the council. The communicants have increased from 1409 to 1487.

There has been a new departure at Tarn Taran. A home has been opened for the untainted children of lepers. Seven children are now in the home, which is cared for by the ladies of the Zenana mission. There are many more children at the leper asylum, and these will be taken when there is room in a permanent dwelling that is to be erected.

A spiritual life convention was lately held at Kodeikánal when more than one hundred missionaries, men and women of twelve or more missions, American, English, Scotch, and German, were in attendance, and there was marked spiritual power, most refreshing to all present. These returned to their various fields stirred up to fresh zeal and devotion.

The Punjaub Mission of the Church of Scotland carries on its work from Sialkot, Wazirabad, Gujrat, and Jammu in the valley of the Upper Chenab, and from Chamba, in the hills some distance east from Jammu. The returns for the Sialkot, and Wazirabad districts show a Christian community of 2568, nearly one-fourth of whom were gathered in during the past year.

One poor woman was lately in the Lucknow Hospital for five months, and underwent many painful operations, and she just drank in all about our Saviour's great love to her. Her eyes followed Miss Cameron about quite hungrily until she stopped at her bed. Then she used to say, "Miss Sahib, tell me all again; the pain makes me forget—but I remember more and more every day."

Certain zealous Mohammedans of Hyderabad appear ambitious of converting the western world to Islam, and recently held in that city a meeting of about 160 Moulvies to discuss the advisability of sending a Mohammedan Mission to America. It appears that a Mr. Webb, the American Consul at Manilla, has become a convert to Islam, and is going to Bombay to organise a Mission for America.

Rev. C. B. Ward, of the M. E. Telugu Mission, tells how the Mining Company's work has drawn together ten thousand natives, speaking at least six languages, among whom encouraging work is going on.

Mr. Ward adds:—Among our listeners here have been some Telugu people from a large village about one hundred miles away. They have long attracted our attention by their eager attention and disposition ever to welcome us warmly. On some occasions some of them have knelt with us in prayer in the public bazaar. They long urged us to come and visit them in their village. We have been and found about two hundred houses holds, or perhaps about one thousand souls, who seemed almost ready to enter the Kingdom of Christ.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

Mr. F. A. Steven, C.I.M., believes there are sixty or seventy aboriginal tribes, each of them having clan distinctions within themselves, in the three provinces of Si-ch'uen, Kwei-chau, and Yun-nan, and their borders towards Burma and towards the Shan States. These aboriginal tribes have no solitary witness for the Gospel among them.

Bishop Edward Bickersteth, writing to the members of the Guild of St. Paul regarding the state of missions in Japan, says: "I am not among those who hold gloomy opinions as to the prospect of missions in any Eastern land. It would not, perhaps, be fair to say that the very sombre reports which are sent home from time to time are by persons prejudiced against missions as such, but you may have noticed that, as a rule, the actual experience of the writers has been very brief, and that their views are not generally shared by those whose residence in the East has been longer."

Rev. J. Sadler, writing from North River, Amoy, tells how a promising new missionary movement has been checked by official opposition. The Amoy Congregational Union sent out about a dozen native evangelists to open up new territory, believing that the experiment of sending Chinamen to the Chinese, the European missionaries keeping in the background, ought to be seriously made. Chapels were secured, and the churches uniting in the movment were prayerful and eagerly expectant. Soon the news came that the preacher at the principal chapel in all the region (Ting-chin) had been ejected from the city, because the influential people objected to his teaching.

NORTH AFRICA.

Misses Harding and Grissel have been revisiting Tebourka (Tunis) and plead for fresh labourers for this town.

During three recent months the patients at the Fez Medical Mission numbered 1431 men, women, and children, all of whom in some form heard the Gospel.

Miss Jennings, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Mackintosh, of the Bible Society, has been encamping in villages south of Tangier, where the work is so abundant that on arriving at new camping ground, the workers have separated themselves, going in opposite directions. In this way the villages of Awama, Cellawean, Berrean, Ain-el-Kutlah, and El Khamis, have been visited, in all of which groups have gathered to listen to the Word of Life.

Dr. Churcher writes: We are having numbers of out-patients, as the fine weather enables the people to come from distant villages, and there are hundreds of pilgrims in town en route for Mecca. It is curious to see frequently women going on "hadj" alone. One yesterday was going with only a small boy with her, and she had only enough money for part of the journey, and yet when I inquired what she would do for her passage back, she replied calmly, "I don't know; the Lord will provide."

Miss Cox and Miss Smith, who labour for God in Djemad Sahridj, are much cheered by the manifest way in which the Lord is working in their midst. One of the lads who has long attended their evening classes came to them a few days ago and declared his personal faith in the Lord Jesus; it appears that he had told his friends some time before. He has already undergone persecution, but seems to be standing firm, and is endeavouring to bring others to the Saviour.

Mr. W. Summers illustrates the longing of many Arabs for atonement for sin, by telling of a farmer in Morocco who pressed him greatly help himself to figs from his tree. The Arab was persistent that he missionary inquired if the was any special reason, and received the follo ing reply: "We Arabs don't live as we shou do, and I wasn't in my young days better th the rest of them, and now that I am getting o —you see, my whiskers are turning grey—I fe I have a great burden of sin to get rid of. So planted the fig-tree garden by the waysi there, that the wayfaring man, and the hung man, and the poor man, and the thirsty ma could step in over the wall and take of n bounty." A superstition is current amongst t people that if a man gives in alms a handful figs, each little pip in the figs thus given aw will atone for a hundred sins. After this in dent Mr. Summers observed that many fig-trees Morocco are planted by the wayside, leading hi to the conclusion that not only this Arab farme but the great bulk of the people had not learn of the cleansing blood, but with him had "go in the way of Cain."

AFRICA, EAST AND WEST.

Mr. and Mrs. Baily of the Qua Iboe Missio West African Coast, have just returned to th spheres of labour.

An occasional paper in connection with t Qua Iboe Mission says:—We have at prese four workers on the staff of the Mission, a already about thirty-five baptized members for the native church of Qua Iboe. A few weeks ag we sent out a steam saw mill, and hope by th means to give employment to some of those wh have been influenced by the Mission.

Rev. H. Tugwell writes from Lagos:—"One our catechumens of Idringbodu has been sufferi persecution from his heathen master. Six mont ago he was put in chains on a Sunday morni for refusing to take part in the usual sacrific to Ifa. The missionaries have tried all in the power to soften the master's feelings towards t young man, but their interference resulted severer persecutions. When it was dark he ca to us by stealth to inform us of his troubles, a we encouraged him from the Word of God."

A meeting was lately held in the Christ Chur Faji Day School, Lagos, when Rev. Herbert Tu well gave an account of his visit to the interi stations connected with the Lagos Church M sions Association. He felt assured that God blessing the efforts of the agents; that a go work is quietly going on, undermining the stron holds of heathenism, and that many are since in asking that Christian teachers may be st tioned amongst them. Rev. E. S. Wilough Secretary of the Lagos Church Missions Assoc tion, pointed out the need of increased suppo and Rev. J. Olnwole, the need of greater se denial.

The Speedwell having now been transferred Miss Robinson to a limited liability compan it has become necessary to vacate the hall, whi is wanted for business purposes. Further t necessities of our growing mission work abs lutely require more room. This will be evide when it is considered that during the eighte months of our work at the Speedwell, over fo hundred persons have professed conversion a 850 have signed the temperance pledge, indepe dently of a large Band of Hope. To meet t need partly of our Sunday night congregati Miss Robinson, six months ago, hired the Emp Palace Music Hall, which gives accommodati for twelve hundred people. This, however, cos about £200 a year over and above the collectio while the unsavoury smell of drink and smo together with its week-day associations, make anything but a desirable place for a permane We have therefore purchased a piece of freeho land at a cost of £3300 for a site for permane mission premises, to consist of a hall to seat 12 people, two small halls for Sunday-school a temperance meetings, a large soup-kitchen f social work for the poor, four class-rooms, a living apartments for our deaconesses. THE LATE

REV. E. R. CONDER, D.D.,

CONGREGATIONAL MINISTER, LEEDS.

OUR portrait this week brings to notice a cultured and stalwart minister of the Gospel, who recently departed, after a long life of signal usefulness. Though an ornament of the Congregational body, he had made for himself a world-wide reputation; his talents being admired, and his graces acknowledged by Christians of all denominations.

Eustace Rogers Conder was the fourth son of the well-known Josiah Conder, an accomplished writer of prose, and the author of many hymns, including "Head of the Church, our Risen Lord." Born in 1820, near St. Albans, Herts, he early made the Lord his trust. His mother was of Huguenot descent, and he inherited her earnest disposition, combining it with his father's enterprise, and a delicate caution of his own.

He was among the first of the body of ministers trained at Spring Hill College, Birmingham, an institution which has since been transferred to Mansfield College, Oxford. On the completion of his theological course, he accepted the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Poole. In the same year, 1844, he graduated M.A. at the University of London, receiving also the Gold Medal in Philosophy. For seventeen years he laboured with marked success in the Dorsetshire town, not only discharging his pastoral duties, but throwing much enthusiasm into the additional work of training students for the foreign mission-field.

At the beginning of 1861 he accepted an unanimous invitation to become minister of the East Parade Church, Leeds, in succession to Dr. H. R. Reynolds, now President of Cheshunt College. There were then only four Congregational churches in the town, and that worshipping in East Parade Chapel was composed of members living several miles apart. Constant visitation was out of the question, but the pastor did what he could to see his people in their homes, as well as instruct them from the pulpit. Mission and school work was pushed forward with commendable vigour; and, in course of time, new chapels were erected, and made centres of work by additional pastors. East Parade was the mother church. Not only was the forward movement under her auspices, but former members became the promoters and supporters of operations in newly-opened districts. The planting of churches away from the centre of Leeds has, of course, diminished the strength of those which have historical associations and interest. Nevertheless, East Parade Church exerted a wide and deep influence throughout the entire period of Dr. Conder's pastorate—over thirty years.

Dr. Conder was a scholar of mature judgment and a Christian teacher of a reliable type. He kept abreast of the thought of the age, and preached the old Gospel in the language of to-day. He knew the theories and speculations which are occupying the minds of so many, but his glory was in the faith once for all delivered to the saints, and this he taught and lived. His pulpit utterance was chaste and his life graceful, so that his testimony for God and righteousness made a lasting impression upon a large number of people.

Not content with making frequent contributions to the periodical Press, Dr. Conder wrote several valuable books, including "The Basis of Faith" (the Congregational Lecture for 1877), "Outlines of the Life of Christ," and "Sleepy Forest," a volume of fairy tales for children. In 1882 the University of Edinburgh conferred the honorary degree of D.D. upon him, in recognition of the learning and the ability displayed in "The Basis of Faith."

Dr. Conder was Chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales for 1873, and of the Yorkshire Congregational Union in 1879. He was the author of several hymns and a number of controversial tracts; also of an order of service for marriages and burials which has been largely adopted by Dissenting bodies.

For many years Dr. Conder was secretary of the Leeds Association of Congregational Pastors and Deacons, and he gladly welcomed every opportunity of bringing workers together for fellowship and co-operation. He held with tenacity his own views on ecclesiastical matters; but, at the same time, his heart warmed with sympathy and love towards all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Therefore, it is not surprising that on the occasion of his death Christians of all denominations should mourn his loss. Canon Talbot, Vicar of Leeds, referred to him as not only an honoured leader of his own denomination, but as one who was often with general approval accepted as representative of Nonconformity at large, and as a good citizen who cared for the public life of the town and of the nation. The Canon added: "We remember before God with honour an example in which we were permitted to see something of the true harmony of outward and inward life in Christ."

The death of Dr. Conder came with some suddenness, although, being in his seventy-third year, he had for some months been in declining health. In the spring of this year he had an attack of influenza, which, though apparently slight, left him very weak. After a time, feeling unequal to the work of the East Parade Church, he intimated his wish to retire, but was asked to allow his name to remain on the roll as honorary pastor. To this he consented, and hoped to be able occasionally to render freewill service to the church which he had worked so long to build up in the faith of the Gospel and the work of Christ. His last sermons were preached on Sunday, April 24, in connection with the Sunday-school anniversary. It was remarked that he spoke on that day with more than his usual earnestness and power. In the morning his subject was "That good part, which shall not be taken away" (Luke x. 42); in the evening, "What is your life?" (James iv. 14). The discourses were a suitable conclusion to his ministry. His final message to the church was read on the Sunday before he died: "I know whom I have believed." A decided change for the worse was observable on July 5, and on the following day he quietly fell asleep. A few days before he died he remarked, "I cannot say 'I have fought a good fight'; but strike out the 'I,' and read 'A good fight has been fought' by his grace, and to Him be all the glory."

The funeral took place at Poole, many friends following the remains to their last resting-place. In the course of an address at the grave, Rev. James Legge, of Leeds, voiced the general sentiment when he spoke of Dr. Conder as a true Christian, of large charity, who, though seeking to hold the truth and define it well, yet belonged to all the churches.

At a memorial service in East Parade Church, Dr. Falding described the late pastor as well worthy to rank in the succession of Edward Parsons, John Ely, and Henry R. Reynolds. A correspondent of The Independent says of him: "He was undemonstrative, and to those who did not know him he appeared to be even cold. Yet any warm or needy heart 'taking him for granted' would not be disappointed, but ever be met by the wisdom of years and the heart and spirit of a brother." Men of Dr. Conder's type and talents are always needed, and we feel sure that God will ever continue them to his waiting Church.

The Crisis of Error.

At a meeting, on Thursday last, of the North-West London Evangelical Clerical Association, Rev. J. J. B. Coles read a paper on "Evil Angels and the Coming Apostasy." In opening he said: In 1 Tim. iv. the Holy Spirit emphatically warns us that there would be an apostasy from the faith, and that men in these latter days would give heed to seducing, deceiving, or wandering spirits and doctrines of demons. Many who have read and commented on these solemn words of warning have not called attention to the fact that two sets of spiritual enemies are referred to—evil angels and demons. It is undeniable that we have for many years had demons in our midst in connection with the "mediums" and manifestations of spiritualists. These spiritualistic phenomena have been increasing in intensity. There are now several millions of people in England and America who have dealings with and consult those who have familiar spirits.

Having quoted many statements by men of science of the unquestionable reality of spiritualistic manifestations, Mr. Coles examined the phenomena of Theosophy, which he attributed to evil angels of a more powerful intellectual calibre than ordinary demons. The "esoteric" and typical sense of Holy Scripture is advocated by Occultists to the exclusion of the "exoteric" and historical, with the deplorable outcome that the Atonement, the Divinity of Christ, and the Personality of God are denied, and the way prepared for the worship of man and Satan. The blasphemies of this method of interpretation Mr. Coles then described, and declared the teaching to be that of Anti-Christ.

He proceeded: Those who have studied Madame Blavatsky's "Isis Unveiled," and "The Secret Doctrine," and who recognise therein the revival of the teaching of the Gnostics, Essenes, Neo-Platonists and of the ancient Hermetic mysticism and philosophy, will probably agree with me that the statement of the writer, that she was not the real author but only the transcriber of these books, is perfectly correct. She and the authors of "The Perfect Way" were inspired by

"MAHATMAS," OR EVIL ANGELS.

"I, for one," said Mr. Coles, after the most careful study of these and similar phenomena, believe that Madame Blavatsky's works, and also the blasphemous productions, such as "The Perfect Way," "Clothed with the Sun," &c., are really inspired by Satan and his evil angels. Theosophists and Spiritualists, though hitherto somewhat antagonistic, are now being drawn into closer union. The forces of the enemy are being collected and brought into their places for the final struggle for the possession of the kingdoms of this earth. How sad, then, it is to see that many so-called Christians have been entrapped and deluded, and that even a clergyman has been found to encourage spiritualism by exhibiting spirit photographs in the vestry of his church, instead of denouncing all dealings with evil spirits as the Word of God so explicitly commands.

The true interpretation of such passages as 1 Tim. iv. 1, 2 Thess. ii., and Rev. xii., xiii., will, I think, throw much light upon the present attempt of Satan to bring about the complete apostasy of Christendom, so as to make way for the final manifestation of the Man of Sin, when he will himself claim the worship of the world in that awful crisis which appears to be so rapidly darkening the horizon. May I suggest that the reading, "He who letteth will let," &c., 2 Thess. ii., should again be carefully reconsidered in connection with the revived reintroduction of the old-world teaching of Re-incarnation. Why does Satan want to familiarise the public mind with this idea? May it not be because he has in readiness—kept in reserve—the one who shall ascend from the abyss, and whose re-incarnation will cause all the world to wonder at his power, and entitle him to the worship for which he is now working?

Again, are we quite sure that we have not been misled by those who have placed the casting out of Satan in Rev. xii. in the midst of the events of the Apocalypse, i.e., in the midst of the last week, instead of at a much earlier date in the closing crisis? Does not the corrected reading, "He stood on the sand of the sea," of xiii. 1, indicate that the Dragon is cast out of the heavenly places before the commencement of the seventieth week of Daniel, and that he thereupon proceeds to disturb the peace of the nations in order to call forth his two instruments of evil, the beast from the sea and the other from the land, whose doings are subsequently described, and whose sudden and awful judgment of being cast alive into the lake of fire will antedate by a thousand years his own well-merited doom?

I make these suggestions in the presence of those who have carefully studied Prophecy, and are pretty well agreed that, whatever may have been the applications of these remarkable passages to the workings and masterpieces of Satan in the past, yet join with me in saying that a more literal fulfilment is clearly indicated by God's Word. Satan, who has had the Apocalypse to study since it was given to the Church, may have tried to antedate its fulfilment by bringing his tools and instruments upon the scene before the time had come for him to do so. Yet no supposed historical fulfilment should blind us to the fact that he is still working towards the carrying out of his last supreme effort to make man worship man as divine, and himself as

THE GOD OF THIS AGE.

We are in difficult times; the swiftly flowing current is nearing the rapids. How earnestly, then, should we warn all who will listen, with our loins girded and lamps burning, giving full proof of our undoubted belief that the Lord is at hand, pleading with all who will listen, beseeching them to be reconciled to God, to turn from Satan and the idols of this age, and to wait with us for his Son from heaven, who died that we might live.

We who have died and risen in Christ, belong to God's new creation, in which Satan has no part and no power. Clothed in the armour of God we withstand the assaults, the methods and wiles of our spiritual foes whom Christ has vanquished. We stand firm, not fearing their power, for salvation is ours. All the land is before us, wheresoever our feet shall tread: no one, not even Satan himself, nor the sons of Anak in all their might, can separate us from the love of Him who, with drawn sword in hand, is still the all-powerful Captain of the hosts of the Lord.

The beast with its seven heads and ten horns may soon be on the point of rising out of the troubled sea of European politics—the feet and toes of the image, the iron and the miry clay of struggling socialism and democracy threatened by a revival of imperialism, may be about to witness the collapse of the image of the world-empires and the end of the times of the Gentiles—all this may be close at hand; but, as "one of its blasphemous heads was wounded to death," let us withstand and expose this blasphemous teaching of Theosophy and Spiritualism.

Pontymoile Mission.

Mr. James Jones, evangelist, has just concluded a week's special mission at the Cwmffrwdoer branch of this Mission, with unmistakable proof of the Master's presence and blessing. Notwithstanding the fact that the summer months are unsuitable to get large audiences inside, the hall has been well filled, and several professed conversion at each service. Mr. Jones intends to spend a week at each of the other stations.

SUNDAY STARVATION.—Says a correspondent—"Our Temperance friends are fond of demonstrating by a scientific experiment how little real nourishment there is in a glass of beer. It needs no experiment to prove how little spiritual nourishment there is in many a sermon. Sunday starvation is a palpable fact in many churches and chapels."

A WELSH CONVENTION.

The Convention at Llandrindod Wells has come and gone, but of the blessing that came with it much will remain. Llandrindod is a favourite health resort, having attractions of its own, bracing atmosphere, diversified scenery, a beautiful river, and springs, both sulphur and chalybeate, of proved efficacy; a place for rest and quiet enjoyment, for mountain air, and sociability—largely frequented by Christian people.

The meetings were to me supremely interesting, because they were held in the face of difficulty, in the very midst of the General Election, with the polling day for Radnorshire on the Tuesday of the Convention week. Of course there were not so many there to share the privilege that we enjoyed as we could have wished, although the evening meetings were large, and would soon have been overflowing if they had been held in the height of the season.

A friend said to me, "I want some one to take notes," and I took pencil in hand, but whilst the truths of the consecrated life, so familiar to many readers of The Christian, were set forth with great clearness and freshness of illustration, there was something that was beyond all reporting. When the Lord comes with power into the assemblies of his people, what pen can give expression to it? How convey to others that consciousness given to us, that prayers which have long been going up to Him are now being answered, and that He Himself has come to his children, making them "to know the certainty of the words of truth" (Prov. xxii. 21)?

It was so all the way along, from the address given by Dr. White, in the opening prayer meeting, on those two great questions—"Adam, where art thou?" and "Where is He," "that is born King of the Jews?"—full of heart-searching—to the closing missionary address of Mr. H. S. Newman, we were made conscious of our Lord's gracious condescension and of the help given to his servants.

The faith that the heart of the believer does become the temple of Christ's indwelling power, who, as He is suffered to rule, would reign, to the subjection of all our soul's enemies, is becoming increasingly precious; and when preached with power and received with simplicity and in the love of it, is always most helpful to Christian unity.

"All one in Christ," the motto of the Convention, becomes real to every one of God's children who seeks personal holiness by laying hold of the great promise of the new covenant, "I will dwell in them."

Those who were strangers from the covenants of promise, still careless, or undecided, were very plainly dealt with by Mr. Haslam and other speakers; and one marked feature of the Convention was the faithful testimony of every minister to the authority of the Scriptures.

We came away thankful, and hopeful that the Lord would be pleased to put into the heart of his servants the desire and the willingness to continue this effort for the deepening of the spiritual life in the hearts of many whom He dearly loves, and whom He purchased with his blood to be "his own possession."

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT AND MISSIONARIES.—Sir Charles Elliott at a social gathering at Darjeeling stated that the Christians in Bengal had according to the recent census advanced from one hundred and twenty-two thousand to 189,000 in ten years. He further said, "As the head of the Government, I feel that the missionaries are, so to speak, an unrecognised and unofficial branch of the great movement in which we are all engaged, and which alone justifies our presence in the country. They occupy a field which the officers of the Government are unable to take up. We are doing a great work in spreading the blessings of civilisation, making life and property secure, teaching the rule of law, and encouraging the growth of education. But we cannot directly touch on religious subjects. By the orders of our Queen, as well as by the natural fitness of things, we are prevented from proselytising. In religious matters we have to treat all alike, and to show no more consideration for one faith than for another, and yet I know right well that the only hope for the realisation of our dream, and for the true elevation and development of the people, lies in the evangelisation of India, and we know that the people who are carrying on this work are the missionaries. It is they who are filling up what is deficient in the efforts of Government, by devoting their lives and their labours to bringing the people of India to the knowledge of Christ."

THE KESWICK CONVENTION.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

THE OPENING GATHERINGS.

Convention time has come round again. During the week the thoughts of a large section of the religious world in Great Britain and Ireland will be focussed in the picturesque valley where Keswick lies embosomed among the towering hills of Cumberland. Everything points to a large and successful gathering. It is more and more becoming the custom to reach Keswick on the Saturday, so as to have a restful time before the rush of the Convention meetings begins. It is well to have the heart attuned for high spiritual experience by a season of quiet retrospection and stock-taking. The busy world is too much with all of us, early and late; and even the most deeply-taught need to obey the Master's injunction.

> Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile,
> Weary, I know it, of the press and throng;
> Wipe from your brow the sweat and dust and toil,
> And in my quiet strength again be strong.
> Then fresh from converse with your Lord, return,
> And work till daylight softens into even;
> The brief hours are not lost in which ye learn
> More of your Master and his rest in heaven.

There could be no better place than Keswick for such a quest. The soaring mountain heights; the cool, unfathomed depths of Derwentwater; the richness of the verdure—all are big with lessons of the Divine power and working when discerned by

> That inward eye
> Which is the bliss of solitude.

The solitude can easily be found here, and "the pensive mood" of which Wordsworth, the Lake poet, so beautifully sings, may well be regarded as a needful preparation for feeding on the rich repast of truth that is to be spread in the well-known tent day by day. Mr. Henry Lakin, the evangelist, well expressed the attitude in which the Christian ought to attend such a Convention, in a little address he gave to the crowd in the Market-place, on Saturday evening, at the Salvation Army service. He said we ought to come to Keswick as Jacob's sons went to Egypt in the time of famine—each man with an empty sack. And we ought to go away with our sacks full to overflowing, back to the famine land where thousands are perishing for lack of the bread of heaven. Only be sure that we come empty. The comparatively quiet interval of Sabbath and Monday can be turned to good account in seeing, through meditation and communion with God, that the emptying process is thorough and sufficient.

On Saturday afternoon and evening well-filled trains arrived at Keswick from North and South, and when Monday brings its customary large contingents this little highland town will have its housing accommodation taxed to the full. The voices that are to be heard this year in the tent and elsewhere are mainly those that have become familiar to Keswick frequenters. We shall miss Pastor Monod and Mr. Webb Peploe, both of whom were with us last year. Mr. Inwood, of Dublin, and Mr. Macgregor, of Aberdeen, are in the list of intended speakers, and there is much expectation as to the Gospel meetings that Mr. Moody will conduct in the large tent on Sabbath next. All these servants of God will have their message to give. The chief thing, however, to be desired is to stand in the place of the young man who told Rev. George Grubb on Saturday that he had come to Keswick not so much expecting any particular sort of experience as determined to meet with God.

The mention of Mr. Grubb's name leads one to say that in the preliminary gatherings he is taking a leading place. As we entered the tent on Saturday evening, very soon after the arrival of the train from London, it was with a strong sense of pleasurable anticipation that we saw his stalwart form on the platform, beside the well-known figure of Mr. Robert Wilson, the Convention Chairman. Those who have heard Mr. Grubb at former conferences will not be wrong in looking for many ardent and telling utterances from him during these coming days, all the more that he is fresh from the toils and the triumphs of his evangelistic tour at the Antipodes.

The attendance at the prayer-meeting of Saturday evening was larger, we think, than ever we have seen it. After devotional exercises we had from Mr. Grubb, based on the closing verses of Isa. ii., "The loftiness of man shall be bowed down . . . . and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day; and the idols he shall utterly abolish." The speaker recalled an occasion in 1874 when, in a large assembly in Dublin gathered to hear Mr. Moody, a Quaker lady rose in a corner of the hall, and in a clear voice the words were heard ringing out: "Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of?" So at the very beginning of this Convention we need to have our gaze taken away from every human agent and fixed on God Himself. He that cometh to God must believe. We have come to this place whence the Word of the Lord has gone forth into the whole world in past times. If we desire Him to be exalted at this time we must ask Him to utterly abolish in us the idols of self-admiration, of covetousness, of pride of position in the church—all that is rearing its head against Him. Let it fall as Dagon fell before the ark of the Lord. If any have been walking in the twilight let them come into the light of God, then things will be seen in their true proportion. It is only as we see Jesus that we see truth.

Mr. Grubb added to his few opening words an earnest prayer that God would cause this Convention to be the most wonderful of all that had been at Keswick. There are growing perplexities in the Church, and the wiles of Satan are increasing; there is need of God to work. A season of prayer followed. One brother made special mention of the unsaved young people who had been brought to Keswick by Christian friends—that God would bring them to Himself. A tender, womanly voice was heard in thanksgiving to God for mercies received at last year's meetings. A coloured brother prayed with great unction and fervour. Dr. Harry Guinness besought a special blessing on all students and missionaries and intending missionaries who might be present.

The early prayer-meeting on Sabbath morning was fairly well attended; the time was altogether taken up with song and petition for various objects relating to work and workers, and the proclamation of the Gospel during the day to the unsaved.

MR. GRUBB'S SERMON

in St. John's Church, in the forenoon, was heard by a crowded congregation. The discourse was felt to be an appropriate and powerful keynote to the exhorting of the week. The text was the prayer thrice repeated in Psalm lxxx.: "Turn us again, O God of Hosts, and cause thy face to shine: and we shall be saved." As we look at the Churches to-day (said the preacher), we must acknowledge that the vast majority of those who call themselves God's people need to be "turned," or converted over again. How many of them are living for the world and for self? The one remedy for the sins and failures of Christians is a turning again to God. Let us, in our Bible study this morning, see what the light of God's countenance will do for the soul that is willing to bear the light. Many of his people are afraid of the light; so long as they are, they are enshrouding God with darkness.

What will the light of his countenance do for us? We should find the first answer in Ps. xc. 8: "Thou hast set our iniquities before Thee; our secret sins in the light of thy countenance." This is not a happy subject, you say; we must have truth before we have happiness. It is no use building on a false foundation. The first thing that the light of God's countenance shows us is our exceeding sinfulness. There is nothing more needed in these days than

CONVICTION OF SIN.

How like the Church is to the world! Men are busily occupied in bridging over the gulf that ought to exist between the two; in trying to see how near they can go to the world in its pleasures and amusements. How to be respectable and yet put God out of their lives—that is the great problem of to-day. The light of God's countenance reveals these things, and we see them as sin. In one of your pretty lanes here I see a moss-covered stone, and in a careless mood I throw the stone over. Look at the spot, and you see a multitude of little black creeping things. All that I have done is to let in the light, but these creeping things love the darkness, and they hurry away. That mossy stone is a type of the human heart by nature. Outwardly it may be attractive, but when the light of God breaks in upon it the hidden things that hate the light are revealed. May God show us our secret sins by the light of his countenance!

But I would not leave you here, else it would be a sad message indeed. In Prov. xvi. 15 we read: "In the light of the King's countenance is life, and his favour is as a cloud of the latter rain." Here we have life for the unconverted and abundance of life for those who are already in God. In how many hearts here this morning is there the sunshine of God? Are your eyes upon Jesus only? Perhaps in the multitude of those here, although nearly all are professing Christians, there may be some utterly dead souls, who have never experienced a pulsation of the Divine life within them. Listen: "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God" in Keswick to-day, and "those that hear shall live" eternally.

In Psalm xliv. 3 we have more about this wonderful light. "They got not the land in possession by their own sword, neither did their own arm save them; but thy right hand, and thine arm, and the light of thy countenance, because thou hadst a favour unto them." We not only get life from the light of God's face, but here we find it the secret of perpetual victory. The land of Canaan—type of the true rest of faithfulness—is to be conquered not by struggling but by shining. The whole is shining, that is all. Of course, we cannot shine unless the light shines on us. None of us is light in himself; all we can do is to reflect the light. So long as Israel walked in the light they were victorious. I do not believe that it is necessary we should have periodical defeat in our Christian warfare. Israel was defeated when they got out of the light of God's countenance. Their first defeat was when Achan tampered with, and took for himself, things that ought either to have been destroyed, or devoted to God. If there be any sin in the camp at this Keswick assembly, may God reveal it and prepare his people for the path of perpetual victory.

One thing more. In Psalm lxxxix. 15 we read: "Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound [the trumpet sound of jubilee]: they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance. In thy name shall they rejoice all the day: and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted." Blessed are they who give glory to the blood of Jesus. For remember that these silver trumpets were made out of redemption silver, and whenever the priests blew them they told of the value of the blood shed and the sacrifice accepted within the veil.

There were three special things that the jubilee trumpet proclaimed to Israel—release from debt and bondage, restoration to all lost privileges, rest from their own works. What a grand thing to have all past debts remitted; to know in the light of the judgment that the long, black catalogue of guilt is for ever blotted out. That is the lowest or bass chord of the three needed to make this glorious and perfect harmony. A higher note is restoration of all we have lost—yes, more than we had lost in Adam. I would magnify the riches of my God this morning, and would tell you, oh, pauper soul, that you may come out of the poor-house, for your Father is Lord of all. It grieves Him that your head should be bowed down; put on thy beautiful garments, and look upon the face of thy God.

But there is more than release and restoration. The highest note of the jubilee trumpet is REST FOR ALL TOILERS.

There was to be no farm work done in Israel in jubilee year. God Himself condescended to become a farmer. He said: "I will cultivate the land for you; I will cause it to bring forth and bud; yea, it shall yield its fruits to you." So the toilers rested. Oh, believing toiler, come now to the land of rest. I like the chapter in which Bunyan beautifully describes the land of Beulah. Christian and Hopeful, he says, came to the land of Beulah, and in it the birds of paradise do sing very sweetly, and the sun doth shine all the day long, and the towers of Doubting Castle are altogether out of sight. That is what this Convention is intended for—that you should hear the birds of paradise sing; that the light of God's countenance should be in your heart all the day long; and that the towers of Doubting Castle should be lost to sight. I once took furnished apartments in Doubting Castle, and used to get angry when any one argued that I ought not to be there. But, praise God, some few years ago He taught me better. There is nothing that grieves his soul more than a doubting Christian. Let the towers of Doubting Castle vanish for ever from your horizon. They were bred and born in hell; let them sink down there and perish for ever. Then it should become the most natural thing for you to believe your God, just as natural as it was before to doubt.

I close with a word as to how to get into the light of God's countenance this day in St. John's Church, Keswick. Take an illustration from a little girl four years of age. I was staying in the house of a dear friend, and a lady called one day and presented a doll to a little girl in the house. The next day was Sunday. The little girl brought the doll to nurse, and said: "Nurse, dress my doll to-day; I want to play with it." "Nay; to-day is Sunday, and if I were to dress the doll Jesus would see." "Oh, nurse," replied the little one, "I will tell you what to do; then Jesus won't see." When I heard it I said to myself: "Yes; it is all very well for me to laugh at the little girl, but I have done the same thing myself. I have pulled down the blind when the light of God's countenance was beginning to flash into me, and that is why my poor heart is hard." Do not be above learning a lesson from the child; you are just as silly yourself. Let Jesus and his word come in. Whatever the light of God reveals, the blood of Jesus will cleanse from. The blood and the light are co-extensive in their operation. So do not be afraid of the light. Then you will go forth with the light in your soul, and the peace of God in your heart.

PULL DOWN THE BLIND,

At the forenoon hour an overflow service was held in the tent, when Rev. W. Haslam preached to a goodly congregation with his accustomed vigour and pointedness of appeal. The "meeting for worship" at the Friends' service in Battersby Hall was a very interesting one. A well-known worker who was present informed us that the voices of about a score of brethren and sisters were heard, and the season was most profitable.

Our Irish brethren have, as usual, pitched their little group of tents in an adjacent field. With them, even more than with the larger company who lodge under solid roofs, the weather is an important item. Up to the time of writing, there is every promise of fair weather. On Sabbath there was a glorious wealth of sunshine, with a gentle breeze to temper the heat. The barometer is on the up-grade, and it is, at any rate, hoped that this year may prove an exception to most of the Convention seasons, when copious rains have descended some part of the week. Rain keeps the tent cool; so that whatever be the state of the elements there will be compensations.

The latter half of Sabbath was marked by a long tale of services, but there is nothing of special import to record in connection with them. In the tent in the afternoon there was a well-attended meeting, when Mr. Grubb addressed Christians on the fulness of privilege there is in Christ. Soon after that audience had dispersed an interesting children's service took place, conducted by Mr. Hutchinson, of the Special Service Mission, who was assisted in the speaking by Mr. Millard, one of Mr. Grubb's companions in the Keswick Mission. Mr. Grubb preached again to a densely-crowded congregation in St. John's Church in the evening. At the same hour an overflow meeting was held in the tent, when Mr. Haslam was the preacher. Later in the evening there was a final meeting in the tent, over which Mr. Millard presided. An address, characterised by extraordinary fervour and wide knowledge of the letter of Scripture, but somewhat crude in its expository qualities, was given by a dark skinned brother from Tinnevelly, India. It was partly evangelistic, and partly an unfolding of the speaker's ideas of what he termed "the blessing," but it lacked concentration, and the audience had largely melted away before its conclusion.

PRAYER FOR IRELAND.

For several years past the "distressful" sister country has sent a goodly band of praying and working people to the Convention. It is the custom now to set apart the early meeting on Monday to prayer for a blessing on Ireland and the work of God there. The deep interest shown in the Sister Isle was evidenced by the large attendance at the meeting last Monday morning; the tent was about three-parts full. There were no addresses; the whole hour was spent in prayer and praise. A number of Irish friends, who are carrying on the work of evangelisation in various ways, returned thanks to God for the measure of success given in the past, and earnestly besought a greater measure of acceptance with the people. Special thanksgiving was made for the outcome of the Arklow troubles, and for the freedom now granted there to proclaim the Gospel message in the open air unhindered by the authorities. Messrs. Thomas and Joseph Connellan, with others who have cut loose from Rome, and are now holding and teaching the pure faith of the Gospel, were remembered before God.

One brother earnestly prayed God that a rich blessing might rest on the colleges; that many consecrated men might be trained in them, and sent forth as missionaries to their own and other lands, and that some modern St. Patrick might arise, who should, in the name of Jesus Christ, lead the evangelisation of the whole country. Several ladies mingled their voices with the others in prayer, one specially asking for a spirit of courage in dealing faithfully with the souls of Romanists in their own households. A blessing was asked on the circulation of the Scriptures and of portions of the Scriptures and that the copies distributed might not be taken away by the priests. In a closing petition General Hatt Noble gave thanks for what had been done in Ireland, and prayer for a greater spirit of trustful expectation. The solitary reference to anything that could be called political was the petition that such measures as were for the real good of the people might be passed by Parliament, and that such measures as were not so might not be passed—a prayer in which everybody could sincerely join.

REPORTS FROM IRISH WORKERS.

Monday has been, to a large extent, an off day, so far as public meetings are concerned, but they are creeping in till every available hour is likely soon to be occupied. This year, the morning prayer meeting for Ireland was followed up by another at ten o'clock for hearing reports of God's working in that land by some of those who have been engaged in Christian service there. The day was magnificently fine, but the attractions of the summer scenery in Lakeland were unavailing as against the fascinating theme of Gospel work in Ireland. There was a splendid muster, and the meeting was altogether "deloightful," to adopt an Irishism in spelling. For thrilling interest it will be hard to beat it during the coming Convention days.

After a song and an intensely fervid prayer from Professor Maddox, a coloured brother, the stand was taken by Mr. Mumford, one of the itinerating colporteurs of the Irish Church Mission. He had a truly wonderful story to tell of the way in which the truths of salvation are making their way among the Irish peasantry in the remoter country districts. He described the origin in Donegal, some two years ago, of itinerating work at Irish fairs and markets. He said he could tell of many Roman Catholic families which have utterly renounced that system and accepted Jesus Christ as their only Saviour. He and his companion in service and tribulation had visited fairs and markets in the counties of Louth, Tyrone, Monaghan, Cavan, Fermanagh, Derry, and Donegal. Of course he had to speak of opposition from the priests, who leave no stone unturned to discredit the evangelists in the eyes of the people, and to destroy any copies of the Scripture that find their way into Irish homes. But the remarkable thing is that the peasantry are getting to care less and less for what the priests say, and take care to conceal from them the Testaments and portions they purchase. The desire to get the Word of God, as described by Mr. Mumford, is very touching. He told of one remote spot in the mountains, where the dwellers in a cabin were too poor even to expend a penny for a Testament. Some neighbours were applied to, but they were as impoverished. As a last resort the good woman of the house offered some eggs; the colporteur carried off his eggs, and the household had its cherished possession. The Bible, the speaker declared, is now doing for Ireland what it did for England at the Reformation. Some lively and most interesting experiences at country fairs were sketched—how the people crowd around, listen to the reading of the Scriptures and the talk of the workers, and finally purchase copies of the Testament to carry home with them. Mr. Fluke, the companion in arms of the previous speaker, also had a most gratifying story to relate. The singing of Mr. Sankey's hymns at the markets is a source of great attraction to the people, who are quite unaccustomed to such sweet and simple Gospel messages in song. Mr. Fluke mentioned one place where no inside place of meeting could be obtained, and a Roman Catholic publican lent them seats from his public-house sufficient to accommodate seventy people.

THE DUBLIN BIRD'S-NEST

was well represented by Miss Smyly, whose narrative was equally interesting with those that had gone before. She spoke of the marked change for the better that has taken place in Ireland within her recollection. A very few years ago such itinerating work would have been regarded as quite impossible. The English people have no idea of the change that is passing over Ireland. As to the work among the young in Dublin, they have now thirteen hundred or fourteen hundred children, mostly the offspring of Roman Catholic parents, under their tuition. Many of those trained at the schools in Dublin are now working for Christ in different parts of the world. So great is the desire of parents to get their children into the institution, that, if there were three or four Bird's-nests, they would all be filled. What is specially needed now in Ireland is for individual workers to come to the help of those in the field. If all Irish Christians were baptized with the power of the Holy Ghost, and if consecrated workers would go over from England to help, there would be a great harvest of souls.

WHY IS IRELAND NOT EVANGELISED?

In a closing address Rev. G. C. Grubb set himself to reply to this question. The answer, he said, is to be found in the New Testament words, "For fear of the Jews." There is a remarkable analogy, he said, between the Jews and the Roman Catholics in this matter. Wherever this phrase is used it refers to the Jewish leaders—Pharisees, Scribes, Sadducees. So, the great hindrance in Ireland now is cowardly fear of the priests. Let Protestants take the blame to themselves. This craven fear can only be taken away by the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus were secret disciples of Christ "for fear of the Jews." So there are many secret disciples among the mass of Roman Catholics to-day. In John xix. 20 we are told that "the doors were shut for fear of the Jews." People tell us to-day that God in his providence has shut the doors of service in Ireland. Not so. God in his providence has opened the doors, but we keep them shut because we are afraid of the Romish hierarchy. And, truth to tell, it is something to be afraid of. No one knows what the power of Rome is till he has faced it. Rome is the mistress of lies and the mother of abominations. Every year I live (exclaimed Mr. Grubb) I hate Rome more intensely! How I grieve that you in England are bodily going over to Rome. In a very short time

if things go on at the same rate as they are doing now. I am perfectly certain of that. But another thing I am certain of: Ireland will be totally emancipated from Rome, though England be at the feet of the Pope! Do not let people persuade you that Romanism is not growing in England. We who have made it a special study to find out things at first hand know that every year England is getting more and more at the feet of the great Pope, and soon the nation of heretics will be faithful to Rome. Yes, there is trouble ahead in England. Let us speak the truth boldly on this subject. Now is the time for action—not in the energy of the flesh and carnal abuse of one another, but in the love of the Holy Ghost. Such love makes you faithful to your brother, and that is real love.

Mr. Grubb said he had this telegram that morning from Mr. Stoney in Ireland: "Ask men to volunteer for Ireland who cannot go to foreign missionary work." As to this, Mr. Grubb urged that candidates for the foreign field in connection with all the Societies should first of all go to Ireland, and preach for a time to Roman Catholics. The opposition they would meet with would test them, but men of courage and of an upright heart would do great things in the power of God. There were those who said that Romanism is not heathenism. Mr. Grubb read some striking extracts from the Romish breviary, showing how Mary is trusted and worshipped in the place of Christ: "Thou, Mary, art the only hope of sinners" "Oh, lady, in heaven we have but one advocate, and that is thyself." "We often obtain more promptly what we ask by calling on the name of Mary than by invoking that of Jesus." "Mary so loved the world as to give her only-begotten Son," &c. The fact is, Romanists are worshipping a goddess as much as any heathen. Who will enter the open doors in Ireland? God is calling for saviours for Ireland, and we want you in England to share the blessing. We long for the day when Ireland will be great, glorious, and free. The Lord hasten it!

At three o'clock a meeting was held at Friar's Craig, by the side of the lake, on behalf of the International Christian Police Association.

MONDAY EVENING'S MEETING.

On Monday evening the tent was crowded for the first meeting of the Convention proper. Mr. Wilson presided, and gave a brief exhortation to lowliness of spirit from the last chapter of Job. Dr. Elder Cumming, of Glasgow, gave the opening address from Joshua iii. 5. Regarding the meeting as a time of preparation, he said that the duties of to night must be discharged if we would cherish the prospects of to-morrow, The first duty is, "Sanctify yourselves." There must be separation from every known sin. Is there anything hindering the flow of God's grace into our souls? If this is to be to us anything, more than a mere talking Convention we must be willing to be separated from that thing, whatever it may be. If we are ignorant of it let us ask God to show it to us. It may be temper, self-consciousness, vanity, fear of man. Let God deal with it.

Referring to an occasion in Jewish history when the Israelites stripped off their ornaments before the Lord, because God was about to deal with them, Dr. Cumming said that if we realise what it is to meet God face to face we shall not cherish the desire for bodily ornament, or for anything that would separate us in heart from Him. Another part of the sanctifying process antecedent to fulness of blessing, is the presentation of our bodies to God that He may use them as He will. Taking up the second division of the text, the speaker described the scene at the Jordan, the Ark of the Covenant being borne in front so as to be seen of all the people. The ark symbolises Christ, and the place in the tent where any one can best see Christ is the best place. The addresses that will profit will be those in which Christ is lifted up. The ark went before into the Jordan. We must, in Christ, have gone by faith into the place of death before we can enter into soul-rest. The question for us is, Can we trust God and go whenever or wherever He leads? It is the part of every true disciple to follow the Master. If we are prepared to follow Christ, He will bring us through, it may be through fire and water, into a wealthy place.

A second address followed, from Rev. Charles Fox, based on Genesis xiv. 18. He likened Keswick to the King's Dale, where Melchizedek met Abraham. Every believer has to meet with the King of Salem and the King of Sodom. The one is the king of consecration, the other is the king of compromise. There is ever a great strife between them regarding which we shall belong to. Melchizedek, king of righteousness, always meets Abrahamic men. Who are they? They are those who, like Abraham, obey the call of God, and come out of the idol country. They are those who go forth to rescue captive brethren, and who return from the slaughter of the kings of evil all round.

The King of consecration will come to us in conference as Melchizedek came—in the threefold character of King of righteousness, King of peace, and Priest of the Most High God. If we are Abrahamic men, holding the promises of God, He will not only meet with us, but bless us. The promises are true milestones that mark God's way back to his weary, faltering or failing children. If you want to brighten your darkness in the time of trouble and trial, strike one of the promises against the wood of the cross. Melchizedek brought forth bread and wine when he blessed Abraham, a symbol of the blessed communion of the broken body and shed blood of our great High Priest. If we have this blessed communion with our Lord we shall be strengthened for further victory and service. What does our Melchizedek expect of us? Abraham gave him tithes of all. The people paid greater tithes at Pentecost than at any other time. The law is not abolished in Christ; it is fulfilled. They gave a tenth under the law. Now under the Pentecostal law we give all. We give the sacrifice of a broken spirit and a consecrated body. The King of Sodom may come and claim our persons, while he will allow us to keep the goods of worldly wealth and position and ease. Let our answer be Abraham's: "I will not take from a thread even to a shoelatchet anything that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made thee rich."

So there must be renunciation, and the true heart that shall reject the overtures of the King of Sodom. Let us so live and die that it shall not be said of us, "The King of Sodom made him rich." It is the Most High God, the Possessor of Heaven and Earth, who hath made us rich. To Him be praise, glory, and dominion for ever!

At a large prayer-meeting on Tuesday morning many petitions were offered for blessing on individuals, in family life, and on workers all over the world. Rev. J. J. Luce gave a short address on "Doing the Will of God in order to know the Doctrine." The pathway into the Divine will is a yielding up of the human will.

FROM BISHOP TAYLOR.

Our missions in Angola are a great success in self-support, and the salvation of the young people of our mission nursery. The work of Congo district is more complicated. Our disappointments and delays in attempting to open a transport line up the Congo and Kassai rivers to far interior countries, require a vast amount of faith, hope, patience, and push. Our plan is good. Our steamer, Anne Taylor, is a success in herself, but to make her a source of revenue, besides our own carrying, we need a warehouse at Boma, in which to receive freight from the ocean steamers.

At a cost of over 1200 dollars cash we have bought a site for a mission house, church, and warehouse at Boma, but for lack of funds we have not yet been able to build, and cannot go into debt. For navigating the middle passage of eighty-eight miles, between the impassable cataracts of the Congo, our steel sloop has been built this year by Brothers Walker, Jenson, and Burr, and has made her first trip. We planned to build our smaller steamer for the Upper Congo waterways over a year ago, and informed you that 11,000 dollars would be required to complete and launch her on Stanley Pool. Up to date we have received but 5000 dollars of the amount required.

On the west coast our coffee orchards and mission nursery are developing most encouragingly, but both require time to grow to maturity, Meantime, our eight mission houses of frame weather boarding and shingles, on Kalvada river, and our six houses of wood, with iron siding and roof, on Kru coast, which I supposed would certainly last ten or twelve years (and that, meantime, our coffee orchards would not only give support to our workers there, but would also build permanent mission-houses of brick or stone), have within less than five years gone to decay, through consumption of the ants, &c., so that we have hard work to give shelter to our people.

Our income keeps up its average of other years, but we need extra help to meet pending emergencies. Our methods of work are, as we assuredly believe, sound and reliable, but they lead us by an unexplored route, and we encounter many swamps and rivers not laid down on the map, so that we have to live and learn. We are doing the best we know, keeping out of debt and trusting God through his people, to see that our faithful men and women, who have put their lives into this work, shall not suffer from want of anything essential to the demands of their undertaking. Address me, or my son, Ross Taylor, at 210, Eighth-avenue, New York. In the name of the Lord,

William Taylor.

SALVATION ARMY ANNIVERSARY.

An enthusiastic audience filled Exeter Hall on Monday evening on the occasion of the twenty-seventh anniversary of the Salvation Army. Large as the gathering was, it was but the London celebration, as this year the anniversary is being observed in various districts all over the land, instead of having monster assemblies such as those held in former years at the Alexandra and Crystal Palaces.

General Booth, who seemed to feel that recent criticisms demanded some vigorous answer, devoted the opening part of his address, which lasted nearly two hours, to a defence of the Salvation Army and of its social scheme. As to actual work, it would be asked, What had been done during the past year? They were the largest missionary organisation on earth, with over five thousand officers at home, and more than six thousand officers abroad. In 1891 they had 4292 corps and outposts; this year 5293. In 1891 there were 10,452 officers; this year 11,113. They had thirty-two newspapers and six magazines, the annual circulation being 47,600,000. There were eighty-six training garrisons—that was to say, eighty-six colleges in their university. They had twenty-five homes of rest for sick and wounded officers. They occupied thirty-eight countries and colonies. This year they had gone to Western Australia, where they had already got a magnificent footing, and converted some of the biggest blackguards.

The Army preached salvation in twenty-four different languages, and had local officers and bandsmen to the number of 31,713. Coming to the social work, he explained that in different parts of the world they had forty-three rescue homes, seventy-two slum corps, fifteen prison-gate homes, twelve food depôts, twenty-four shelters, one inebriate home, and eleven elevators or factories, the total number of social institutions being 205. In connection with them 915 officers were employed. A large number of officers, lasses, lived in the slums to do the slum work—"angels" the people called them, and so they were. More were wanted. In connection with the rescue work, 1,484 lost creatures were received up to last Christmas, and 972 since—nine hundred and seventy-two girls!

The General closed by enlarging on his willingness to submit the social scheme and the books thereof to an impartial committee, who should decide on the following questions:—"Is General Booth personally benefited in any shape or form by the Darkest England scheme, or is he the disinterested servant of the public he represents himself to be? Are the accounts and cash affairs and balance-sheets managed in a fair, business-like, and honourable manner? Are the moneys expended on the lines laid down in the Darkest England scheme expended in such an economic and business-like manner as promises a reasonable measure of success?"

Colonel Lucy Booth said farewell on the eve of starting for India; while Mrs. Ricks, who came from Liberia to see the Queen, avowed herself a member of the Salvation Army.

TEXTS FOR CHILDREN TO WORK.—Parents are often glad to hear of anything which may help to pass usefully and pleasantly a wet day at home. Here, then, is a new series of outline texts which little fingers may work in silk or wool. The designs are fresh and pleasing, and the directions our own little ones find clear. The set of six may be had (price 1s. 2d.) of Miss H. C. Brown, Trelawney-road, Falmouth.

"The Lord Kept Adding."

Whilst reflecting on the unsatisfactory additions to the membership of the churches in the town where I labour, after a most successful series of meetings had been carried on by Rev. John McNeill, I was impressed by the words (Acts ii. 47), "The Lord kept adding to the Church daily such as were being saved." That was how Church history began, and that, I felt, is how it should be continued, and would be, if Christian workers were filled with Pentecostal power.

As we live in the era inaugurated by the outpoured Spirit, I began to pray and work directly for the realisation of that text in the experience of the congregation with which I was connected. I watched for souls, making this my business every day; and the consequence was that, when the quarterly communion came round, there were seventy-three added to the membership of the church. The work never ceased, there was a daily addition, without any noise or comment; and this is going on up to the time at which I write.

It has been a remarkable experience, which has led me to modify my opinions as to the state of mind of many belonging to the non-church-going class, and the relative value of the different methods of aggressive work. I have now reached the conviction that no method of work is so efficient as personal dealing with people at their own firesides, and that were they as they have been during the past few weeks for political candidates, the churches would speedily be filled. During this election, thousands of willing workers, male and female, have gone from house to house and pressed for a decision on the great question which has been submitted to the country, with an earnestness which was in many ways praiseworthy, and I say confidently from my own experience, that if the same earnest visiting and conversation were enlisted in the service of Christ there is not a congregation of evangelical Christians in the country but would have the joy of seeing the Pentecostal text fulfilled in their experience, "the Lord kept adding to the Church daily such as were being saved."

But, with a view that others may share in my new-found joy, I will here in one or two homes, to which I was providentially led.

STATE MY EXPERIENCES

One Sabbath I was asked by a young Christian worker to visit her brother, who was not attending any church. On the evening of the next day, I called at his house, and found him and his wife seated by the fireside. I frankly told my errand, and at the same time mentioned that I had come to him at the request of his sister, who was longing with all her heart to see him walking in the ways of the Lord. He admitted that "Jessie" was a good girl, and added that he was grateful to her for giving him the privilege of welcoming the first minister who had ever entered his house.

The conversation then was free and unrestrained on both sides, and during its course I learned that he and his wife had once been members of the Church, but had "lapsed," as it is called, at a time when poverty had come upon him through illness in his family. Nobody in connection with the congregation to which he belonged had visited him during that trying time; and, as he put it, "I got indifferent to the Church, because I found the Church indifferent to me — although possibly I would have been better looked after if I had been a rich man." As I found that he had no hostility to the Gospel, but seemed touched by some references I made to the love of Christ, I inquired how he had satisfied his spiritual needs during the years in which he had never crossed the threshold of a church, and received this answer: "The special services of evangelists like Mr. Moody, Dr. Pentecost, and Mr. McNeill were greatly blessed to me, and on Sabbath evenings I listened in the street to the fervent addresses of the members of the Salvation Army, or dropped into some mission-hall." That man readily took my hand, when it was held out to him, and is now in the church every Sabbath day with his wife and young family.

OTHER TYPICAL CASES.

One evening, as I was addressing the mission meeting I noticed a young couple who seemed deeply interested. On speaking to them at the close, I learned that they had come to town about a year ago, but had not connected themselves with any church, and had entered the hall that evening, following the choir, who had been singing in the street. Next evening I called on them, and found that the husband had been converted in a neighbouring town, and had been an active Christian worker in connection with a congregation famous for its aggressive zeal, but that on removing to his present situation he had allowed month after month to pass away without joining any church, until now, as he put it, "he was nearly as cold as ice." He went to a drawer and brought out his certificate of church membership, handing it to me with the remark, "Do get me some work, that I may regain my first love." His young wife expressed the desire to join her husband in remembering Christ, and they are now both members.

The third case is also, I believe, typical of many which might be found in every congregation. One evening, given up to seat-letting, I observed a young woman walking away down the church avenue, who was not known to me. I received her name and address from the presiding deacon, but on going to that address discovered that she had changed her residence. It was with great difficulty that I found out where she stayed, but I was rewarded for my exertions in this search by the conversation which I had with her at her own fireside, in the "gloamin'" of a sweet summer day. She was indeed a fine specimen of Christ's "hidden ones," very gentle and retiring, but working hard to support herself and her aged grandmother, who seldom left the ingleside. She had made no acquaintanceships in the congregation, going quietly to and from church every Sabbath, and sharing the living bread she got there with her aged relative. Several communions had gone past since she began to attend the church, but though she loved Christ, her natural shyness of disposition kept her from joining the young communicants' class. I can never forget the look of gratitude she gave me as I introduced the subject of communicating; and ere I had gone far she interrupted me by saying, with deep feeling, "For more than a year I have longed to be with Him at his own table."

In my wanderings, I also came across some who had been converted under Mr. McNeill's fervent appeals, but had been uncared for since he left town. From my intercourse with them I was led to see very clearly that if the visit of any special evangelist to a town is to be properly utilised, there should be the most perfect arrangements on the part of a local committee for taking the names and addresses of those who profess to come to a knowledge of the truth at the after meetings, and that ministers should put themselves specially about at such a time "to watch for souls."

are being greatly owned and blessed by God, far more so than is generally supposed. His influence for good is very marked among working men; and from this class alone the churches of every town he visits should be greatly strengthened, if the ministers give him a cordial backing and heartily follow up his work. This, at least, I can vouch for, that he has deeply stirred the community where my lot is cast; and that his visit has been followed by the most remarkable reaping time I have had during the past twenty-five years. S.

DR. HORDEN, BISHOP OF MOOSONEE, has decided to resign his see shortly. Dr. Horden (says the London correspondent of The Manchester Guardian) has been out in the "Great Lone Land" for more than forty years, and has accomplished a great work. He has identified himself thoroughly with the Indians, sharing in their privations and their struggles. He has completely won their affections, and is everywhere through this vast diocese regarded as their father. He has been a bishop of the true apostolic order. A log hut or a tent, often erected with his own hands by the side of a river, has not infrequently been his "palace," and a sleigh drawn by dogs has done duty for the customary carriage. He has known what it is to cook his own food, and he says he is able to "darn a pair of stockings as well as any old woman." His evangelistic labours have been most fruitful, and he has just completed the crown of his work in the translation of the entire Bible into the language of the Cree Indians.

MRS. BAEYERTZ IN LONDON.

At the Noon Prayer Meeting at the Y.M.C.A., 186, Aldersgate-street, on Monday, Mrs. Baeyertz gave an animated account of how God called her to Himself and gave her a work to do for Him. In the course of her address she said: As a Jewess I went to Australia at the age of twenty. There I married a Christian gentleman, and still a thorough Jew at heart attended with him the Church of England. I looked on Jesus as an impostor, but as I saw the peace of true Christians I began to wish I were like them. So I resolved to become a Christian, and knowing no better, tried the way of sacraments and forms. I was christened, then confirmed, then took the sacrament; but none of these brought peace. At length, my husband died, and I longed more than ever to know his Saviour that I might follow him. I had never read the New Testament, looking upon it as mythology, but I set to reading the Gospel of John; and as I read, I had no vision, no trance, but the Word opened up to me and I saw God, Jesus as God, and as my Saviour who died for me.

The speaker told of persecution and prejudice she had to endure for Christ's sake, but on this we do not stay. Proceeding, she said:—

Then I felt I must work for Him, and God gave great blessing and brought many to listen. Three years ago I was led to visit Queensland and New Zealand, then in the most marvellous way He led me to go to America, where I knew no one. The Y.M.C.A. Secretary at San Francisco asked me to take a mission at Los Angelos. Thousands came to the meetings, and deep interest was awakened. In Boston I had an interesting mission in Dr A. J. Gordon's Church. Then in Chicago, Toronto, Quebec, Montreal, Kingston, Ottawa, London, great numbers attended the meetings, and much blessing was granted.

Now I have been led to come to England, not knowing where He may lead and what work He may have for me. At present the only arrangement, made by my friend, Mr. Henry Varley, is for a week's mission, to commence next Sunday in the West London Tabernacle. The services on the Sundays begin at 11 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. Monday to Friday inclusive, Bible Readings will be given each afternoon at 3.30. Evening meetings at 8. Sankey's hymns will be used. Christian workers needed for special prayer and service in the inquiry rooms.

A SONG OF SERVICE.

To scenes of labour, to fields of toil,
In the Master's name we go,
To plough and harrow the fallow soil,
And the precious seed to sow.

We go to the vineyards where drooping vines,
With their purple clusters bend,
Whilst the noonday sun in its glory shines,
To culture, and prune, and tend.

We go as divers midst seas of sin,
For pearls of exceeding worth,
As miners toiling rare gems to win,
Rich gold in the mine of earth.

We go to war with the world's great foe,
'Neath the King's red banner royal,
With the sword of the Spirit to lay him low,
And rescue the spoiler's spoil.

We go to reap on the harvest plain,
That the feet of the sowers trod,
With tears and pain, now the waving grain
Gleams white in the light of God.

We go to life's forests,—moor and glen,
Sweet blossoms of love to find,
Even the souls of the children of men
In our Saviour's wreath to bind.

O blessed service, O life of love,
Though we labour, war, or wait,
The time will come when our Father above
Will open the homeland gate.

Then shall his servants their Lord behold,
And the wealth of their labours bring,
Wheat, grapes, and lilies, pearls, gems, and gold,
To the feet of their God and King.

NORTHFIELD SUMMER SCHOOL.

Last week we reported on the opening gathering, on July 2, of this interesting assembly. Some further notes will indicate the tenor of the discussions and addresses.

The meetings of Sabbath, July 3, were large, and full of profit. In the Congregational Church in the forenoon Dr. Munhall gave a short Bible reading on the Need of the Holy Spirit. Then Dr. Gordon preached on the Promises of the Spirit, addressing himself chiefly to the young men. He urged the importance of seeking Divine guidance even in matters of what we call secular education. The Holy Spirit alone, he said, has the key to the treasure-house of wisdom and righteousness in the Bible. The sufficiency of learning is to discover that learning is insufficient. Without striving after any stereotyped experience, all Christians should desire to apprehend and appropriate the Holy Spirit as the great agent in sanctification. In Rom. viii. we have seven things that the Spirit gives us: Freedom (v. 2), strength (11), mortifying of evil (13), guidance, sonship (16), help for our infirmities (26), and intercession (26).

At an afternoon meeting the same topic was considered, Mr. Mott remarking that he hoped the study would be carried into the rooms and tents, and that each student would seek a personal experience of the power of the Holy Ghost.

A short Missionary Conference was held in Stone Hall in the evening, and there Dr. H. Clay Trumbull, editor of The Sunday School Times, gave an able and inspiriting address on the duty of deriving strength for the present from the survey of the past. Growing knowledge and growing experience ought to fit for higher triumphs in personal life and Christian service.

INDEPENDENCE DAY,

July 4, was observed after the customary fashion, much expression of patriotic fervour being mingled with the expository and missionary interest. One of the great charms of these Northfield Conferences is their variety, and on this day there was more than the usual scope for that. The importance of progressive and thorough Bible study was pressed home by Mr. Mott at the early meeting. The book of Acts was set down for special attention during the Conference, under the guidance of Mr. Speer; while "Christ among Men" was the subject selected by Mr. James McConaughy in his training class.

On Monday forenoon an address on Christian citizenship was given by Mr. Sparhawke, of Philadelphia, and there was the regular athletic exercises in the afternoon. In the evening there was an oration by President Andrews, of Brown University, on "The Duty of a Public Spirit." Eighteen English students present sang the National Anthem, and at the close there was a great open-air rally of patriots, of speech-making, and fireworks.

On Tuesday, July 5th, missionary matters were quite to the front in addition to the classes for Bible study and for practical training. Dr. Gordon, of Boston, was the chief speaker at the forenoon assembly in Stone Hall, having for his topic, "The Century of Missions, what it has accomplished, and what it has prepared." Within these wide boundaries there was range enough for statistics, reports, exhortations, and appeals of a very impressive and encouraging sort. The task assigned us, observed Dr. Gordon, is not the task of bringing all the world to Christ, but of bringing Christ to all the world. The Gospel and theology of missions, like that of redemption, are Christo-centric. Instead of reaching out to all the world to lift it up to Christ, we take our stand in Christ, and reach out to all the world. It makes quite a difference which way you look at it, for the tide of the world's desire is not toward Christ, but the tide of Christ's desire is toward the world. The signs of the present time as indicating preparation for great things in the evangelisation of the world were dwelt on, and the second advent of Christ set forth as the goal of all missionary endeavour at home and abroad.

THE BRITISH DELEGATES were assigned a part of the time on Thursday morning, July 7, to report on work among students in the old country. This was done by Mr. Williams, representing Wales, Mr. Hamilton, of Glasgow, Mr. Bird, of Cambridge, and Mr. Thomas, of Edinburgh. The last-named closed his address with a prophecy that the dozen students who would come over next year to represent the British Universities would bring news of a greater increase of missionary students than America could report. The volunteer missionary movement, he declared, was growing faster than any such movement had been known to grow in Great Britain.

"The Study of the Bible in Spots" was the somewhat peculiar title of an address by Dr. A. F. Schauffler, of New York, in the forenoon. Different periods of Bible story were picked out for special study, and this method commended. There followed a comprehensive survey of the Christian Pulpit, by Dr. Frank Bristol, of Chicago, who appealed to the students to join the ministry of the Gospel. A long roll of famous preachers and teachers was recited; all of these would probably have wielded no influence on their generation if they had not entered the Christian ministry.

In the evening Dr. Schauffler had much that was valuable and weighty to say, on "Personal Work for Christ." He closed as follows: "Many of our friends are waiting for us to speak to them. Hardly a man here but has some friend to whom if he shall go he will find a welcome, and who is wondering why you don't come. God can also bring strangers together, and we may be brought in contact with some one on our way home from this convention. Let us be quick with our thought, ready with our hands, and speedy with our doings, and large with our hearts, and pick up those whom we may win for the Master, and we shall shine to his praise and glory and our infinite rejoicing through the ages of eternity. 'God make you and me brave and earnest and faithful, and then certainly he will not fail to make us successful."

The first week of the Convention closed on Friday, July 8. The principal utterance of the day was a powerful sermon in the forenoon by Mr. R. G. Speer, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, from 1 John ii. 15-17. The love of the world in its essence and its influence was very searchingly described, and earnest exhortations were made in language of eloquence and power to let this worldly love give place to the constraining love of Christ.

Saturday is to a large extent an off-day so far as serious study is concerned, but July 9 being very wet, the athletic exercises were postponed to the Monday, and the hours of meeting given up to reports. In the forenoon the intercollegiate work of the Y.M.C.A. found able and experienced exponents in Messrs. Mott, Brockman, and Layford. The last, who is an Evangelist, told of six months' work among the institutions on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Brockman pleaded the claims of the South, and said there were whole States therein where there is not a Bible-class to be found, or a single volunteer, or any conception of organised Christian work. Mr. Mott rose and said he had been wondering what Mr. Moody would do if here, and he was convinced that he would not send Mr. Brockman and others back to this important work without some aid. At his request blank slips of paper were distributed among the students, and each man was requested to send in the amount of money he would subscribe for the intercollegiate work for the coming year, to be paid by Dec. 1.

A remarkable scene followed. The slips were handed to the desk and read rapidly by Mr. Mott, two assistants keeping tally. In less than twenty minutes it was found that 2500 dollars had been raised. Mr. H. M. Moore, of Boston, offered prayer, and then it was suggested that any who wished might undertake the collection of funds from their friends at home. This suggestion was adopted, and while the collectors were at work, Mr. Moore announced that he would give 100 dollars. In a few minutes more the amount had been raised to 3000 dollars, and Mr. Mott called on D. W. McWilliams, of Brooklyn, for a prayer of praise. The meeting closed with a hymn of praise, and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop J. M. Thoburn.

Of the 12,000 dollars needed by the international Committee of the Y.M.C.A. for the coming year, 1000 dollars was raised at the Southern summer school in Knoxville, 1500 dollars at the school at Lake Geneva, and the 3000 dollars raised here increases the amount already secured to nearly half the sum required.

We hope, in due course, to report the Northfield Convention.

"TRUE STORY" ILLUSTRATED LEAFLETS.—Mr. Josiah Spiers is issuing, at 13A, Warwick-lane, E.C., eight attractive leaflets well suited for distribution among young people. We shall be glad to know that they are widely circulated after Gospel meetings. (2s. per one hundred; large quantities at reduction.)

CEYLON'S GREAT NEED.

Three years ago I brought before your readers Ceylon's great need of Christian ladies who would take the simple Gospel of Christ to the Buddhist women of that beautiful island. The appeal met with immediate and most generous response. As a result, three ladies have gone forth, and have been working lovingly and earnestly in Kandy and the hill country, to bring the women and girls to Christ. One who went entirely at her own charges has had a small room built in a Singhalese village thirty miles from Kandy, and makes it, sometimes for weeks together, a centre of itineration in the villages around.

The two other ladies have opened a school in Kandy, in connection with the Church of England Zenana Society, which aims at reaching the daughters of the Kandian Chiefs, and which has already brought under Christian influence and teaching a considerable number of that most influential and important class. Rev. George Everard, of Dover, who recently visited the school, says that nothing which he saw, either in India or Ceylon, impressed him so deeply or interested him more than that Clarence Memorial School of "King's daughters," as he calls them. They delighted him by writing out accurately from memory the substance of his address to them, and of a sermon which he subsequently preached to the Church Missionary Society Singhalese congregation in Trinity Church, Kandy; and their repetition of Scripture, both in English and their own language, surprises as much as it gratifies those who visit the school.

But a great present difficulty has arisen, and we turn to the readers of The Christian, who so liberally helped us to set this work on foot, to assist us in removing it. On these workers, and others like them who are devotedly labouring for Christ, a heavy present loss has fallen. The failure of the New Oriental Bank has shut up almost all available means, and a very serious pressure has been the result. On our voluntary village worker the burden falls more heavily than on others. Her total income for a year was in the bank when it closed, and I need not point out how serious and unpleasant is the position in which she is thereby placed. Another missionary, writing from a distant part of the island, tells us that he is without funds to pay his native assistants, and that he has to be very thankful for rice and curry as his own food.

We are sending a little immediate help, and I am sure we shall not appeal in vain to those to whom God has given means to assist in supplying these dear friends and missionary labourers with funds to meet the demands of the next few months, until the liquidation of the bank enables them to receive some portion of the money now shut up in it.—Yours faithfully, in the Lord's service, (Mrs.) F. M. Ireland Jones.

Baptist Missionary Centenary.

In connection with the Centenary celebrations of the Baptist Missionary Society a festival, organised especially for the benefit of the young people interested in the Society's work, was held at the Crystal Palace on Saturday. A large number of young folks, with a goodly sprinkling of older ones, went down to the Palace during the day, and thoroughly enjoyed participation in the variety of good things included in the programme, which had been arranged for them under the supervision of Mr. C. Holliday, secretary of the Baptist Young Men's Missionary Association. A considerable part of the day was devoted to recreative, musical, and other congenial entertainments for the young people, including athletic sports, a gymnastic display by the members of the Bloomsbury Chapel Gymnastic Society, vocal and instrumental performances by the boys of the Stockwell Orphanage Choir, &c.

In the evening an interesting missionary meeting was held in the large concert hall under the presidency of Sir H. Havelock-Allan, M.P., when stirring addresses were delivered by Revs. J. Lawson Forfeitt and J. J. Fuller (coloured missionary), from the Congo; Rev. A. Sowerby, of China; and Rev. T. R. Edwards, of India. General Havelock-Allan mentioned that of the special fund of £100,000, which it was desired to raise during the Centenary year, the sum of £85,000 had already been collected, showing that there was still large scope for the exercise of the energy and liberality of the Society's friends.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, JULY 31.—LEVITICUS XIII.

Where the word leprosy occurs in these solemn chapters, it becomes us to insert the words, my own sinful nature, and thus this priestly guide-book becomes full of deep and searching meaning. How horrible must sin appear in God's sight, if a leper-settlement is his chosen analogy from human life! And what a unique tribute is offered to the love and holy tenderness of our Lord, that He did not shrink from identifying Himself with an infected race! There were certain physical blemishes which, though they resembled leprosy and might lead to it, were not leprosy; so there are many things in us all which need to be carefully watched, lest they land us in sin. Notice, throughout, the deliberation and care with which the priest was required to do his work, so different to the haste with which we judge one another. But when leprosy had unmistakeably declared itself, there was a severance from the camp, the rent garments, the bare head, the covered lip, the cry, "Unclean!" So is it with sin; it severs us from fellowship with God and his saints, and shuts a man out of the blessed enjoyment of the City of God. Art thou conscious of this spiritual banishment? Then be sure that there is some leprous spot on thee, which must be cleansed. Oh, betake thee to the High Priest, that He may touch thee and say, Be clean. There may be contagion and taint in certain habits or associations of thy life as in the clothes of the Jew, and, if there be, thou must have no parley with them, for they are sure to spread.

MONDAY, AUGUST 1.—LEVITICUS XIV.

All was done for the leper by the priest, who went out from the camp as the High Priest did when He suffered without the gate. The two birds are striking types, first of death and then of resurrection. Let us not forget the mingling of blood with running (i.e. living) water. And as the liberated captive sprang up into the air, scattering the drops of blood and water from its wings, it seems already to tread the ascension path. All this culminated in the eighth day of resurrection, when the blood and oil were placed on the thumb and toe and ear, significant of the atonement by which the life had been purchased, and the unction by which it was to be consecrated. And the washing of water reminds thee, O soul, and me, of the necessity of that Word of God, which promotes the purity of the inner life. Then comes the meat offering, in which the ransomed soul feasts with God on the perfected life and obedience of his Son. Some have not so keen an appreciation of Christ's work for them as others, and they are represented by the poor man, who brought as much as he was able to get; but he must also pass through the same routine, for there is but one way for us all. The leprosy of the house makes us realise how sin has infected the whole universe, which also in its turn can only be cleansed through the shedding of the blood of Christ.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 2.—LEVITICUS XV.

There are uncleannesses in the habits of our life that need jealous care, because they affect, not only ourselves, but others. But nothing is small to those who have to do with the Holy God who notices each stain and speck. If a vessel were uncovered in the tent of an unclean person, its contents were reckoned to be defiled; hence the necessity of constantly using a covering with which to preserve them; and my prayer shall be to Thee, O Saviour of men, that Thou wouldst cover my heart with thine own hand, that all germs of temptation, floating in the spiritual atmosphere round me, may not be able to defile. But, oh! how delightful is that repeated mention of Atonement throughout these chapters, by which sin and uncleanness are put away, and we have to depend not only upon God's clemency, but upon his justice, so that, having washed our robes, we may have a right to the Tree of Life, and to enter by the gates into the city.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3.—LEVITICUS XVI.

The story of the Great Day of Atonement is significant in every verse. The entrance once a year; the changing of the splendid garments of the High Priest's dress for the raiment of linen (type of humility and purity); the mingled offerings, sin and burnt, by which Aaron first made an atonement for himself and for his house, because they were not what Jesus was, pure and harmless and undefiled; and the entrance within the veil with the blood of sprinkling, in utter loneliness—how full of teaching are all these of the work of Jesus, not for Himself, but for us who comprise his house; those wreaths of incense stealing up, fragrant, as the emblem of prayer from coals furnished by the altar which itself had been purged with blood; the sevenfold sprinkling of the blood of the bullock and goat; the confession of the iniquities of Israel on the head of the live goat, and the conveyance of them all into a solitary land; the exchange of the simple linen for the splendid attire as Aaron came forth to bless the people; the destruction of the carcases of the beasts as unclean things without the camp; the consciousness that all sin was then for ever put away—these are pictures on which the soul of the believer gazes with awe and wonder and delight.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 4.—LEVITICUS XVII.

The killing of animals even for food was to be identified with religious worship, and no sacrifice was to be offered except according to the regulation laid down in the priestly code. This was a distinct barrier to all irregular worship. How important it is that all our worship and all the acts of our life should be linked to that true tabernacle which the Lord hath pitched, and not man! Let all our behaviour this day be Godward, Christward, so that from all there may be a sweet savour unto the Lord. How much stress is laid upon the blood; the life of the flesh is there; it is the emblem of life shed violently, and as a propitiation for sin. Throughout Scripture, that blood flows like a crimson streak, as all Government rope is threaded by a scarlet cord, because of the significance with which it is invested, through the offering of the blood of Jesus Christ for men upon the cross. And yet, contradictory as it must have appeared to the Jewish mind, we are actually bidden to eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man, for by the communion of his blood we enter into fellowship with Him in that self-sacrifice unto death which has brought life to the world. Drink ye all of it.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 5.—LEVITICUS XVIII.

Not to them only but to us God says, "Ye shall do, ye shall help." Oh for grace to do, and help, and walk step by step in his judgments and statutes! Here is the fountain of life: if a man believes and does, he possesses the secret of life indeed. We adopt the course of separation from evil at first, because it is commanded by One whose word is indisputable, but after a while we come to see the blessedness of the life to which He calls us, and we would choose it, if we might, for itself. Let us notice the recurrence of the words, "I am Jehovah," which carry in them the authority and the warrant of the Almighty, for that name is always associated with redemption. Because He has redeemed us to Himself to be a people for his own possession, therefore we may not commit any abomination or defile ourselves. Only in so far as God's children avoid those spiritual abominations, of which these acts were representations, can they dwell in the land of blessedness and rest, which floweth with sweetness and light, and abideth always under the smile of God. Oh, wondrous model of a saintly life, how can I ever reach it, except by Thy power, oh Spirit of God, whose conceptions are foreshadowed in these ancient types!

SATURDAY, AUGUST 6.—LEVITICUS XIX.

More than a dozen times the words ring out, "I am the Lord;" and the one command throughout is to separation, doing other than was done by the nations around. This was the reason for holiness; for consideration of the poor and the stranger; for true speech; for thoughtfulness of the infirm and the needy; for accuracy of statement concerning others; for ungrudging love; for the introduction of the fear of God into the sowing of the seed, the treatment of slaves, the tendance of orchards, and the giving praise to the Lord in all handicrafts. This, too, was the reason why they should refuse blood and enchantments and augury, and avoid in the dressing of their hair any resemblance to the heathen, and beware of the tattoo marks of idolatry, and other sins that were rife in neighbouring lands, keeping God's Sabbaths, and re-erecting his sanctuary. Because of this they were forbidden witchcraft, urged to the respect of old age, the care of strangers, strict accuracy in business dealings. And if it meant so much to the Jew, how much more should it mean to us to whom Jehovah is revealed in Jesus; and if any one should suffer loss in obeying injunctions so strict and comprehensive, let him realise that the I am of Christ is sufficient to compensate for all, and that He is able to make all grace abound toward those who forego aught for love of Him, and for fear of His word.

International S. S. Lessons.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 7.

The Apostles' Confidence in God.

Acts iv. 19-31.

Golden Text: Verse 31.

This lesson concludes the story of the appearance of Peter and John before the Council. They have verified the truth of the word of Jesus (Matt. x. 16-20). God has made foolish the wisdom of the wise and turned their strength to weakness. Learn from the example of the Apostles how to meet opposition.

Their Release (19-22). The Council let them go, not because they wanted the will to punish them, but because they dare not (21, 22). But they can command (18), and threaten them (21), so that if the apostles continue to preach Jesus it must be at the risk of punishment. Their answer (19, 20) indicates the right course to take when opposed by the world. Christ had commanded them to witness (i. 8), the Sanhedrim command them not, whom will they obey? Without asking what will be the consequences they give their reply. They not only will speak, but they must speak (20). We are reminded of the words of Luther at Diet of Worms: "Unless I am overpowered and convinced by the testimony of the Scriptures, or by other public, distinct, and obvious arguments and reasons,...I neither can nor will retract anything, well knowing that it is neither safe nor advisable to do ought in opposition to the conscience. Here I stand—I cannot do otherwise. God help me! Amen." The story of the martyrs furnishes numerous illustrations of the same fidelity to God. Shew the same spirit in little as well as great things.

Their Prayer (23-30). A new difficulty met them. They had every reason to expect a continuance of the opposition thus commenced. The threatenings of the Sanhedrim were told to the brethren. They neither grew bitter against their foes, nor had any thought of giving up their testimony. They met the difficulty by giving themselves to prayer. Learn to do likewise. One accord (24); a condition which all social prayer demands. A company of men divided among themselves can have no power with God (Matt. xviii. 19-20). In this exercise "unity is strength." Thou art God, &c. The name of God was more than a mere title; the Apostles mentioned it to strengthen their faith. A proper conception of what God is drives away our fear of man (Isa. li. 7, 8). By the mouth of David (25), note how fully the Apostles believed in the inspiration of the Old Testament. This verse teaches that Psa. ii. was written by David, and that God inspired him to write it. The prophecy was evidence that this opposition of men was no surprise to God. He knew it and foretold it long before; why should it distress or alarm them? It was a very formidable combination (27). Men who were naturally opposed to each other were gathered together to oppose Jesus (Luke xxiii. 12.) The enemies of Jesus know the strength of unity, though Christians appear to forget it. To do whatsoever, &c. (28). Read the verse carefully, and see how truly it was "a vain thing" (25) which the enemies did. When they have combined and done their worst they have only fulfilled what God, "determined to be done." (See Psalm lxxvi. 10, and compare Gen. xlv. 5-8). Be sure that the worst that God's enemies can do will always be overruled to the advancement of the kingdom of God. Hence the saying, "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church." How vain and foolish to attempt anything against God (Isa. liv. 17). Behold their threatening (29). Compare Hezekiah (2 Kings xix. 14) and Jehoshaphat (2 Chron. xx. 11-13). Grant unto Thy servants, &c. (29-30). Their request proved the completeness of their surrender to God. Their first miracle had led them into prison, but they are willing to be used for doing more, though still greater persecution should follow. And in face of this opposition they ask, not the privilige of saving themselves by keeping silence, but for boldness to preach. They live but for the one purpose of witnessing for Jesus.

The Answer (31). Was this another baptism of the Holy Ghost? It does not say so; but it was another filling, and was accompanied by some of the signs which marked the descent of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost (ii. 1-4). They had asked for boldness (29); the answer came in the Holy Ghost. He is to the Church "the Spirit of power," &c. (2 Tim. 1-7). In Him we have everything necessary for our testimony (comp. "good things," Matt vii. 11, with "the Holy Spirit," Luke xi. 13). All "good things" are included in Him.

Letters to the Editor.

"LADY WORKERS IN PARIS."

DEAR SIR,—In your last issue a paragraph headed "Lady Workers in Paris" was inserted in such a way as might cause misunderstanding. The Mission Hall referred to as being opened since the last Exhibition is the Hall Avenue Rapp, which is one of the regular stations of the McAll Mission.

Work has been carried on here by the Mission, in that quarter of Paris, for a number of years, and we have now re-taken the Hall we used during the Exhibition of 1889. Since the beginning of the year, Pastor Keck, one of the regular staff of the Mission, has been working regularly in the Hall, and is now forming a Mission Church, linked with the Reformed Church near by. The work has been for several years past chiefly under the charge of ladies of the Mission, who have earnestly laboured there; and we rejoice in the extension and strengthening of the station, and trust that much blessing may rest upon it, and the little church gathered there.

Lady workers are always needed. Miss Agnes Johnstone, secretary of the Ladies' Committee, 17, Rue de l'Arc de Triomphe, Paris, will always be glad to correspond with any who can give themselves to the work in France.—I am, yours truly,

W. SOLTAU.

ROME'S POWER IN IRELAND.

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of July 7, there is a statement about a Romanist young woman in Ireland who had become truly converted. It is said "she is a sincere Protestant now, and thus thoroughly enjoyed Protestant services and meetings in Dublin. She is a servant in a Protestant family whose home is in the country." The account goes on to say that she will not be able to attend Protestant services in the country on her return home. "She would be mobbed by the priests, boycotted, probably stoned, while her master and mistress would be treated as the Jews treated the leper. A quotation is given from a letter by her mistress as follows:—'When we return to the country she will have to go to mass again, and dare not go to church. The priests of our parish would interfere greatly if it were known, and upset our influence with others.'"

I take the liberty of calling attention to these statements, in the hope of inducing Protestant workers in Ireland to pursue a bolder and more consistent policy. There is none of the martyr spirit in these statements, and we may be sure that the power of the Irish priests will never be broken by such temporising conduct. If the mass and the confessional are, in reality, what we believe them to be, how can a Protestant, under any possible circumstances, encourage a convert to place herself again under such soul-destroying ministrations? What will it avail for Protesants to retain an influence with Romanists, which convinces them of the fatal errors of their system, and yet abandons them to the tender mercies of th priest, and the abominations of a creed they have taught them to abhor? Better, a thousand times, that that converted servant-girl should be mobbed by the priests, boycotted and stoned—yea, even stoned to death, than that she should continue, with crushed soul and polluted conscience, to attend those ministrations which the Holy Spirit has shown her to be utterly false and misleading. Better to die in early youth, a martyr for such a cause, than live in the confusion, contradiction, soul-paralysing atmosphere and spiritual death of a system whose vileness must be conclusively shown by its unloving and un-Christ-like methods in retaining popular adhesion.

If the power of the priests is ever to be broken, it will be by putting on a bold front, and daring them to do their very worst, in the assurance that nothing would more effectually appeal to the good sense and good feeling of the people than the exhibition that would follow. The sooner the battle is carried to the gate, by willingness to endure the worst that they can inflict, the better it will be for the cause of true liberty—of God and humanity. May the servant-girl in question, and the family where she is engaged, have grace given to set an example worthy of the occasion and the cause.—Yours truly,

SAMUEL FOTHERGILL.

A Signal of Distress.

THE good ship "The Strangers' Rest" Ratcliff-highway, is very badly manned at present, and much in need of additional hands. In other words, owing to some workers having permanently left, and many being on their holidays, immediate help is urgently wanted to sustain the meetings. Friends who can play or sing, or speak, or do anything, will be welcome any afternoon or evening. We therefore beckon to our partners in the work of our Master to "come over and help us," and to come quickly.

J. J.

Personalia.

Rev. John Thomas, of the Bible Depôt, Rome, has returned to his native country, Wales, on a three months' furlough, after an absence of three years.

Rev. Thomas Guttery (of Southport) the Primitive Methodist Editor-elect, has been compelled to rest awhile, and has been spending a few days at Buxton in search of health.

Rev. W. S. Swanson leaves for the Toronto meeting of the Presbyterian Alliance about the end of next month, attending in the capacity of chairman of the Foreign Mission Committee of the Eastern Section of the Alliance.

Mr. Joseph Weatherley does not, we regret to hear, get any better, and his dear ones feel that he is bound for the heavenly land. Many who know his past service and testimony will pray that he may be sustained while passing into the shadow.

Rev. James H. Rigg, D.D., who was President of the Wesleyan Conference fourteen years ago, was last week once more elected to this high office in recognition of his noble service and the high esteem entertained for him as theologian, author, and preacher.

Rev. R. Wardlaw Thompson, of the London Missionary Society, is stated to be contemplating a visit to South Africa, where his father laboured for many years. The visit, we understand, is to combine holiday with duty. The work in South Africa needs his presence, and Mr. Thompson's health, after his recent heavy labours, necessitates rest and change.

Mr. Thomas Spurgeon is thus referred to by The New Zealand Baptist:—"Much as we feel our impoverishment as a denomination through his withdrawal, we cannot but regard with gratification the honour done him by this call to serve in his father's place. His work and career in our colony, both as pastor and evangelist, have been most honourable to himself, and testify at once to his ability and devotion."

Rev. Philip Schaff, D.D., the famous Biblical scholar, of New York, has just been stricken, it is stated, with paralysis. It is believed that there is no immediate danger, but it is feared that he will never be able to resume work, one side of his body being completely paralysed. He is seventy-three years of age, was born in Switzerland, but went to America in 1844. He was president of the American Bible Revision Committee.

Rev. Dr. Bullinger has been secretary of the Trinitarian Bible Society for twenty-five years. At a recent meeting of the committee a resolution was adopted congratulating him on the fact, acknowledging his valuable services, and praying that he "may enjoy for many years to come his wonted vigour of mind and body; and that his tongue and pen may long continue to bear testimony on behalf of Protestant and Evangelical truth."

Rev. W. Darlow Sarjeant bade last week a regretful farewell to his warmly-attached friends in the West London Mission. An illuminated address, presented by his 250 class members, thanked God for the blessing received from his labours. Mr. Sarjeant said he had come into the Mission by the hand of God, and it was his hand that was leading him away. In the future he was looking forward to a time of tremendous blessing, far beyond anything he had yet experienced. He asked his friends to be loyal to Christ and the Mission which they all loved.

Obituary.

MISS MARY BUBB, GRAYS, ESSEX.

We regret to hear of the death of Miss Mary Bubb, of Elm House, Grays, Essex, who departed this life on Thursday, July 14. A correspondent writes:—"She had been suffering for eight months, and unable to take part in the various meetings held in her house. Recently confined to her bed, she gradually got worse, and passed quietly away. Miss Bubb has been labouring in Grays with a party of workers for the last ten years, seeking to spread the truth both by preaching and teaching. Not only here, but in many mission efforts abroad, Miss Bubb was interested, including the Mildmay Mission to Jews, the China Inland, Deep Sea, Congo-Balolo, and North Africa Missions. Previous to coming to Grays she worked among navvies for many years, following them from place to place, seeking to instruct them in moral and spiritual things. She was an ardent teetotaller. We buried her remains on Monday, July 18, in the cemetery at Grays, the burial service being conducted by Rev. T. Lander, of East Thurrock. Singing the hymn 'The sands of time are sinking,' we left her to rest until the One she so dearly loved shall come to take her and his saints to be for ever with Him."

HANLEY.—Mr. Henry Varley visited the Potteries on Sunday week in connection with the Hanley Christian Mission, which is carrying on an energetic crusade in the town against the powers of darkness. Mr. Varley preached three times. The hall, which seats three thousand people, was crowded at night, and deep impressions were made. The services were a great stimulus to God's people, and we believe many of the ungodly were led to decide for Christ.

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. William Forbes, since his return from Scotland, has been giving addresses at Stepney, Millwall, Brondesbury, and is now at Margate.

Ireland.—For several weeks past Messrs. Pratt and Crozier, of the Irish Evangelisation Society, have been conducting successful Gospel services in their wooden tent at Mountpottinger, Belfast.

Mr. Ernest Rickman is on a short evangelistic tour, singing and speaking, commencing with Bath and Bristol. He has a few Sundays open for children's meetings and Gospel services. Address care of Messrs. Castle and Lamb, Salisbury-square, E.C.

Mr. James Sprunt has just concluded a Tent Mission at Storrington, Sussex. The meetings were well attended, and people listened with the greatest attention to the Gospel. Signs of blessing have been seen much to the encouragement of the workers.

Southend-on-Sea.—Gospel meetings are being held at this seaside resort in a large tent in Tytler's Avenue, High-street, by Messrs. A. Cook and P. H. Bateman, with Bible-readings on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 3 p.m. Already there are tokens of blessing.

Co. Tyrone.—A series of tent services, held at Tullyhogue, in connection with the Donaghy Church by Rev. S. Hadden, Messrs. Boyle and Flanery, have been attended by almost all classes and creeds in the district. There are twelve stations at which the pastors preach each month.

Ashburton, Devon.—During the severe storm on Tuesday week the Gospel Tent, in which Mr John Elliott was holding his mission, was blown right over, and so much injured that a new roof has had to be ordered ere the tent can be further used. Meanwhile the meetings are being held in a hall.

Chobham.—The Evangelisation Society has been conducting a special mission here with apparently good spiritual results. The missioner is Mr. J. Neech, and his simple and direct appeals have deeply impressed his listeners. The tent has been removed to West End, where a similar mission is being conducted.

Village Missions.—Under the auspices of the Village Aid Committee of the Sunday School Union, Mr. Newton Jones has just completed a visitation, in part, of Oxon, Cambridge, and Bucks. The tour comprised evangelistic meetings in eighteen villages, in which Sunday-school teachers have been stimulated and Sunday-school scholars have been awakened.

Tent Work in Oxon.—Mr. J. C. Rainey has just concluded a fifteen days' mission in the villages of Benson and Ewelme, Oxon. The tent was filled each evening, even through the wet weather of the middle of the month. The Lord was present, and his presence was a manifest power, emptying and filling. Not a few have confessed Him through the meetings. Prayer is asked without ceasing for a coming visit to Totnes, South Devon, where the Tent services commence on Sunday.

Rev. B. Fay Mills is conducting, during the present month, in San Francisco, special missions for which long and prayerful preparation has been made. He has recently had most interesting missions in Portland (Ore), Tacoma, Los Angelos, and Pasadena. As to the closing service at the latter place, it is stated that the effect upon the people was marvellous, and a deep work of grace in the hearts of the hearers was manifest by the interest felt both for themselves and others. Men and women all over the house, who years ago had made a profession of religion, stood up, and with shame confessed their insincerity to the Lord. And many who had been living in open rebellion to God were brought to see their need of a Saviour. These having gladly received the word, accepted Jesus for their Saviour.

THE HUMAN IN MAN is the soil which is only productive by being receptive. Every human action in connection with man's conversion is the result of a Divine action.—Hofmeyr.

INTERLAKEN, SWITZERLAND.—A Convention for the Promotion of Practical Holiness as a Preparation for Service will be held here (God willing) from September 3 to 11, under the presidency of Rev. F. Paynter, M.A., rector of Stoke-next-Guildford, and president of Guildford Convention. The speakers expected are Revs. W. Haslam, Evan Hopkins, W. Houghton, Darlow Sarjeant, Pastor Theo. Monod, and others. Ticket, twelve guineas, to include railway fare and hotel accommodation for a fortnight. Replies to be sent as soon as possible before August 10 to hon. secretary for Interlaken Convention, Hotel Windsor, Victoria-street, London, S.W.

BISHOP THOBURN is in America attending the General Conference, which meets once in four years. The last four years have been most successful ones. No fewer than 442,000 persons have joined the church in different parts of the world, while the total membership is 2,202,614. Bishop Thoburn is still continued as a Missionary Bishop. The work in India has been divided into five conferences—Bengal, Bombay, Madras, North India, and North-West India. Bishop Thoburn addressed the conference and aroused a great deal of enthusiasm. We trust he will obtain all the men and money he needs for the great work going on in North-West India.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The fund for the Nyasa Bishopric Endowment reaches £3300, and the Colonial Bishoprics Fund will grant £1000 to meet £6000 when raised.

The Church of England Scripture Readers' Society seeks help in order to respond to urgent applications from twelve poor London parishes for Scripture readers.

Rev. F. E. Hill, late Principal of Moore Theological College, Sydney, after having been for two years incapacitated, is now able to return to active work.

The housing of the poor has been very seriously under consideration by the Canterbury Diocesan Conference, the most thorough rebuilding being advocated.

We are glad to learn that Bishop Smythies is getting better every day, and he is now able to move about a little. On Sunday next he hopes to preach in Hereford Cathedral.

The committee of the Manchester Diocesan Branch of the Church of England Waifs and Strays Society propose to establish a Certified Industrial Home for Girls in the neighbourhood of Manchester.

The jubilee presentation to the Bishop of Ossory (Dr. Pakenham Walsh) will take place on Sept. 29, when an address will be given to his lordship. There will be a special service in St. Canice's Cathedral, Kilkenny.

The Duke of Connaught laid last week the foundation-stone of a mission church in Portsea, in memory of Rev. T. H. Harvey, for some time curate of the parish, but who went out as a missionary to Mid-China and died during his honeymoon.

The Bishop of St. Asaph has opened a church erected at Brethdir, Llanrhaiadr, on the borders of Montgomeryshire and Denbighshire, in memory of William Morgan, who in 1558, while vicar of Llanrhaiadr, completed the translation of the Bible into the Welsh language.

In view of the forthcoming Church Congress, the Council of the Protestant Churchmen's Alliance have engaged a commodious room at Wampach's Hotel, Folkestone, for the convenience of members of the Alliance and of other Evangelical men who may attend the Congress. A prayer-meeting will be held each morning, and the room will be used for reading and writing during the rest of the day.

An animated discussion on "The Church and the Press" took place at the last Diocesan Conference in Lambeth Palace. Mr. J. Murray said that things which men had reverenced heretofore were now assailed in the rudest manner, and as there was the old belief that what appeared in print was always true, the effect of this change was widespread. Mr. Talbot, M.P., urged Churchmen to use the press in letting the public know what the Church was doing. Canon Holland dwelt upon the great necessity of putting certain matters in a truer light before men of what was called a lower class.

At the twenty-third anniversary of St. Nathaniel's, Windsor, Liverpool, Rev. R. Hobson (vicar) gave a review of the work of the church from its small beginning to its present large proportions. In showing the strength of the church spiritually, numerically, and financially, he dwelt upon the large attendance at the Lord's Table, and said that out of the 418 places of worship in Liverpool theirs was the fifth largest, whilst last year £1381 8s. was raised. This record he considered most encouraging, despite of the poverty of the parish and of the many forces against a truly spiritual and soul-saving work.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. J. Gardiner has been welcomed to the pastorate at Redhill.

After a pastorate which has lasted since 1859, Rev. H. Kendall is resigning at Darlington.

Rev. William Newman Hall, recently assistant to Rev. Arthur Hall, at Hastings, has accepted the pastorate at Sligo.

Rev. H. Archibald, has resigned the pastorate of Longridge Church, after a ministry of seventeen years, on account of ill-health.

A new mission is being erected at Folkestone as a memorial of the twenty-one years' successful labours of Rev. A. J. Palmer.

Rev. Edward Davies, one of the leading Welsh ministers in the United States, is now on a visit to this country, and intends remaining here for six months.

The anniversary services of the Congregational Church, George-street, Ryde, I.W., were held on Sunday, when special sermons were preached by the Rev. M. Lansdown, of Bournemouth.

White Roothing, Essex, is now the centre of a good village work under the care of Pastor Rattee; but there is urgent need of an annual guarantee of say twenty pounds to meet the cost of out-village work in a very dark hamlet.

The Duke of Westminster has presented to the King's Weigh-house Church the freehold of the land on which the chapel stands. The Duke had previously granted a lease of ninety-nine years on a peppercorn rent. This gift was unsolicited and unexpected.

The 242nd anniversary of the church at Burwell, near Cambridge, and the 11th of the settlement of the present pastor, Rev. J. W. Upton, was celebrated on Thursday last. Rev. Dr. Newman Hall preached in the afternoon.

Rev. H. H. Theobald, of Zion Church, Kirkham, has been appointed by the London Missionary Society to conduct evangelistic work in the district of Benares. Mr. Theobald will terminate his ministry at Kirkham the first week in October, and expects to sail for India in that month.

Rev. E. W. Watson, B.A., of Wollerton, Salop, has intimated to his congregation that he has offered himself to, and has been accepted by, the London Missionary Society for service abroad. Mr. Watson, who has just finished his ten years' pastorate at Wollerton, has, we understand, been appointed to the High School, Madras, as a missionary teacher.

The fifth 'Memorial Sunday' in commemoration of the life and work of the late Rev. G. M. Murphy was observed at Borough-road Chapel, S.E., on Sunday week, July 17, being the date of Mr. Murphy's sudden death in 1887. A memorial sermon was preached in the morning by the pastor, Rev. W. Mottram, and an assembly of workers and friends took place in the afternoon, when reminiscences of the late pastor were related.

BAPTIST.

Rev. J. C. Taylor has commenced his ministry at Bursiem with tokens of success.

Rev. J. Burnham is preparing for his work among Kentish hop-pickers in September.

Rev. Robert Wood, late of Ramsgate, has entered on his new charge at Albemarle, Scarborough.

Rev. T. Hancocks has removed from Chatham to 2, Clarendon-gardens, Ramsgate.

Rev. J. Thomas (of Huddersfield) has accepted the reiterated call to Myrtle-street, Liverpool, where the late Rev. Hugh Stowell Brown laboured.

Rev. W. Gliddon, formerly of South Molton, has entered on the pastorate of the associated churches at Cheddar.

A Deaconess' Missionary Training Institute, under the charge of Miss M. A. Keen, has just been opened at Chester.

The friends in the Isle of Man are endeavouring to erect a chapel in Douglas, there being at present no Baptist chapel in the island.

Interesting meetings have just been held at East Finchley to bid farewell to Rev. E. Howard, who has carried on a most successful work in the chapel.

Anniversary services in connection with Ebenezer Chapel, Chester, were held last week, in which Mr. R. Cory, J.P., Revs. T. Durant, and W. S. Jones took part.

The chapel in Langley, Essex, built in 1828, being unsafe and uncomfortable, has been removed, and a new one is in course of erection. The cost of the new building will be about £450.

METHODIST.

The Northern Light is again urging the question of Methodist reunion.

The memorial-stones of a new chapel in Church Fenton have just been laid by Mr. and Mrs. Walkington.

Revs. D. Hill and W. Foster are issuing a series of large maps of Wesleyan Foreign Missionary districts, in order to awaken fresh interest in missions.

Last week, Rev. Edward Davidson, Connexional Evangelist, revisited Roath-road Chapel, Cardiff, at which place he conducted a most successful mission in January last.

A most successful missionary meeting has been held at Woodhouse Grove School, which has trained many boys for the foreign field. One such, Rev. J. C. W. Gostick, was present and spoke at the meeting.

The Wesleyan ministers of Melbourne and its suburbs are in the habit of holding a united prayer-meeting, whereat reports of the services held on the previous day are presented.

The Medical Director of the West London Mission is in urgent need of Nursing Sisters. Three are needed at once for district work, and two more will be wanted in September for hospital nursing.

For more than twenty years Wesleyan Methodist services have been regularly held in a hayloft over a stable at Saundersfoot (Tenby Circuit). But through all difficulties the faithful band of Village Methodists have held together, and now, as a result of their fidelity, patience, and work, a chapel has been erected, costing £300, and capable of seating one hundred and twenty persons.

The figures presented to the United Methodist Free Church Assembly last week showed steady increase, said to be largely due to special attention to the young, the conducting of missions in their circuits, and the suppression of disputes in their churches. It was recommended that special attention should be paid to the young, larger and more aggressive work, the formation of Christian Endeavour Societies, and especially to house-to-house visitation.

The Vicar of Bradford (Rev. Dr. Bardsley) wrote last week to the President of the Wesleyan Conference:—"It is to me a source of real pleasure, and I have been requested by the great body of the clergy of Bradford to convey a cordial welcome to the members of the Wesleyan Conference on the occasion of its visit to our town. They gladly avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded of recording their sense of the zeal, devotion, and self-denying efforts which have ever characterised the Wesleyan communion in seeking to extend the blessings of the Gospel of Christ both at home and abroad; and they also assure the Conference of their earnest prayer that God's blessing may rest upon its deliberations to the furtherance of his glory and the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom. Joining very heartily in these expressions of brotherly welcome and with all good wishes."

PRESBYTERIAN.

Dr. Monro Gibson's assistant (Rev. W. D. Wright) has been called to Kingston-on-Thames.

The Young Men's Societies of London visited Winchester on Saturday week, Dean Kitchin showing them through the cathedral.

Rev. A. D. Gray has entered on his new pastorate at Penrith; Revs. R. Brown and J. Christie taking part in the services.

The Presbyterian Jewish Mission in Whitechapel has now attained its majority. There is need felt for a considerable increase in funds.

Rev. D. Meurig Jones, of Llanbadarn-Fawt, has received a unanimous invitation to the pastorate of the Calvinistic Methodist Church at Blaenavon, and has accepted it.

The friends at Regent's-square have again met with disappointment, Rev. James Denney, of Broughty Ferry, having declined to be mentioned for the pastorate.

The Vale of Clwyd Presbytery has confirmed the appointment of Mr. I. Charles Jones, of Bala Theological College, to be minister of Groes Chapel, Denbigh.

There are now, it is said, 10,743 communicants in Anglesey, as compared with 9,819 in 1881; while the adherents number 20,605, as compared with 19,638 ten years ago.

The Christian Giving Committee recommends that the last week of November should be observed as a "week of self-denial" throughout the Church for the benefit of Foreign Missions.

The movement which has of late been set on foot by Rev. J. Pugh for the purpose of rescuing the thousands of perishing poor who dwell in needy districts of Cardiff, was brought to a successful issue on Sunday by the opening of a new hall in connection with the East Moors centre.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

An "Old Scholars' Meeting" has just been held at Brumana, on the "goodly mountain" of Lebanon. Blessing manifestly rests on the devoted workers and their work for Christ. The old boy visitors dined at the Boys' Home and the girls at the Girls' Home, while at supper all, to the number of fifty-seven, sat down at the Girls' Home.

A noble and eminently useful life closed with the death of Barnabas C. Hobbs, of Bloomingdale, Indiana, on the 22nd ult. Both in the Church and in the State his integrity and his scholarship were fully recognised, and as an able and experienced minister of the Gospel his services were in large request. He was known and valued in England as well as in his own land.

Canada Yearly Meeting was convened on the 23rd ult. in the beautiful and picturesque town of Bloomfield, in Ontario. The meeting was larger than usual, and a tent, capable of holding one thousand persons for overflow meetings, was provided. The spread of the Gospel, and the establishment of Pickering College, lie near the heart of this yearly meeting. Joseph Cosand and wife, of Tokyo, Japan, were present, and represented foreign mission work.

Both a "Bible School Conference" and a "Summer School" have been held in Iowa, and The Christian Worker gives lucid accounts of these earnest gatherings, the one object of which was the "spread of the Redeemer's Kingdom" on earth. Able men and women read papers and spoke on various phases of the question, "How to be wise to win souls and carry the Gospel to the unsaved, as well as to increase and deepen the Lord's work in his people's hearts and lives."

The Friend of last week gives a most interesting description of "Friends' Work in Bombay," by Helen S Dyer—Gospel, purity, and anti-opium services, and efforts for the better observance of the Sabbath, both independently and in conjunction with others, are telling for good on the varied and mixed population of the great city. True Christians are indeed as "a city set on a hill," and reflect the light amid surrounding heathen and Mohammedan gloom.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

A new Soldiers' Home is in process of erection at the Curragh Camp.

A new Methodist day-school has just been opened at Richhill, co. Armagh, and another is about to be opened at Tralee, under hopeful circumstances.

The Jubilee Fund of Rev. Dr. Johnston, of Townsend-street Presbyterian Church, Belfast, has now reached the sum of £2700.

Writing on "The Methodist Outlook" for the current year, in its last issue, The Christian Advocate says that the only reason why all ministers, local preachers, and class leaders do not witness conversions is that they do not expect such results.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At 50, Gordon-square, on 18th inst., Miss Isabella Thorburn Turnbull, after a long and painful illness, daughter of Mr. R. T. Turnbull, of Regent's-square.—At 39, Royal-terrace, Edinburgh, on 17th inst., Mrs. Robertson, aged 81, widow of Rev. W. Robertson, D.D., late of New Grey Friars Church.—At Stoke Newington, on 15th inst., Rev. Caleb Springthorpe, in his 69th year, for some years pastor in Worksworth and Shottley.—At Bungay, on 17th inst., Mr. R. M. Marsden Sunday-school superintendent and earnest Christian worker.—At Kendal, on Sunday week, Mr. Robert Mason, suddenly, while preaching in the open-air.—At Rockhampton, Queensland, on May 25, Rev. Hubert Hartley, a devoted minister and worker among the Kanakas.—At Hull, Mr. A. Brown, a devoted and faithful Christian worker, specially in connection with the Kingston Chapel.—At Bristol, on the 14th inst., Miss L. E. Adams, aged 21, an earnest young worker.—At Louth, Lincoln, on 15th inst., Miss E. Caley, aged 20.—At Acock's-green, Birmingham, Mrs. Hornby, aged 80, who had long served faithfully and well.—At Kellington, Pontefract, on 16th inst., Rev. J. Mann, 85 years of age, spoken of as "a model village parson and greatly beloved by all who knew him."—At Leukabad, Switzerland, on 17th inst., Mr. J. S. Bourne, of Tunbridge Wells, a helper of many.—At Bourton-on-Dunsmore, suddenly, Rev. W. J. A. Large.—At Castle Grisley, Derbyshire, Rev. J. Kilbee-Stuart.—At Danbury Palace, Chelmsford, on 25th inst., Rev. T. L. Claughton, D.D., late Bishop of St. Albans, who celebrated, a few months ago, his golden wedding.

Appeals.

Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen.—A sale of work in aid of this Society will be held in Yarmouth and Lowestoft on August 11 and following days. The bazaar will be of a novel character, and will be held on board the Mission hospital ship Queen Victoria. Contributions of work will be most thankfully received by the Secretary, Bridge House, 181, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

Christian Literature for Canada.—Mrs. Taylor, wife of the Chief Justice of Winnipeg, and others have been sending Gospel and Christian papers, &c., to settlers in distant parts who seldom have anything to read. Any willing to help should send parcels of literature (prepaid) for adults and children, to Mrs. Ward, 78, Mitford-gardens, West Kensington-park, London, W. Any little help towards carriage and postage would also be thankfully received.

Lavender for our Soldiers.—Will friends help again this year by sending us lavender to fill muslin bags to send to sick soldiers and others in hospitals at home and abroad? Last year we were able to send away a great number of lavender bags, each with a text card attached, and thus spread the Word of God amongst the sick. We are encouraged to continue the work, as many instances have come to our notice where definite good has been done.—Boxes or parcels should be addressed to Mrs. Stanley Puckle, The Hollonds, Langton, Tunbridge Wells.

East Grinstead.—Some time ago, on the authority of a High Church organ, we referred to the Anglican Sisterhood at East Grinstead as having gone over to the Church of Rome. We are assured that the statement is untrue, and that none of the sisters have any desire to take the step attributed to them.

"THEY PRESENTED UNTO HIM GIFTS."

MATTHEW ii, 11.

To the Readers of THE CHRISTIAN.

DEAR FRIENDS,— 25th July, 1892.

A friend with whom I was recently conversing exclaimed: "Why don't you acquaint your subscribers in a special note with what you have just told me? Such intelligence is lost sight of when hidden away in the pages of your monthly magazine."

The advice seemed good, and after much pondering I resolved to act upon it, although I confess it was with extreme reluctance that I came to this conclusion.

No one on earth can know the alternating experiences of encouragement and trial which so often fall to my peculiar lot. On the one hand, I have the constant assurance that God has called me to a mission which for downright hopefulness has perhaps no equal in the world: a mission in which I am privileged to witness almost daily examples of child-rescue from scenes and conditions of ruinous evil, followed in many cases by change of heart and life, such as surely stamp the whole work as Divine.

On the other hand, the burdens of the enterprise are often so crushingly heavy, and the hindrances to progress are so numerous and so grave, that nothing but the abiding sense of God's presence with me in and under it all could suffice to sustain the heart or supply needful courage to go forward. Will it surprise any one therefore who reads these lines to hear that at times I almost feel as though I must abandon the work I love so well, and to which so large a part of my life has been devoted? All such suggestions, I need hardly say, I look upon as cowardly temptations and incitements to unbelief, and turn away with gladness to that riper experience of more than six-and-twenty years' happy service for the King, which assures me of God's faithfulness to sustain all who in simple obedience to his word press forward in his work.

Let me, however, put before you very briefly, as stated to the friend whose suggestion I quoted in the opening lines of this letter, the facts which constitute my present difficulties. I have to-day nearly 4400 children dependent upon me, under God, for all their earthly wants. These children are for the most part orphans or utterly destitute, who must have continued, but for our Institutions, still plunged in misery and wretchedness. To supply this large family with food alone, £150 per day is required. From 1st January to 30th April the receipts kept well up to the average of the corresponding four months in former years; but in the first week in May a shrinkage began, without any apparent reason, and it has continued up to the present, so that by the end of June we were nearly £3000 behind what the figures of 1891 would have led us to expect! Then again, although a great deal of interest was excited and sympathy displayed at our Annual Meeting on 22nd June last, the total amount collected was actually £2300 less than at our Anniversary in 1891. So that I find myself now at the beginning of the Holiday Season with a Bank Account heavily overdrawn, and really without money in hand sufficient to meet daily necessities.

I do not for one moment imagine that this distressing state of things is other than temporary, or doubt that as soon as its gravity is realised there are hundreds of kind hearts among the friends of Christ's work in my hands who will gladly come to the rescue of these Little Ones so dear to our Lord. None the less, but rather all the more, the duty of laying the facts of the case before my helpers is an urgent one.

I had, indeed, hoped, if the state of our funds permitted, to send out another hundred trained Boys to Canada in August, and one hundred Girls in September; yet the needful cost (averaging but £9 per child) is in the aggregate so heavy that the expenditure seems hardly possible under the circumstances.

Yet the opening which Emigration provides for such children is of incalculable importance, and one that ought not by any means to be neglected!

Please remember, also, that even should these 200 children go abroad, I shall, after making due allowance for the normal addition to our numbers during the next few weeks, still have 4300 other boys and girls under my care. Among these, many are, as you know, little patients confined in our two Hospitals grievously ill. Some of them are deaf and dumb; some are, alas, blind or hopelessly crippled; and all alike demand special care and treatment. To meet these various requirements of my children, I have no human resources upon which to rely, save the Christian sympathy and goodwill of God's people everywhere.

I can only tell out as I have done before in plain and simple words the story of our pressing needs to those who are interested in such endeavours to save the Children, while at the same time I, and those upon whom the heaviest burdens fall, unceasingly cry for relief to Him who is the Hearer and Answerer of prayer.

It is possible that this letter may fall into the hands of some donors who have already this year once or even twice most nobly and generously helped my bairns. Need I say that I do not ask such kind friends to help me now, unless indeed they feel irresistibly impelled to do so. But may I not suggest that as on my list of helpers there are many thousands who have not sent gifts to the Homes during the present year or for a considerably longer time, this would be an excellent opportunity of availing themselves of a great privilege now within their reach; that of straightway devoting some portion of their substance, however small, to our Lord's service among His Little Ones. Let no one, however poor, who reads these words suppose that only the gifts of the wealthy are precious in God's sight! I am,

Ever your faithful Fellow-worker
Among the Children of the Streets,
THOS. J. BARNARDO.

P.S.—The two following generous offers have been made to me. At our Annual Meeting a friend and frequent helper, J. C., promised £250 in aid of our funds, if Nine others would each give a like amount. No one responded. I wrote to J. C. and put the facts before him. He replied at once by sending me his cheque for £100, and he very kindly added: "If you will get five others to give £250 each, I will stand by my original promise, and will send you my cheque for the balance."—"Beta," another old friend, has given us £25, and promised a further £25 if Thirty-nine others could be found to follow his example; and he has also promised us £10 if he can thereby stimulate Ninety-nine other helpers to give an equal amount. In response, six gifts of £25, and sixteen gifts of £10, have been received. Who will supply the lack, so as to enable us to claim "Beta's" generosity? May not these suggestive offers point the way to some stewards of wealth who are seeking God's guidance?

THE GOSSAGE CASE IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

(COMMUNICATED.)

ALL readers of THE CHRISTIAN who have been interested in Dr. Barnardo's work for years past, and who have followed the progress of the litigation concerning the boy HARRY GOSSAGE, will doubtless feel not a little perplexed by the decision of the House of Lords, which was announced on Monday last after a delay which seemed interminable. The following is a brief outline of the facts of the case:—The boy Harry Gossage, who had been deserted by an organ-grinder in whose custody he had travelled all over the country, was found late at night in Folkestone in September, 1888, and he was thereupon taken by a policeman to the workhouse for the night. The lad declared that he had been sold by his mother to the organ-grinder after she had previously deserted him on more than one occasion. This organ-grinder had ill-used and half-starved him, and as stated he eventually abandoned him in the streets of Folkestone late at night. A clergyman of that town hearing of the case, wrote for aid to Dr. Barnardo, who at once admitted him. The mother was eventually traced to a common lodging-house in Leamington, and was discovered to be a person of profligate life and drunken habits.

Dr. Barnardo ultimately sent the boy to Canada in the custody of a Mr. William Norton, a Christian gentleman of good position, who desired to adopt him. The mother, incited by some Roman Catholics, endeavoured to recover possession of the boy on the ground that she was a Roman Catholic and wished him to be brought up in her own religion.

It will suffice here to say that in resisting this attempt, Dr. Barnardo discovered that the deceased father of the boy had been a Wesleyan Methodist, and that he (the boy) had been baptized in the parish church at Leamington, and had been brought up as a Protestant until the date of the father's death, but that after the father's decease, the mother, acting under the influence of some Roman Catholics in the town, who had given her temporary relief, had the boy re-baptized as a Roman Catholic.

The first stage of the litigation consisted in an application to the Court for the issue of a writ of habeas corpus to compel Dr. Barnardo to produce the boy. That application was made before Mr. Justice Mathew in Chambers. On this occasion counsel for the mother objected that he must have an opportunity to cross-examine Dr. Barnardo. The latter at once offered himself, and was strictly cross-examined as to all the principal facts laid down in the affidavits, with the result that Mr. Justice Mathew refused to allow the writ to go. Apparently, Dr. Barnardo had thus gained the day. Four months later, in consequence of a decision in another case, where it was held that if a child had been illegally parted with, a writ might still issue, even through the person to whom it was directed no longer had the child in custody, a fresh application was made to the Court of Queen's Bench to allow a writ to go; and this time with success. Against this decision Dr. Barnardo appealed, and conducted his own case in the Court of Appeal. At great length all the facts of the case were there set forth. The evidence occupied several days in hearing. Dr. Barnardo, however, was not again cross-examined.

The Judges of the Court of Appeal, in the end, confirmed the judgment of the Court below on the points of law that were raised, at the same time, however, reversing the censures which had been made by the Judges in the Queen's Bench, and their judgment appears to express sympathy with Dr. Barnardo on the facts or merits of the case, but affirmed that he was wrong in law; in short, according to the learned Lords, Dr. Barnardo had committed an unlawful act and must abide by the consequences. Against this decision, which might have been called a moral victory, Dr. Barnardo again appealed to the House of Lords on the points of law; and here, after long delays, the decision was announced by five of the Law Lords on Monday.

The result of the appeal is altogether highly perplexing. Although the reference to the House of Lords was primarily on a question of law, with a view to reverse the judgment of the Court below thereon, and although the Law Lords have in effect done so, yet they have allowed the writ to go! They have said, in effect, that the judgment in the Court below on the subject of law could not be upheld, and that therefore Dr. Barnardo was right in law. Upon the merits of the case itself they do not touch. But in answer to the application of counsel on the opposite side that further opportunity should be given them to cross-examine the appellant, and that this can be most conveniently done on the return of the writ, they have absolutely ordered the writ to go!

In other words, the Court of Appeal laid down the law upon the grounds of which only they non-suited Dr. Barnardo, although their sympathy was with him on the facts. The decision of the House of Lords reverses that decision as to the law, and declares that the view adopted by the Court of Appeal is a wrong one and bad in law. It does not express any further opinion upon the facts; but because counsel on the opposite side appear at an earlier stage of the proceedings to have neglected their duty (i.e., of further cross-examining Dr. Barnardo), the highest Court of the realm places the whole burden of costs upon Dr. Barnardo, and now permits the writ to issue.

What the upshot will be nobody can tell. A return to this writ has to be made in three months, and the result cannot be anticipated. It seems, however, on the face of it, to be a great hardship that, while not holding Dr. Barnardo to be absolutely wrong, either on the law or on the facts, he should for the present lose his case, be mulcted in heavy costs, and be put to further trouble for many months to come.

The litigation has, however, not been altogether barren; for the Act entitled "The Custody of Children's Act" was called into existence through this very case; and now it is well to be assured that no other case such as that of Harry Gossage can ever again occur.

Meanwhile, the sympathy of Christian people everywhere ought to be extended to Dr. Barnardo, who has been fighting a brave battle for his children against tremendous odds.

It ought also to be remembered that the whole burden of costs incurred will fall upon Dr. Barnardo personally, as the latter has again and again assured the public that not one shilling of the funds entrusted to him for the support of the children in the Homes is allowed to be devoted to the purposes of litigation.

Temperance Notes.

A Temperance Hotel has been opened at Cromer.

In Milwaukee fourteen hundred licensed saloons are kept open on Sunday.

Four of the sixteen public-houses at Chester-le-Street are entirely closed on Sundays.

There were 363,935 public school teachers and 204,913 liquor dealers in the United States last year.

A "Total Abstinence Society" in connection with the English Presbyterian Church has been formed at a meeting held in the Presbyterian College, London.

It is very gratifying to find from the annual report of Seal (Kent) Bible Christian Sunday-school that the whole of the teachers, eleven in number, are total abstainers.

What a saving Sunday closing will be to the working man! It is computed that no less a sum than £15,000,000 is annually spent on Sunday drinking alone in the United Kingdom.

Miss Gurney, who has been appointed superintendent of police work for the W.W.C.T.U., reports that the Police Temperance Union has now six thousand members enrolled.

The World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union has opened handsome rooms at Albany-building, 47, Victoria-street, Westminster, which will be henceforth the headquarters of the Union.

"With regard to the pernicious custom of sending small children to pawnbrokers and public-houses," George Augustus Sala says, "to do so is to put them on the high road to perdition."

The War Cry, commenting on the Social work of the Salvation Army, and the necessity for it, says: "Drink is the principal curse: the ruin of young men and maidens, old men and women; bringing them to certain and sure destruction."

The Hudson Bay Fur Company has issued a circular instructing its agents to take more stringent measures for the suppression of the illicit traffic by which smugglers continue to supply the Indians with intoxicating beverages.

Juvenile Temperance work is growing on the Continent of Europe. Earnest workers are to be found in Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Holland, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland. In Gibraltar and Malta there are flourishing Bands of Hope.

During the past year the United Kingdom Band of Hope Union disposed of a million and a-quarter of its own Temperance publications, in addition to many thousands of books and magazines issued by other publishers, and sold in the Book-room of the Union.

The Leicester Temperance Society has lost an active worker by the death of Mr. W. L. Faire, who was at one time missionary and agent of the society. In six years he secured 2500 pledges, 666 new subscribers, and was the means of reclaiming some of the most abandoned and degraded drunkards.

The plan of teaching the effects of alcohol to the children in the public schools is already being adopted in other countries than our own. An association of teachers has been formed at Stockholm, called a Temperance Union of Northern Teachers, and a similar one has been formed in Finland for the purpose of introducing Temperance teaching into the public schools.

The National Temperance Café, Restaurant, and Concert Association aims at combining temperance for all classes with recreation and general amusement, and proposes to establish places of amusement from which intoxicating liquors shall be rigidly excluded in several of the thickly-populated districts of London so soon as the necessary permits can be obtained.

According to the Truck Amendment Act, 1887, which it is most desirable that farmers and their labourers should clearly understand, and especially at the present season, a farmer may pay his men partly in money and partly in food, cottage or anything else they may agree upon, except intoxicating drink; the Act declares that he shall not supply them with intoxicating liquors, in addition to money wages, as a remuneration for services.

It appears that in the new Parliament there is a practical equality of votes for and against the direct popular veto—certainly within a couple of votes or so either way—judged by the actual free election pledges of the Members returned. In this calculation, however, no single Member is included as favourable to the veto unless his pledge to that effect is clear and unmistakeable. On the other hand, there are included among those not so pledged some who have not been able to ignore the Temperance question, and have accepted local option in one form or other.

The Kew Bulletin gives some interesting particulars of Paraguayan tea, which is extensively used by the populations of South America. Strictly speaking, it is not a tea plant, but a species of the Paraguayan ilex; but the active principle in its leaves is caffein, identical with that which is found in tea and coffee. Though closely allied with coffee, it is stated to be slower in yielding up its principles to boiling water. In preparing it the leaves are scorched and dried while still attached to the branches brought in by the collectors. They are then beaten, separated, coarsely ground by rude mills, and packed in skins and leather bags. The leaves are infused in small teapots, and the tea is sucked with a bombilla or tube with wire network or perforations at the bottom.

NEW PACKETS OF TRACTS.

19th MILLION.

GOSPEL LEAVES. By Cheyne Brady.
Packet 6. 100 Illustrated 2pp. Tracts. 6d. per Packet.
"Mr. Brady is quite to our heart. He is direct as a dart, clear as a sunbeam, and brief as an angel's visit. Earnestness throbs in every line, and withal a power of keen thrusting too seldom possessed. He knows the sins and sorrows of the human heart, and the Saviour who can work their cure—and, in addition, can plainly point the burdened spirit to the peace-giving Christ."

For Indigestion,

If you suffer from any form of Indigestion, or its resultant evil, Nervousness, Guy's Tonic will heal the frailty of your stomach, and make every meal an hour of pleasure. By its aid you can enjoy the blessings which follow good digestion.

Every chemist has it—good reports come to us from all sides, sent voluntarily by grateful friends who have proved its value.

When will you begin to let it help you?

Take Guy's Tonic.

An Analyst's Verdict.

1, Portman Mansions, London, W.

"Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in spontaneously testifying to the efficacy of Guy's Tonic and Fruit Pills. I am a martyr to indigestion, and have found nothing so beneficial as your remedies. The Tonic was analysed by a friend of mine—a member of the medical profession in Dublin—and appears (from a letter I received a short time since) to be not a quack's mixture, but made from quite an ideal prescription.—I am, yours faithfully, F. GARDNER."

"To the Manager, Guy's Tonic Company."

Guy Tonic can be obtained everywhere at 2s. 9d. per bottle, or it will be forwarded post free at this price by Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate Circus, London, E.C.

FORTIETH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

LEFT LUNG DISEASED.—CASE OF A YOUNG MAN at NEWCASTLE, Staff.

The case of J. O., a miner, was brought before me by his brother, two years ago. He had lost two brothers in Consumption. For six months he had been ailing. Much cough, severe pains, expectoration difficult, and he had spat a little blood. There was loss of strength and general wasting.

This patient took my medicine and corresponded with me for nearly two years (excepting a few months' interval in 1891), during which time from thirty to forty letters were sent him, and medicine at reduced rate. From time to time reports came:—"I think I am improving." "Pleased to say I am a little better." "I have gained in weight." "Doctor says my lungs are in a much better state."

"The patient caught a severe cold last summer in going to work, and was thrown back a little. Pains came on again; expectoration and a little blood. There had been a very unwise discontinuance of medicine too soon (as above named). The treatment was, after this, properly continued. And again the reports came:—"I am better again, but cannot do without your medicine. Sorry I could not keep on before." "I will not leave it off again till thoroughly well."

In February last his brother, writing me on behalf of another patient says: "Your medicine has saved my brother James's life. Seeing its value I cannot but recommend it to all."

On March 13th, the brother again writes: "I feel I must write a testimonial for you to use if you will. Please only publish my name by letter, for certain reasons. I will answer any enquiries."

"My brother's lungs were in a very bad state when I first applied to you. He was examined by most of the doctors in our district, who all declared his left lung to be much diseased; but all their remedies proved in vain. A few months ago he was pronounced quite well, and was received into one of the best benefit societies in the country. Examined only a fortnight ago by one of our first doctors, he has been reported 'Entirely free from lung disease.' I am anxious to make known your treatment to every sufferer in the land."

NOTE.—CONSULTATIONS FREE at Coombe Lodge, Peckham, on TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings only. No charge except the usual charge for three or six weeks' supply of medicine. All Patients should read the Book first.

THE LIFE AND LIGHT OF MEN.

5th Thousand.

EXPOSITIONS OF JOHN I.—XII. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

Review from THE CONGREGATIONAL MAGAZINE:—

"These Expositions are delightful reading. To be at one with John is our earnest ambition, and we gratefully welcome any helps of mind and heart in this direction. Mr. Meyer in this work affords both light to the mind and tonic to the heart. Whoever would understand the logical force and practical bearings of John's Gospel would do well to procure this series of studies."

Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

A Review from THE BRITISH WEEKLY:—

"The popularity of Mr. Meyer's Expositions is a good sign of the times. This, on the First Epistle of Peter, is one of the best, and is full of tender Christian wisdom. There are many unobtrusive signs of thought and culture throughout; but the chief charm of the book is its earnest simplicity."

Review from THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CHRONICLE:—

"Beautifully illustrated, and so tastefully bound as to make a most acceptable gift-book. But the contents are such that no Christian can rise from their perusal without feeling consciously strengthened of God, and inspired with fresh for a godly life. Sunday-school teachers may learn from it how to draw out the spiritual lessons of the sacred Word."

Review from THE SWORD AND TROWEL:—

"Exceedingly good. Not only spiritual, as everything from our brother Mr. MEYER would be, but also thoughtful, fresh, suggestive, and thoroughly practical. Oh, that hundreds of our younger men gave signs of such real holiness, such true devotion, and such clear knowledge of the Gospel as we see in the author!"

A Review from THE PREACHERS' MAGAZINE:—

"The great charm of this very beautiful monograph is its clear setting forth of the way in which the life of Joseph mirrors, to use the author's own phrase, the life of Jesus. This idea is not at all unduly pressed, but it runs through the volume, and adds immensely to its homiletic and devotional value."

A Review from CHRISTIAN PROGRESS:—

"Full of devout reflection, stimulating thought and most helpful instruction—all tending to lead up to a holier and more consecrated walk with God. This, in every sense of the word, is a helpful book; and we must cordially recommend it to all who desire to go forward and higher in their Christian life."

THE HOP PICKERS' MISSION.
ALTON DISTRICT.

The object of this Mission is to erect tents for the use of the poor Pickers during their stay in this neighbourhood. Last year six tents were erected in the parishes of Selborne, Binsted, Holybourne, Worldham, and Bentley. Each tent was fitted up with seats, lamps, a platform, pictures, Scripture texts, and temperance wall-papers. Tea was provided every night, magic-lantern exhibitions, and Gospel addresses, which were listened to with marked attention. The moral and spiritual good done to these people is evident. The testimony of the magistrates and their clerk is that since the tents have been worked, crime has decreased 75 per cent. We have seen men wholly given up to vice, reformed and now filling good situations. More tents are required for this year.—S. CHINN, Village Pastor, Superintendent. c2459

SALVATION ARMY BANK

FOR SALE, by executors, in execution of Trust, the PROMISSORY NOTE of William Booth for £300, dated 6th June, 1890, and due 9th June, 1895, bearing interest in the meantime at four per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly.

This promissory note ranks as regards security with the deposit notes of the SALVATION ARMY BANK, but bears a higher rate of Interest than money lent to that Institution for a like term, and thus affords, at face value, an exceptionally favourable investment for persons desiring to lend money on the security in question.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of the late Rev. John Thomas, D.D., of Liverpool.

Owing to the large space given in this issue to our report of the Keswick Convention, many interesting and important communications have been held over.

Our readers will be interested to know that besides frequent letters from America, Mr. Meyer will continue the Notes on Bible Readings. As these have not hitherto been signed, our friends may not be aware that they are from his pen.

During Mr. Moody's last visit to England a gentleman greatly assisted the work by giving nearly 40,000 copies of Mr. Moody's book entitled, "The Way to God" for inquirers and converts. Several thousands have been similarly given during Mr. Moody's present visit. Perhaps some friends may desire to render aid by contributing to the fund for this purpose. The books are supplied on terms merely to cover expenses. As Mr. Moody's stay in any town is very brief, and as inquirers cannot be adequately dealt with by word of mouth, it is the more important that their interest should be maintained and that instruction should be given to them in this more permanent form.

Our attention has been called to the possibility that certain statements in the story entitled "Rich and Poor," given in our issue for July 21, may be understood as reflecting on the devotion of nurses in our hospitals; and a Sister writes protesting that offensive and repulsive cases, such as the one referred to, receive the most assiduous nursing, and that frequently at the cost of the health of the nurses themselves, adding:—

> But at whatever cost to ourselves we never permit our patients to remain in discomfort; nor should we be allowed to do such a thing if we so entirely forgot our profession and womanliness as to attempt it.

While we do not think the writer had any such meaning, we regret that statements liable to be misunderstood and to cause pain should through inadvertence have found their way into a narrative which our correspondents agree with us in regarding as containing much that is good. This applies equally to medical men, whose self-denying service we are sure the writer had no intention of depreciating.

It is frequently remarked that wickedness has in our days developed forms and refinements unknown in past generations. At the same time it is true that spiritual Christianity has widened and deepened side by side with the urgency of testimony for God. In a word, our days are characterized by intensity both of good and evil. The truth of God has been prevailing over human ignorance and sin, but Satan, knowing that he hath but a short time, has aroused opposition and advanced forces which have not during recent centuries been known in history.

The Evil One has put new vigour into old systems of error, and many things are brought under the attention of sinners to prevent them from being concerned for their eternal salvation. The Holy Spirit has, in response, shown his power, and if, on the one hand, there is departure from the truth, on the other, there is an increasingly warm love for the old paths of faith, hope, and love. These things are the Divine opposites of modern materialistic science, with its doubt and pride, selfishness and self-satisfaction. The periodical conventions of Christian people are a manifestation of the deepened spiritual power which has made itself felt in influential circles throughout the land. So, if sin is abounding, we rejoice to believe that grace is abounding with still more marvellous results.

Because the brazen serpent had ceased to be a means of grace and had become an object of idolatry, Hezekiah, with spiritual insight and decision, broke it up and called it what it really was—a piece of brass. On the other hand, there are many relics of paganism, names, customs, and things, out of which the original meaning has departed. The best thing is to let them alone. To denounce them or to expound their significance, would only revive their pollution. "Let sleeping dogs lie." Let the memory of the wicked rot—whether they be persons or things.

"Whatsoever things are pure...think on these." We do not need minutely to describe evil in order to warn against it. Counsel may be given as to secret sins, the hidden things of darkness may be reproved, without entering into detail. Assuredly these things should not be analytically dwelt upon in mixed audiences of men and women. The things of which it is a shame to speak, and yet which must be spoken of, the Scripture stigmatises and condemns in very pungent and very brief sentences.

If any of our readers should think that we do not take sufficient notice of the manifold forms of error that abound, it is not because we are insensible to them, but because we do not think it is our business to advertise and spread them; but rather to lift up the crucified and risen Christ that He may draw all unto Himself, and that all who look to Him may live.

In these days, when doubt is lauded in prose and verse, and speculation often confounded with established science, a really valuable service is done by the Victoria Institute, which exists, among other things, to show that scientific eminence is not inconsistent with Christian devotion. The Lord Chancellor presided on Monday at the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Institute, and in the course of an address full of warm sympathy said that as the light of Divine truth becomes more widely disseminated, we shall find that God, having revealed his will to his erring creatures, will also enable them to understand his ways. We take this to be a necessary truth; for, however thick the darkness may still be in many places, the victory is with God, who has given all things into the hands of Him who is emphatically "the Light of the World" and the Heir of all things.

The American Bible Society has resolved on taking yet another step in the way of securing that a Bible shall be found in every home. In a circular recently issued the Society says:—

> Eight years ago the Society began the work of placing a Bible, by sale or gift, in every home in the land where it would be received; but now the Society proposes a work of still greater magnitude and importance—a Bible of its own for every child that can read, with special reference for Sunday-school use.

The Secretary says that his attention was drawn to the gradual exclusion of the Bible from the Sunday-schools by the fact that the issues of entire Bibles by the Society did not constitute a sufficient supply for the Sunday-schools alone, and he became convinced that the lesson-leaflets were taking its place in the Sunday-schools. An investigation of the subject by the Society, he says, has resulted in the proof that the lesson-leaflets are fast supplanting the study of the Bible.

The Jewish World has in its issue for July 29 an interesting and weighty article on the loss Continental peoples are inflicting on themselves through the toleration of the Judenhetze. After referring to various cases in illustration of its meaning, our Jewish contemporary adds:—

> The time cannot be far distant when all respectable classes in Germany will unite to crush out anti-Semitism, not in the interests of the Jews, but for their own protection. In Austria during the last few years every useful public movement has been violently opposed by the anti-Semites, and what the crusade in Russia has cost can only be counted by hundreds of millions of roubles. These facts have only to sink deeply enough in the public consciousness for anti-Semitism to disappear.

True followers of Jesus and lovers of Israel take, of course, higher ground, recognising the sinfulness of injustice and cruelty towards the Jews, and realising that even under judgment they are "beloved for the fathers' sakes." None the less is it timely and useful that general attention should be called to the fact that God's principle of action remains ever the same, and that those who persecute the Jews now, as in ancient times, suffer sorely in consequence.

Some admirable and timely counsel was given by Dr. Bowman Stephenson, as ex-President of the Wesleyan Conference, in his ordination charge at Bradford on Monday to the thirty-eight candidates for the ministry. He drew attention to the elements of strength in the character of John the Baptist, and held him up as one worthy of imitation by modern preachers in his decision, his dogmatism, his fidelity, and his loyalty to the Master. John was only a voice, and a minister is ever greatest when he hides himself and exalts Christ. If these thirty-eight young pastors will faithfully carry out in their ministry the lessons of Dr. Stephenson's charge they have a great and useful future before them.

The long-expected and much-desired letters from Uganda have at length arrived from the missionaries on the Victoria Nyanza. A week earlier, letters had come from Captains Lugard and Williams giving a clear and intelligible account of Romanist duplicity and treachery which had given rise to all the troubles; and now Revs. G. K. Baskerville, R. H. Walker, and R. P. Ashe give narratives which fully vindicate the impartiality and forbearance of the British officers under singularly trying circumstances. So far as can be seen, the disorder had its origin in the advent of a fresh band of priests, bringing tidings of the proposed abandonment of Uganda by the British East Africa Company.

The Record, in the course of a thoughtful article on "The Truth about Uganda," deals with the lesson of the trials which have befallen the Mission on the Great Lake, and adds:—

> Never, probably, since the first three centuries of our era has any body of Christians been called upon to pass through so long a period of varied but continued sufferings. Truly a Church whose planting and early growth have been attended with such a succession of violent storms, and which has survived them all, must be endued with exceptional vitality. It must have taken deep root in the soil, and be destined ultimately to flourish with no ordinary vigour.

Although, as the latest telegrams from Zanzibar indicate, the course of events in Uganda during the next few months cannot but be a source of grave anxiety to those interested in the cause of the Gospel in that land, it is, as The Intelligencer remarks, "an occasion for earnest prayer," for "the complications of the position do not baffle Him in whose name our brethren have gone forth, nor will He be unmindful of the needs of his little flock."

The Church Times has drawn attention to the somewhat striking anomaly that the Romanist bishops in India are selected by the King of Portugal; and a Roman Catholic journal emphasizes the statement by adding to it that these nominees of a foreign Power, in their turn, elect the Roman Catholic chaplains to the British troops in India. Surely this is a condition of things which calls for interference.

The Keswick Convention.

Notwithstanding the many conventions, which are now held in all parts of the country, the attendance at Keswick has been as large as ever. Indeed, the throng at the Bible-readings, and at the evening meetings, has far exceeded the limits of the great tent, with its 2500 seats, so that there has been a broad fringe of people standing all round the seated congregation: favoured by the exquisite weather, which has permitted the uplifting of the curtains for the free entrance of air, and for the sight and hearing of the eager crowds, which were unable to find accommodation within the precincts of the tent.

It is a marvel how so many people manage to find lodgings in the little town, but some come in each day by excursion trains, whilst a large number of young men camp out together. There were two very considerable groups. One, a party of about forty, from the East London Institute, through the kind arrangement of Dr. H. G. Guinness; the other under the leadership of Professor Laidlaw, who formed a colony just behind the tent. This way of "doing Keswick" is very popular, when the weather is as favourable as it has been during the Convention week. It is satisfactory to know that many of these young men profess to have eceived lasting benefit.

This convention has been above the average in spiritual power. Several causes have contributed to this. The bulk of the people who attend are much more familiarised than formerly with the teaching with which this convention is specially identified, and so the meetings at once begin on a higher level. The speakers had reached a stage of doctrine on the second evening which is generally not touched till the third, or even the fourth. Dr. Elder Cumming, who spoke on that occasion, acknowledged that it was useless to resist the high tide of spiritual feeling, which demanded, at that early stage, a clear and forcible announcement of the doctrine of the Pentecostal gift.

But, without doubt, the tidal wave of blessing which has made this convention memorable may be attributed to the remarkable power which attended the addresses of Wednesday. The Bible reading given by Rev Hubert Brooke in the morning, on the successive memorials of God's dealings with his people, was pronounced by many who knew him best as unparalleled by any that he has delivered, for beauty and spiritual power. We confess to have heard nothing like it. It simply showed what untold depths of meaning and interest await the researches of the Bible student in the most familiar tracks of Scripture. Then followed an address by Mr. Meyer on the Indwelling Christ, and one by Mr. Haslam on our Indebtedness to the World, and the speakers seemed more than usually conscious of the touch of living fire.

The climax, however, was reached in Mr. Grubb's address in the afternoon, detailing the remarkable experiences of his late mission tour through the Australian Colonies. For an hour and a-quarter he spoke with inimitable power to a vast audience, and his recital recalled the early days of the history of the Church, when men went forth in simple child-like faith upon the direction and provision of Christ. The sallies of amusing wit, the personal references, the story of deliverances experienced in hours of need, the marvellous results wrought by the Spirit of God, maintained fixed and intense attention; and it was interesting to detect the response of sob or smile, and to hear the expressions of deep assent, or to watch the effect of some searching personal appeal.

The racy descriptions of the archidiaconal ring placed in the collection, and the minister who was wont to use the longest words in Johnson's Dictionary, but when filled with the Holy Ghost, began to speak so that every one could understand him; of the newspaper editor who accused the Evangelist of making use of hypnotism; of the w. men praying in the cathedral, so as to suggest the desirability of it being re-consecrated; of the dismay of the P. and O. officer at the prayer-meeting which stopped their progress for twenty-four hours; of the jewellery of the Tamil David; and of the boy with the cracked skull—none of these will be forgotten for many a day, and yet all was so simple, so natural, so suffused with spiritual unction and power, that there seemed no incongruity or unfitness in such references from that platform.

Rev. Evan Hopkins has excelled in his special province, as the theologian and clear thinker of the movement. His address on the use in Scripture of the word "heart" deserves careful perusal. And his directions at the after-meetings have been admirably clear and helpful, especially that on Thursday evening on Faith to give out as well as to receive the grace of God.

In our judgment, there has been a clear advance in one direction of the teaching; more emphasis has been laid than formerly on the effect of the Divine cleansing on the secret thoughts and intentions of the inner life. There has been no sign of receding from the old position. Repeatedly has it been affirmed that no mechanical theory is held, that the flesh is not extracted, that there is always a great chasm between man's best and God's, that there is constant necessity to ask for forgiveness through the blood of Christ; and yet there has been a new emphasis laid on the thoroughness with which the Holy Spirit's influence may be experienced in the interior secrets of the heart, so that there, also, sin shall have no dominion.

Considerable interest was excited by the presence of several distinguished visitors, amongst whom were Mr. Hudson Taylor, just back from his long absence; Dr. Pentecost, who took a memorable part in the missionary meeting on behalf of India, held on Thursday afternoon; and Mr. Moody. The latter came to the Convention, avowedly to get spiritual refreshment and quiet, but he was announced to preach on four occasions in the Tent, so that we fear that, whatever be the result of his visit spiritually, he will stand but a poor chance of physical recruiting. In addition to these were several leading ministers from all parts of the world, and theological professors.

Altogether there is reason to conclude that this remarkable gathering is gaining solidity and strength as the years pass. Statements are still made to which we should take exception, but they are becoming fewer, and they are more than counteracted by the clear, strong Scriptural statements of many of the younger men as well as of the tried and honoured leaders of the movement.

KESWICK!

JULY 25—30.

The quiet valley hid among the hills,
The storied stream that murmurs in retreat
Of leaves, the silver lakes about the feet
Of crag and cliff, the flashing mountain-rills:

Surely of these the vision aye shall be
A fragrant chamber for the weary mind,
Wherein to rest a little space and find
Strange solemn comfort. Yet, O Lord, for me

One thought of richer meaning ever lies
Within the grace and gladness of these days;
And in my heart renewéd, prayer and praise
And wonder crowd as waves that fall and rise.

Here thou hast found thy servant crushed and worn
With stain of lust and loss, and thou hast given
In piercéd hands the bread and wine of heaven,
Healing the wounds that bled, so sadly torn.

Wherefore with crimson halo through the broad Long years before me this fair spot shall glow,
Not for the perfect beauty and rich show
Of earth, but for that here I met my God.

Keswick Notes.

"The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob." Why is this? Because here they are assembled not as separate tribes but as one Israel. "Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together: whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord,"—"to give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness." The Tabernacle of the congregation was not so much the place for the assembly of the people as the Tent of meeting with God. These con-ventions—these comings together—are pleasing to God, because distinctive names are laid aside, and the people come as representatives of the one Church of God, collectively and individually, to meet with God.

And as the people more and more leave behind them their humanly-devised distinctive designations, and realise increasingly their oneness in Christ, so the blessing deepens and intensifies; and the Convention at Keswick last week was generally felt to have been the most blessed of a long series. The heavens smiled upon it with the loveliest weather, such as the gathering has enjoyed only once before.

Perhaps it has not yet been fully perceived that the highest blessing can only be individually attained as "the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body to the edifying of itself in love." Nevertheless, much has been gained when the precept has been obeyed—not to judge one another any more; and the lesson of Uzzah has been learned that even when the ark of God is on a Philistine cart, and the Philistine oxen stumble, the covenant God of Israel is able to preserve the ark of his testimony.

The great topic of the work of the Spirit was so introduced in its various aspects as to lead to very definite fruition. From personal standing the mind was carried on to equipment for service; and then, from a sense of responsibility, to an enthusiasm for the cause of God. There was heart-searching in regard to individual life, and examination in the light of Christian duty to a perishing world. The addresses at the missionary gathering were free from anything like censoriousness, but full of direct appeal to men and women who realised that they had grievously neglected God-given opportunities for the evangelization of the nations sitting in darkness and the shadow of death.

The teaching was as heavenly food served up by those who have partaken bountifully at the Master's table. Hungry souls feasted as never before; many who had been blessed at other conventions, praised God for the precious things now brought forth for the sustenance of life and godliness. The end was practical holiness, attained by a more complete appropriation by faith of the Holy One of God, a faith perfected by works, as Abraham's faith was perfected when he had laid his son upon the altar.

The perusal of the report which we give of the addresses will, we do not doubt, recall blessed memories, not only on the part of those who were privileged to hear the uttered words, but also on the part of such as will find themselves receiving through the printed page instruction from teachers whom the Lord has blessed to them in the past. Acquaintanceships which will long be prized are made in the course of the week. Weary workers from various lands were not only enriched by things new and old brought forth from the heavenly treasury, but were refreshed by the greetings and encouragements that were on all hands extended to them. Whether darkest Africans or yellow-skinned Asiatics, the visitors realised in a delightful sense their fellow-citizenship with white-faced saints, who were gathered in a multitude from all parts of the United Kingdom, the Antipodes, and the great lands of the Western Continent, for we are "all one in Christ Jesus." Peculiarities of doctrinal view and ecclesiastical preferences were kept in th ackground while sanctified hearts and minds ere given up to the contemplation of "Jesus nly."

We cannot now particularise the many and aried features of interest from day to day—eetings for ministers, young men, ladies, issionaries; meetings for consecration and cceptance of f 'l salvation; meetings in the pen air, on the lake, and at Friars' Crag by he lake-side; the encampment of University en and medical students from Edinburgh; he contributions of money and of boxes of ewellery. From early morning to late at ight, with intervals all too brief for rest, in he tent, the drill-hall, the lecture-hall, and ther places, the voice of prayer and praise nd testimony was heard in heaven.

The following note, read by the Chairman n the tent, bears witness to the simplicity nd effectiveness of the words by the wayside f David, the Tamil evangelist:—

My dear Brother—I enclose a thank-offering to our ather in heaven, and to the brethren who have spoken, for he blessing I have received here. I specially praise Him r the wisdom given to David, whose childlike talk outside he tent made "God's easy, artless, unencumbered plan" f salvation to the uttermost, more intelligible to my nderstanding and more acceptable to my heart than ever. May I quote his closing instruction as a help to any perlexed soul: "Receive God's cheque by faith and cash it y obedience."—Yours in the love of the Spirit, ——.

The visit of Mr. Moody gave a glorious nish to this grand Convention. It seemed s though he had immediately and deeply nbreathed the Spirit-filled air of the place, or his addresses on Saturday night and ree times on the Lord's day were character-ed by more than usual power from on high. ender, comforting, and encouraging to the eary and heavy laden, they were pungent, enetrative, and yet persuasive, to those who new not God, or were halting between two pinions. Bishop Ryle, who was present and ffered prayer, listened with evident satis-action to a preaching of the "Old Paths" hich was according to his own heart.

Some of the features here barely mentioned ill be dwelt upon in our report next week.

Grindelwald and Keswick.

At first sight it might appear that the resence of Rev. Harford Battersby at Grin-elwald was the only connection between this eunion Conference and the Keswick Con-ention. But there is a still more important nnection. The yearly meetings at Keswick, y bringing together Christians of all sections f the Church, have made Grindelwald possi-le. The true unity of the Church has ready been realised beneath all the existing ivisions; and very many have learned to alue "the fellowship of the Spirit" much ore than fellowship on a narrow denomina-onal basis. Before Grindelwald was pro-osed or thought of, Keswick had done much owards reunion. This connection between e two ought not to be overlooked.

But while thus connected with Keswick, we o not think that the Reunion Conference is ually important, or likely to contribute so ffectively to the healing of existing divisions f the Church. Keswick has done much to nite Christians by emphasising the fact that ll are one in Christ, and that all equally need nd can expect the fulness of the Spirit. his is to seek God's unity on God's own nes. Grindelwald, on the other hand, aims unite Churches—denominational systems. he attempt is hopeless. You cannot give utward expression to a union that does not xist. Denominations began their history, nd continue still, in order to express their eparation from others. Separatism under-es their very existence; what hope is there f uniting these?

Results both good and bad are likely to llow from Grindelwald. It is, no doubt, a ood thing for Christians to seek to under-nd one another better, and to hold their fferences without bitterness. It is some-ing, too, that Christians of all sections of e Church should begin to be alarmed at e existing divisions, which are such a riking contradiction to our Lord's desire, as expressed in his great intercessory prayer. It is good also that, while these divisions exist, some attempt should be made to secure unity of effort in certain branches of Christian work. Possibly these results may, in some measure, follow from this Conference.

But there are likely to be other results of a less favourable character. The Lambeth proposals have been discussed, with hardly any other effect than that of showing how many and insuperable are the barriers to reunion. Representatives of the Church of England have sought to open their arms wide enough to receive all other denominations into their fold; and to their amazement the Nonconformists have viewed the proposal in anything but a favourable light. There has been something like pity in the attitude of Churchmen and Dissenters one toward another. It was impossible to hear the discussion without feeling that the barriers were becoming more rigid than before.

There were even more important matters than these involved in the discussion. Some speakers assumed the official priesthood of the clergy. Mr. R. F. Horton enunciated, and the great bulk of the people too readily received, his doubtful views on inspiration. Mr. Hugh Price Hughes, in seeking to defend Mr. Horton, declared that the sin of Protestantism was its faith in an infallible book. Recalling how very emphatic was the language of Jesus concerning the Old Testament, so that the Scriptures and Jesus appear to stand or fall together, he went perilously near a denial of the infallibility of Jesus. Canon Fremantle propounded his strange theory concerning the Church being practically identical with the nation. What effect would such discussion be likely to have upon the minds of many young Christians there? Fundamental matters are involved in them. Is it nothing to unsettle the faith of some with regard to these? Are the doctrines of the sole official priesthood of Christ Himself, and the common priesthood of all believers, to remain open questions? Must the New Testament idea of the Church be abandoned; and is it a matter of indifference whether the Scripture be regarded as infallible, notwithstanding the fact that Jesus said, "The Scripture cannot be broken" (Jno. x. 35)? These things ought not to be regarded as open questions. We may and must desire reunion; but we cannot pay such a price to obtain it.

From Grindelwald we turn to Keswick, where reunion is not an avowed aim, but where Christians meet on common ground, and forgetting their differences, rejoice in their real oneness in Christ. This is the true and sure method of securing union. A prominent churchman, who spoke frequently at Grindelwald, admitted this connection between Keswick and Grindelwald, but complained that the process was too slow. This need not trouble us if we are working on God's lines. As the life-unity becomes more and more realised, the manifestation of it will become possible. Attempts to force it before the inward unity is understood, and recognised, and rejoiced in, will end only in confusion.

LETTERS FROM UGANDA.

Letters have at length been received from the the C.M.S. Missionaries at Uganda, giving details of the serious fighting in January and February.

Rev. G. R. Baskerville writes under date, January 31, a detailed account of the aggressiveness of the Romanists, their plot to kill Mulondo, the leading Protestant chief, the wavering of Mwanga, who is described as a mere weathercock in the hands of the Roman Catholics, and his threat to "wipe out the English." Then comes the great fight of Sunday, January 24th. The following gives a clear view of the issues of that day:—

The Protestants were victorious, the King's flag had been hauled down, but deep sorrow had come to us—the very first guns fired had killed Sembera Mackay, our best and ablest man, and most deeply-taught Christian. He had gone to find a guard for our place, and, as he was passing some houses where some of the King's slaves lived, he was shot at and died almost immediately. Dear, brave Sembera, whom everyone loved, and of whom I never heard a disparaging word, has entered into his reward, and we are left to sorrow over his loss and to trust our God to supply his place. Two other Church elders have been wounded, and two Protestant chiefs, one badly so. The doctors have their hands full every day now, and I expect never had such work before. Rubaga hill had been taken by the Mugema and Pokino together with the Mwanika—they were never once repulsed, but carried everything before them. It had been impossible to bring the priests over to the fort, and their station was manned by Roman Catholic chiefs, who made a determined resistance; one of their black Hausa doctors, who foolishly fought in person, was shot dead. The priests were all conducted to the fort the same evening, their place being a total wreck.

We returned the same evening to our station, the whole of the Roman Catholics having fled. The King, with some three hundred guns, had fled to the small island of Burenguge, just half a mile from the shore, about two hours from Mengo; here he had his store, and had sent all his wives and wealth, and here it was that the Christians so long withstood the Mohammedans. Here they thought that they were quite safe, remembering the unsuccessful attacks of the Mohammedans. The great object, of course, of the Company was now to get hold of the King and restore him to his throne, knowing that he was a mere puppet, and if once in their hands would do all they told him—of course, they did not want the old chiefs back again, but the King alone. They sent several messages asking him to return, but he sent back to say that he wished to come, but was guarded and unable to escape. Friday morning the French Bishop came to say he wished to leave the fort, but Lugard refused him leave several times officially. At last he came to say that unless he was forcibly detained he should go, for these were his orders from Rome. Accordingly he went with all the priests except two, who, however, followed soon afterwards. He promised Lugard to persuade the King to return, and pass on himself to Sesse, and when there doing all he could to protect Mr. Bagge, who is daily expected back with the boat, and also to send messages to Budu to his people, to protect Ashe, Walker, and Smith, who are there at Masaka. He did none of these things, but went to the King, and he, abetted by Kisali, a blacksmith, a former pupil of Mackay, against the wish of all the Roman Catholic priests and chiefs, refused the King permission to return to Mengo. Does it not seem as if the French Mission is just God's appointed instrument to complete the confusion of Rome here in Uganda?

Rev. R. H. Walker, writing on February 20 to his father, brings the story down later, tells of the arrival of Mr. Ashe and his party, and describes the flight of the missionaries and their people from Budu, where they were in great danger, to Mengo, where, after exciting adventures, they arrived safely.

The latest telegram received on Thursday last from Zanzibar shows that the hope expressed by Captain Williams in a letter, dated March 7, has been realised, and that peace has been restored and authority re-established in Uganda. The message is to the effect that news has just been received from Uganda stating that the British East Africa Company is now established there on a thoroughly firm basis. King Mwanga has escaped from the Roman Catholics, and has rejoined the Protestants! The French Bishop, it is reported, tried to urge the Roman Catholics to continue the war.

THE KESWICK CONVENTION.

REPORT OF ADDRESSES.

(From Our Own Reporters.)

THE BLESSING OF UNITY.

BIBLE READING,

By REV. HUBERT BROOKE.

Having read Psalm cxxxiii., Mr. Brooke said that it was the next to the last of fifteen "Songs of degrees of David." These songs were probably sung by Israel, as they came up to the yearly Feast of Tabernacles, by growing companies as they neared the sacred city. After this psalm of unity there comes only a psalm of praise. We cannot get higher than that. As Israel sang these psalms, so God's people sing them too; sometimes consciously and often unconsciously making melody in their hearts unto the Lord. They are really songs of degrees or of steps. Each one is a step higher than the one before. It must be because this psalm of unity is so far on in the steps that it is so little sung. When it is sung with the heart and the understanding there is only one more song, the song of praise; as we sing that, we find ourselves joined by the company around the throne.

How many of us have known the Lord for as many years as there are songs of degrees? We ought to make at least one step in Divine things every year; and if we have known the Lord for fourteen years we ought to be able to sing this. I do not know but some children are moved up more than one "form" a year—sometimes two or three. Sometimes they seem to have been put by mistake in a lower one, and they must be moved up three or four at a time. At any rate, God's children, growing in intelligence as well as in knowledge, ought to be passing from one to another of these songs; to be learning to sing them and

SHOW THEM IN THEIR LIVES.

We have here a song of degrees of David, sung probably when, as we read in 2 Sam. v., this was happening in Israel: "All the elders of Israel came to the king in Hebron, and King David made a league with them in Hebron before the Lord; and they anointed David king over Israel." Or as we read in 1 Chron. xii. 38: "All these came with a perfect heart to make David king." That was a sight to which David pointed his people. He said, "Behold." It will be a grand sight when we are able to say to the world, "Behold." Hitherto we have had to say, "Listen;" and they have listened, but have not seen. The eye takes in testimony sometimes better than the ear; and when we do our part, and are able not only to say, "Hear what great things the Lord does for his people," but "Behold, how good and pleasant a thing it is," why, then you are doing what the Lord Himself said: "If ye love one another, hereby shall all men know that ye are my disciples." To hear it is good, but to know it is better. And why not make a good beginning today, as far as we are concerned? When God's children ask Him for Divine blessings and expect them they get them. As far as each child of God here is concerned, may we go forth and say, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

"How good and how pleasant." Perhaps that means—how good in the sight of God, and how pleasant in the eyes of men. The world always says the good things are unpleasant, and the pleasant things are not good. The Word of God says the good things are pleasant things, and the really pleasant things are the good things. Shall we begin by believing God, that the good things are the really pleasant ones? When we believe it we shall look for it, and presently we shall look like it, and people shall see it in us as well as hear of it from us.

"BRETHREN BELOVED."

"For brethren." So this is a family scene. You know—and in case any one should not know we will tell you—we cannot grow in grace unless we have been born by grace; we cannot grow in knowledge unless we have begun to know the Lord Jesus Christ; we cannot advance in holiness unless we have first of all found salvation in Christ Jesus. In 1 Thess. i. 4 Paul calls those who were members of the Church "brethren beloved." Unlike some of God's people, who use titles common to all, and appropriate them to themselves, making distinguishing marks out of them, the Word of God makes uniting marks out of them. The real Brethren are Churchmen, and the best Churchmen are Brethren. If we are to dwell together in unity we must come more and more to think the same things and see the same things. Remember what the Lord said, "One is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren." It is in Jesus Christ that the whole family in heaven and earth is named, and it is not likely that the brethren in the family will dwell together in unity until they agree to recognise as brethren in Christ those whom the Lord Jesus Christ calls his brethren. If He is not ashamed to call his believing people brethren, we ought to be proud to do it.

"To dwell together in unity." In the Greek version of the Old Testament the same words are used here as those used in Acts ii. 1: "When the day of Pentecost was fully come they were all with one accord in one place"—dwelling together, or "even together," as it might be rendered; as brethren ought to be in all well-ordered households. For Israel, as for the people of God now, there is only one secret of unity—submitting to the one Master. Israel was never dwelling in unity except when they were completely united in submission to their king, David. As soon as they began to separate from the king they separated from one another. As long as they were willing to be ruled by the king alone they were dwelling in unity. That is a good and pleasant thing before God and man—a thing which God wants his people to exhibit before the world, and a thing which will make the world know that we are his disciples, and know that Jesus is the Christ.

THE ANOINTING OF THE SPIRIT.

The Psalmist goes on here to tell us what the experience is like in such a condition as that. He gives first of all a symbol from inside the house, and then a symbol from the outside. "It is like the precious ointment on the head" of Aaron. That is taken from inside the temple where the high priest was anointed; only Israel could know about that. This spirit of unity makes them as truly one body as Aaron's body was one when he was anointed high priest over Israel. "The precious ointment"; that ointment was specially compounded of God. No one might make anything like it or use it for any other purpose but this. Here is that which tells us that the unity is altogether a thing of heaven; God and God alone maketh men to be of one mind in the house. This unity is not something that we can make; though, alas! it is often something that we can mar.

We see the high priest standing, clothed in garments according to his order; with the shoulder pieces, the names of six tribes on one, and the names of six tribes on the other shoulder; with the breast-plate on his breast, and the names of the twelve tribes there. The sacred oil is poured out upon his head, and flows down over his shoulders, covering the names of the tribes of Israel, as they rest in the place of strength. And the anointing oil that binds God's people together in unity, binds them together in power. Then the oil flowed down on Aaron's beard and rested on the breast-plate, so that once more the names of the twelve tribes of Israel were overflowed with the anointing oil as they rested on the heart of the high priest in the place of love. So this anointing oil of the Holy Ghost flows down from the Head to the members, and binds them together in the strength of God and in the love of God. But the oil does not stop there; it flows down, we are told, even to the skirts of his garments. Perhaps there are some Christians here who are looking at the things which God has prepared for them that love Him; but they think these things are prepared for those who love Him a little more than they do. So by a false humility they make themselves lower than God has made them. Even if they are the very lowest members of Christ, let them not forget that no portion of the mystical Body of the Great High Priest was outside the influence of the anointing oil. There is a picture from the inside as to how God's people should dwell together in unity.

THE DEW OF HERMON.

But it is to be seen also outside the house of God. The writer tells us further that this dwelling together of brethren in unity is as the dew on Mount Hermon, and as the dew that descended on the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore. Some have thought that this Zion was the shoulders underneath Hermon, and the passage means that the dew gathered round the head and rested on the shoulders. But I think it is perfectly clear that the picture is that of Mount Hermon right away at the extreme corner of the land, just on the borders of Dan, the most northerly tribe. It was the source of the Jordan, the river of blessing and cleansing. On Mount Hermon the clouds gathered as they came sweeping from north, south, east, or west, and there, from the head of the land, they broke away in gentle dews, and flowed down throughout the whole land of Palestine, resting on portion after portion till they came to the south—to Zion, which means arid or barren.

What a course this cloud mist had to take, and to how many interruptions it was liable! As it first broke away from the top of Mount Hermon it had to go over Dan. Dan was the judging tribe. Perhaps it is often the case that the blessed anointing of God's Holy Spirit never gets past the tribe of Dan—those who rise up and judge their brethren to be unworthy of receiving, and keep it all for themselves. I do not at all wonder that Dan was next to Hermon. I am sure there is a meaning in it. It is just because the Lord's people are so ready to do what He told them never to do: "Judge not that ye be not judged;" it is because they prefer to judge others that the dew flowing upon them gets no further; they only stop the flow of the Holy Ghost. As the dew comes down from the northern tribe it passes on to the other tribes. It comes to Naphtali, which means wrestling or contention. If the judging process does not stop it, sometimes the contentious process does. They may be contending for the truth perhaps, but it is without love. Christians who are wrestling, not with God for blessing to come on them and through them to others, but wrestling with their brother and seeking, perhaps, consciously or unconsciously, to keep from him the blessing that God means for all, are stopping the outflow of this dew from Mount Hermon.

The dew comes to the next tribe, Zebulon. That was the busy tribe, reaching out to the seashore in order to do its business. So Christian people are sometimes so occupied and so overwhelmed with business that they do not hear God's call to dwell together in unity with their brethren. Then the dew flows next to Issachar, the knowing men, who had understanding of the times. How often Christians who think they know better than others, do not show better than others at all! They seem to absorb the gifts of God, and pride themselves on those gifts that God desires all to have. They are like the Corinthians of old who "came behind in no gift," but who had contention and strife among them, so that they could not attain to the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.

Then came Ephraim, the ruling tribe. God gives rule and intends rule, but instead of ruling for Him alone we may desire to rule for ourselves and to keep for ourselves those things that God meant us to distribute to others. If this blessing passed Ephraim it flowed down to Benjamin. I do not think he ever hindered it, and it passed to Judah, so that it rested on barren Zion, which thus became a fruitful stream, for from this very Zion the living waters flowed to all lands. What a wonderful picture of God's people dwelling together in unity! But while it is a wonderful picture it is a very solemn one, and, I think, an awful one, to think that, so far as we here this morning are concerned, the fulness of the blessing not only that we can get in Keswick, but that we may learn to give out from Keswick, it will take every believing soul here unitedly to gain; and it may be hindered by a single one. You do not wonder that this is the last step but one.

A COMMANDED BLESSING.

What happens when believers do thus dwell together in unity? "There the Lord commanded the blessing." "The blessing"—why, that is the very thing that is talked about at Keswick, and that sometimes disturbs the people who do not come to Keswick. What do you mean by "the blessing"? Just what David meant in Psalm cxxxiii.: "There the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore." A commanded blessing—do you know what that is? Look at Leviticus xxv. 21: "I will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years." God gives to the believing Church as their heritage a double portion of his Holy Spirit when they dwell in unity. He commands a threefold blessing that shall last for ever. "He commanded and it stood fast." Some people say, "Yes, Keswick was very good a year ago, or four years ago; it was a wonderful time, but it did not last." I am quite sure that if it ceased it was because the Lord did not command it. Scripture says: "He spoke, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast." You sometimes want "fast" colours that won't fade in the sun: not those that have to be kept in the shade lest they disappear. God's colours are all fast colours. Brethren and sisters, if from this Conference you want to go down into the world with a fulness of blessing that shall stand fast, remember that there the Lord commanded the blessing, where brethren dwell together in unity. And that blessing is "life for evermore"—perpetual life in you and through you. You will see what the blessing is, and will be able to tell people what it is when you understand that it is life for evermore, life abundant, life flowing out from you. And you have never reached the fulness of blessing until you see that this blessing and prove that this blessing is impossible to be contained within the storehouse of your own heart. You must have a wider range for that storehouse, and must scatter it upon the fields that it may bring forth a hundred-fold for God.

A CERTAIN RECIPE.

What, then, are we to do? I think, in order to secure this blessing, one by one, each for himself, we must be very careful to do one thing. I do not know any other condition on which real unity in the house of God can be obtained or maintained, but the one condition to be found in Philippians ii. 3: "In lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves." Of those things that hinder the flow of the Spirit of God, nothing is more effectual than contention and division of one kind or another. You know what the wise man says in Prov. xiii. 10: "Only by pride cometh contention." That is the atmospheric disturbance in the Church of Christ. The dew never falls unless there is stillness. While storm, strife, and contention are at work within the Church of Christ the dew cannot rest. Where there is contention you can say at once there is pride. Each is not esteeming the other better than himself. It may seem hard at first to think you can honestly esteem another better than yourself, but I think you will find one little recipe sure to result in what we want. Spend the time that you occupy in judging others in judging yourself. You won't have a moment's difficulty in thinking yourself the least and lowest of all.

This is a practical thing. We come here professedly believing in God's Word, and desiring to know what are the unexhausted blessings of the Lord. Then let us go forth experiencing and manifesting to the world God's commanded blessing, in different forms—strength for us when weak, lovingkindness when depressed—different forms of his blessing proportioned to the need of his people. It comes in threefold fulness, in abiding power, if we believe it; and I am sure there is not one Christian could stand up here and say, "I do not believe it." If we do believe it we cannot be excluded from God's demand to do our share in dwelling together in unity; in holding this up as a thing to be maintained for God's glory, for blessing upon his people, and for blessing through his people to the world. Remember that when the Church was united in the first days, then the Gospel was spread through the world. They were of one heart to make the Lord Jesus King, of one mind to do his will, and of one aim to carry it out. They were so occupied with the Master as Lord, one by one, that they had no time to find fault with one another. Unhindered, the anointing oil flowed down to the very skirts of the Saviour's garments; every single member full of the Holy Ghost; and in the power of that Holy Ghost blessing was commanded, even life for evermore.

GOD'S QUESTIONS AND COMMANDS.

By REV. GEORGE WILSON.

I would turn your minds to a message to the children of God in 2 Cor. vi. 14:

Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.

This message begins by simple, searching questions to the Christian. It would be interesting to study the history of the Spirit's questions. Very often He has wrought his great spiritual miracles by putting questions. "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" That went home. "Peter, lovest thou Me?" That went home to the heart of Peter. And I think that those who get great blessing at Keswick, or at God's feet anywhere, generally begin by having a very direct and home-coming question from the Lord. A brother clergyman of mine came to Keswick, and I asked him why he went. "I went," he said, "to question the teaching." "And what did you get?" "God began by putting a question to me that made all the difference to my life."

FIVE SEARCHING QUESTIONS.

Let us look at these questions; they are for the child of God. The first one is very penetrating: "What fellowship hath righteousness with iniquity?" You children of God are in a standing of righteousness; here is a fact. You will never be more righteous than you are to-day, for you stand in the righteousness of Christ if you are a Christian at all. But is there righteousness in your state as there is in your standing? Is it not an awful thing that so many Christians rejoice in the righteousness of Christ and are yet holding communion in their hearts and lives with iniquity? Let that question by the Spirit's power work its purpose.

The second question: "What communion hath light with darkness?" If you are a Christian you are in the light; you cannot be one without being in the light. You are in the light of the covenant. You see in a measure, at least, what you are, as you know what you have been. You see what you have in Christ; you see the pathway home filled with the blessed promises of God. Are you walking in the light? Or are you having communion with darkness while you claim to be a child of the light? What is the darkness? Your own little candle that you light in the blaze of the sun; your own self-chosen way; your own self-originating energy. Let this question work the Divine will in you.

The third question is equally searching: "What concord hath Christ with Belial?" You are in Christ, the worthy and the perfect One; you are in Him at the Father's right hand. Is He your Master? Have you gone to Baal, the unworthy one, and served him? It is an awful thing to see a human life serve this great enemy of human souls, but by far the saddest thing is to see a child of Christ serving the enemy; and that is not a rare thing.

The next question is also searching: "What portion hath a believer with an unbeliever?" You have a believer's portion in Christ, and nothing can take it away. Is it not an awful thought that we may have a believer's portion and be playing an unbeliever's part? Having a believer's privilege, and doing an unbeliever's service? Yet is not that true of many a Christian, even a Christian sure of his standing?

The last question is perhaps most penetrative of all: "What agreement hath the temple of God with idols?" Here is another fact. if you are a Christian at all, you are the temple of the living God. What is a temple? I think we may gather the external Christian view of it from the heathen priest, who went out with his little rod and drew an imaginary line round part of the sky, and all inside that circle was sacred. Is there a line drawn around your life, including every farthing of your money, every acre of your land, every faculty of your mind, every child in your home, every influence you possess; and is it all the Lord's? But the New Testament idea of a temple is a place for God to dwell in. Wondrous condescension that God should come into the heart of man and dwell there. But we often set up idols in the sacred place side by side with God. Are we the temples of God in our practical life, or are we furnishing God's holy temple with unholy idols? Our passions not yet subdued, our pride, our vanity, our love of praise. God search our hearts, and bring us to the dust at his feet.

You may say that none of these things apply to you. You are in a very sad and dangerous state if you say that. You are not in the least on the high level of the fulness of this blessed life. I think that those who are on the very highest levels of that life are constantly crying, "Lord, let me not have fellowship with iniquity! There is risk and danger at every step in my life; let me have no communion with darkness. Let me be wholly separated unto thyself. Let me be thy dwelling-place and every idol swept out."

THREE IMPERATIVE COMMANDS.

What is to be done? After the searching questions come the imperative commands. I am perfectly sure that the Lord is finding out some of his children here in the early days of this Convention and doing for them what a great genius was said to do for his age. It was said of him that

> He took the suffering human race:
> He read each want, each weakness clear;
> He struck his finger on the place,
> And said, "Thou ailest here and here."

That is what Christ will do for his children. The want is there; the rust is there; the poison is there; the blemish is there. And until you are separated from that there is no possibility of blessing at Keswick or anywhere else.

What is the commandment? It is threefold: Come out; be ye separate; touch nothing unclean. Let us take it for granted that we want deliverance. With the desire in our hearts let us look at the command. "Come out." I cannot. "Be ye separate." Impossible. "Touch nothing unclean." Then I would need to go to another sphere. Well, I put the question: "Is God wrong when He asks you to come out? Is it impossible for you to be separate, and to touch nothing unclean? The question is with God, not with me. I believe with all my soul this is the great secret, and I know no other. As I have in the presence of God seen what I must come out from, what I must be separated from, what I must not touch, I do two things. I justify God and I judge myself. A justified God and a judged self bring immediate and permanent deliverance in the power of the Spirit.

THREE ALMIGHTY PROMISES.

But lest we should be discouraged, following the imperative commands God gives almighty promises: "I will receive you unto myself; I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be to Me sons and daughters." We are received into God's hands for deliverance, and for keeping after deliverance; for cleansing and for keeping clean; for power to serve and power to suffer. There are some things God cannot do. He cannot do the receiver's and the giver's part; but He will do the receiver's part this morning to every one of his children. Will you not say: "Yes, calmly; with all my mind working; with all my heart alert; with my consciousness very sensitive, into thy hands I yield and surrender." Then there will come this: "I will receive you; I will be a Father to you." Where is the father that takes delight in the impurity, the weakness, the sorrows, and the wrongs of his child? He does not exist on earth, or he is not worthy to be called father. Do you think He exists in heaven? I know no bond so sacred between earth and heaven as the filial bond. Some of us can tell of unspeakable sorrow and trial, and sacred hours and weeks of suffering. Yet there was the sense of a child's heart and a loving Father drawing out our confiding love, and Satan did not come then. There were rest and peace and calm—a central calm at the core of a ceaseless agitation.

Then how practical this life is. "Therefore having these promises, let us cleanse ourselves from all defilement of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord." That means that I should use this wondrous power that has come into my life, watchfully, prayerfully, carefully; then the two things go on—the cleansing of the flesh and spirit, and the perfecting or cultivating of holiness. I said to a gardener who was one day trimming his plants, "What are you doing, John?" "I am cultivating roses." "Cultivating roses? You seem only to be bleeding and weeding them; only taking the hindrances out of the way." "You are right, sir." That is what we have to do with the great spiritual culture. We want to come into conscious, sensitive, continual co-operation with God in cleansing us; and then maturing holiness in the fear of the Lord. We cannot get higher. In dependence on the Lord—the act of dependence the outcome of the attitude—day by day, moment by moment, depending on Him, He will perfect holiness. We cultivate it, and God perfects it in his own way. That is a possible life for every child of God. If this life is not exhibited God is not to blame; you are to blame. And the blame is awful.

HOW MARTHA LIMITED JESUS.

BY REV. G. C. GRUBB.

"Sanctify yourselves, for to-morrow the Lord will do wonders among you." This is the to-morrow, so this is the day for the wonders; that is, if you did what Dr. Elder Cumming told you last night. I want to tell you what the wonders are that God will do in your soul and how to get them done. The secret of it all you will find in John xi. 40: "Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldest believe thou shouldest see the glory of God?" This chapter and this incident are recorded for two purposes. In verse 14 we read, "I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye [the disciples] may believe." They were already believers, but they were acting an unbeliever's part. So if you understand this chapter, the unbelieving believers will be blessed; and that is the first blessing. Then look at verse 42: "I know, Father, that Thou hearest Me always, but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that Thou hast sent Me." So when the disciples believe, the multitudes that stand around gazing on, and wondering what all this excitement is about, will begin to believe too. And we read that these effects followed. "Many of the Jews, when they saw what Jesus had done, believed on Him." But the Pharisees—the religious leaders—and the chief priests went away and gathered a council, and said, "What do we? for this man doeth many miracles, and if we let Him alone all men will believe on Him." Why should they not let Jesus alone? What harm had He done to the Pharisees and Scribes? Was it a very great sin to raise a man from the dead? to give eyes to the blind and feet to the lame; to make the widow's heart sing for joy; for the tears of penitence to course down the cheeks of a sinner; that her sins should be forgiven and her heart cleansed? Oh that the Scribes and Pharisees might have the wisdom to let Christ alone, and let Him work on in his own glorious way. God give us grace on this platform to stand out of the way, and give Christ freedom to work in this Convention. Then

MIGHTY WONDERS WILL BE DONE.

A terrible family trouble had come into the household at Bethany. The two good sisters Mary and Martha sent a message to Jesus—"He whom thou lovest is sick." "Jesus said, This sickness is not unto death, but that the Son of God should be glorified thereby." So the messenger returned, and said to the sisters that it was all right; the Master had said their brother would not die. And I suppose the sisters' hearts rejoiced greatly. But Lazarus grew worse and worse, and as the sun was setting Lazarus died. Oh, Jesus had told a lie! That was the dark temptation that came to the sisters. "He has not done what He said He would do"—that is the darkest temptation that can ever come to a believer's soul. "I see in the Bible that I am promised deliverance from all sin; the blessing of a clean heart; resurrection power. I trusted for it two, three, four years ago, but I have not got it. What is the matter? Oh, is Jesus wrong? Is it true, or not true?" And the heart goes down, the head is bowed like a bulrush, and darkness comes into the soul.

Then Jesus came to Bethany; and Jesus has come to Keswick. Martha goes out to meet Him; she fell at his feet, and said: "Lord, if Thou hadst been here my brother would not have died. It is thy fault, Lord, that all this sorrow and sighing and crying and doubting has happened." I wish to ask you believers: Are there any of you finding fault with God in his providential ways? I have seen many a Christian soul come near to the blessing of true sanctification, and then they went away because they found fault with some providential circumstance in their lives. God had taken away a child and they were rebellious; or He had taken away their money—perhaps let them go through the bankruptcy court—and they were rebellious. "Why should I be treated like this?" You never can get this wonderful blessing until your heart is at agreement with God respecting all his strange providences. Is there a rebellious cry in any heart here deeply troubled because of family circumstances? There are sorrow and trouble at home; there are sad circumstances at home. Well, I cannot explain them for you; I can only tell you this: Go to the feet of Jesus and

POUR OUT YOUR SOUL THERE.

You see, Martha committed the sin of limiting Jesus in three ways. And this Convention will never be a convention according to the mind of the Holy Ghost until it ceases to limit the power of Christ in saving, or the power of the Holy Ghost in cleansing: so long as you say to the Almighty Spirit: "Thus far shalt thou go in thy work of sanctification, but thou shalt not go further. At least, we won't allow thee to go further on this platform." If you say that, then the glory of Keswick is departed; you may write Ichabod over the tent in great black mournful letters. God keep us from ever "limiting the Holy One." It is a most remarkable thing—it was the Holy One they limited; saying, "Can God?"

How did these two Bethany sisters limit the Saviour? First of all, to a place. "If thou hadst been here my brother had not died." Martha's faith did not rise to Christ's universal deliverance. It is just as easy for my Lord Jesus to save and sanctify in the wilds of Australia as in the King's Dale at Keswick. We need not come to Keswick to get the blessing. Perhaps we all acknowledge theoretically that the blessing is not in the place, so I need say no more upon that.

But there was a second way of limiting Him. "Jesus said unto Martha, Thy brother shall rise again." Martha said, "Yes, I know he shall rise in the resurrection at the last day." Jesus said, "I am the Resurrection and the Life; he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die. Believest thou this?" Here is one of Christ's questions. Oh that men would study Christ Catechism; it is far better than the Church Catechism, and much better than the Westminster Confession of Faith. What was the force of this question? Martha limited Christ's power to the future. She believed Jesus Christ could raise up her brother at the last day; but Jesus wanted her to believe in a present resurrection; a present deliverance from corruption; a present rising into resurrection life by the power of the Holy Ghost. Martha believed in the possibility of such a thing at some future date. And that is where the majority of you are. You believe Christ at some future time will exercise his power in your soul. But God can put forth his wonder-working arm at this moment; He can say: "Yes, thou ailest there," and He can bring

STRENGTH AND HEALTH AND CURE.

Oh, Christians, let Jesus catechise you, and be careful that you answer Christ's questions in the terms in which He asks them. Martha shirked the answer to the question, "Dost thou believe that I am the Resurrection?" "Yea, Lord, I believe thou art the Christ." But she was not asked that. She would not have been a believer at all if she had not believed that. I suppose if I were to ask all of you here who know the Saviour to stand up, almost every one in the tent would stand up. You have known and believed for years that Jesus is the Christ. Do you believe that Jesus can give you, this Tuesday in July, a present resurrection in your soul, like unto his own? What right have I to say that? Apostolic authority—"Like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life" (Rom. vi. 4). What a Divine parallelism there is here! Like as Christ was raised up—Jesus all glorious, all powerful, all pure; done for ever with sin; for ever in the fulness of the sunlight of the Father's presence; like as Christ was raised up from the dead, so we—yes, we—should walk in newness of life. Not in the oldness of the letter, but everything new—new joy, new song, new desires, new affections, new strength, new lips proclaiming his praise. Oh, blessed newness! Everything luscious; no candied fruit—the experience of thirteen years ago—any more; but to-day the Lord is going to bless my soul and give me a resurrection worthy of his own. Oh, that we speakers on the platform might get this resurrection life; then it will be easy work for you in the congregation after that. But when we say to God: "Thus far shalt thou go and no further," it is very hard to get you on at all. Dear soul, will you cease to limit the limitless power of the limitless Jesus? "All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth." Believe that, O downcast woman, over there. O man, over there, who art wondering how far we will go this time, He is able to change your gloom into glory. You will be

AT THE TOP OF SKIDDAW IN NO TIME!

But you will have to take a further step. First of all, settle in your soul that the blessing is a Scriptural thing to claim. Be perfectly certain of your Scriptural ground—that God promises you a walk like unto the resurrection glory of the Son of God. "Then Jesus came to the grave." It was a cave, and a stone lay on the mouth of it. "Jesus said: Take ye away the stone." "Martha said: Lord, by this time he stinketh, for he hath been dead four days." "Jesus said: Said I not unto thee, if thou wouldst believe thou shouldst see the glory of God?" Martha's brother lay in the tomb of his own corruption—the deepest corruption. What was Martha's mistake here? She had limited Christ's power as to place and as to the present. Now she limited it as to its extent. She knew that Christ had raised Jairus' daughter from the dead; but no corruption had set in; she just lay upon the bed; the breath had only left her. Martha knew that Christ had raised a young man from the dead as he was being carried out to burial. You could scarcely say that corruption had set in there. But here was a filthy body, a corrupt corpse, loathsome to the eyes, breeding living corruption. "O Lord, do not let them take away the stone; I could not bear the sight of my brother's corruption." Martha did not think that the power of Jesus was equal to such a desperate case as that. She did not think such a mass of corruption as that could be cleansed away in one second. She did not believe in instantaneous deliverance from corruption. She did not believe that by the instantaneous putting forth of his power all the uncleanness would vanish before the life-giving eternal word of the Son of God. "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live."

Is not that the case with you? You have seen others getting deliverance; but you say: "If you only knew the evil resident in my soul; the tears I have shed, the exceeding great and bitter cry: 'Hast thou not reserved one blessing for me, O my Father?' Oh the depth of evil resident within this heart of mine! If you knew it you would not talk as you have done." Dear soul, Jesus knows it far better. He knows your utmost temptation and your utmost corruption. He says to the Jerusalem of to-day: "O Jerusalem, wash thine heart from wickedness. How long shall these vain thoughts lodge within thee? Wilt thou not be made clean? When shall it once be?" I ask you that question to-day, When shall it once be? Are you going to remain in the tomb of your corruption? Are you still going to do despite to the striving voice of the Spirit of God? to do despite to the imperative command we have heard about: "Cleanse yourselves from all defilement of the flesh and spirit"? Remember that it is the aorist tense; it is to be done decidedly, instantly, completely. Do it now. Is it to be done now, or will you refer it to some future date? If thou wouldest believe thou shouldest see the glory of God; and the glory of God is the goodness of God. "Now, Lord, the hour is come; Father, glorify Thyself in this tent; that thy Son also may glorify Thee." Glorify thy Son in raising these souls into life like thine own; in delivering men and women here from the bondage of corruption and setting them free from grave-clothes to walk in newness of life. When shall it once be? Oh, my God, we cry to Thee. Let thy glory appear unto thy servants; let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us. Establish the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish Thou it. Nay, let it be the work of thy hands. We put ourselves into thy moulding hands. Oh, Jesus, work in me, live in me, cleanse me till thou canst see nothing unclean.

Nothing unclean can enter in Where God in glory reigns;
His eyes so pure cannot endure
The sight of spots and stains.

"Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldest believe thou shouldest see the glory of God?"

FROM SORROW TO SONG.

By REV. F. B. MEYER.

Turn with me to Hosea ii. 15, in which there are these three monosyllables, "She shall sing." When these words were uttered it seemed as though they never could be realised—that Israel would never sing again. She had sung in the days of her youth; on the day when she came out of the land of Egypt; and on the banks of the Red Sea her song rang out, "Sing to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously." But now her harp was hanging upon the willow unstrung; it seemed as if she never could sing again. We read in verse three that she had been stripped; in verse eleven her mirth had been caused to cease; verse twelve, her vines and figtrees had been made waste, and the land that had flowed with milk and honey had become a very desert, and she sat down amid the shrivelled remnants of her past joy.

An apt type of many a life here to-day, which has forgotten how to sing. The days of your youth were indeed those of minstrelsy and song, but for many a day of late you have been joyless. But God said "She shall sing"; and when God says a life shall sing, sing that life shall. God says it of many a soul in this place to-day, and I dare to foretell it in his name—there is many a joyless soul of which God says to-night, "She shall sing."

Note that Israel did sing. Mark her theme. In verse eighteen she began to sing of the covenant; in verse nineteen she began to sing of her betrothal; and in verse twenty-one her song became so sweet that it awoke Jezreel, and Jezreel awoke the earth, that answered with corn, and wine, and oil, and the earth sang to heaven, and heaven, with all its myriads of stars, sang to God. So the song that began with restored Israel started circles of melody that reached the very heart of God Himself. All that comes when God says of a soul, of a nation, "She shall sing."

A WILDERNESS EXPERIENCE.

But how did God make Israel to sing? "I will allure her into the wilderness, and give her vineyards from thence" (ver. 15). Surely the strangest place in all the world to find vineyards. Oh, soul! you are going to see before long that God has purposely brought you into this wilderness experience, because out of the wilderness God is going to give you your vineyards. But note that He brought Israel into the desert and down into the valley of Achor; and there in the valley of Achor there was suddenly a door of hope. In order to understand that, please imagine a ravine, dark, storm-swept, through which the torrent hurries on with fleck of foam and roar into the valley beneath. Up a path on the ledge of the hill, a gaunt rock overhanging, a female figure with difficulty is climbing upward. Far away behind lie the vineyards, the orchards, the corn-fields. The path seems to lead straight up the wild hill, capped with a moorland waste. Nothing could be sadder or drearier than that picture; when suddenly in the valley an experience takes place of which I will speak in a moment. But when that experience has passed, suddenly a slab of rock opened upon the right hand of the path, like a door, and on the other side are the vineyards, and the corn-fields, and the orchards, and the new blessed land—God has opened in the valley of Achor a door of hope. As the traveller passes from the grand Alp on the northern side, and on the southern side lands in the fair plains of Italy, so through the valley of Achor souls pass from joylessness into music, from the desert into the garden, from defeat and sorrow into victory and everlasting joy.

The valley of Achor—we must understand that if we would learn how to sing. And so we turn to Joshua vii., where we have a marvellous picture of a people who had been redeemed by the blood of the Lamb; for the people of Israel had been ransomed; delivered from the thraldom of Egypt and led out to be God's own peculiar people. Next we have a people that had renounced and passed from under the leadership of Moses beneath the leadership of Joshua—Jesus the Saviour. Next we have a people that had been circumcised with an outward separation from the sins of the flesh; and, fourth, we have a people on the borders of the land of their inheritance. And yet we have also a people humiliated by failure, and in the person of Joshua and its leaders lying prone upon the ground smarting with disgrace. And there are under this tent to-night many who have been redeemed by the precious blood of Christ; who, knowing that they cannot be saved by the law, have fled to Jesus Christ for salvation from the penalty of sin; who have been circumcised by an outward separation from the grosser forms of the vanity of the world; and a people, too, who are always hovering round their inheritance, nearly achieving it, and yet always missing it; and those who, however calm their exterior, are yet smarting under the consciousness that they would be what they are not, that they would do what they do not, that their desire is not equalled by their spiritual power, and who have not entered into the blessed inheritance of the rest of God. And all, in the case of Israel, lay in the fact that the accursed thing was hidden unknown in the tent. But until that accursed thing had been brought to light and put away there could be neither victory nor rest nor salvation, nor the enjoyment of what Joshua was prepared to do for the host.

Now do you see precisely where your position is to-night? It is not that there are in you passions too strong for God to master; because if God willed He in its course. It would be sheer blasphemy to doubt that if God chose He could work so great a miracle in the physical sphere; and if He could do that in the physical, He could in the spiritual. He could put a bit into the teeth of your passions; could curb and rein and restrain them. You are a defeated man to-day, not because you have passions too strong for God, nor because temptation is too powerful, but because under the tent floor of your heart to-day some hidden thing is concealed. Shall we now cast lots for it? Let God the Holy Spirit perform the work.

We will try to pass before our eye first the sins of our tribal life, the sins of our public life, of our business life, of our social life, of our contact with men. Is there not some unpaid debt, some obligation which has been ignored, some overcharge made which you have indignantly resented instead of suffering wrong? Has there not been a grievance between you and some brother man, he not being a Christian, and wondering how you, being a Christian, make no advance to him? Again and again men say to me that it is almost impossible in their business to bring to bear upon practical daily life the principles of the Gospel of Christ. They allow definite practices which they would admit, tried by the standard of the Gospel, are not strictly right; but they defend them by saying, Business is business. Are you doubtful about something? Do you wish I would pass on to something else? Is there a nervous dread lest another sentence may touch that thing in your business life which you are permitting, and which you try to argue yourself into thinking is right? When a man begins to argue with conscience, you may know he is in the wrong; and if you, man or woman, are at this moment seeking to justify something, and to say it cannot be that, it is very likely to be that which is the Achan of the tribe of Judah.

Or pass in review the sins of the family. Are there no sins in your family relations? Are you quite at peace with that brother or sister about the division of the parents' property? You avoid the subject. And yet are you perfectly sure that that poor relation, or that relation who has wronged you, or those people in your near family relationship who have brought what you thought disgrace upon your name—are you perfectly sure that you are bearing yourself towards them as Jesus Christ would do if He were in your place?

Or, pass from the sins of the family to those of the individual man. Forget for a moment that you are one of this great throng, and imagine that you are standing before the great white throne of God; you as a man dealing with the Judge of all. Are you perfectly sure that in your inner life, in your habits, in your modes of thought, in your imaginations, in the chambers of your imagery, in your purposes, in your intentions, in your Christian activities, that you are what Jesus Christ demands of you? Is there not one thing that at this moment presents itself to you? I remember once going to see the Salvation Army held in the town where I was residing. I thought to see idols from India, China, and Japan. To my surprise and dismay, they brought in upon sheets of cardboard a number of things amongst which I was able to see idols of my own. There were cigarette-holders, pipes, sham jewellery and real jewellery; and I saw one or two of my own idols there. It is so easy in a meeting like this to pass to other men the applications of God's truth, and to think of the idols that belong to other lives while we hide ourselves from the vision of our own. Oh that God would deal with the speaker, with the men on the platform, with the Christian ministers, with those who profess to be consecrated. Because, do you not think that as you are consecrated the standard rises? Is not the standard always rising? Is not God's ideal constantly coming more clearly into view? Can we grow in any other way than by catching a clearer vision of God's demand? So may there not be things in the speaker's life, and the hearers' lives too, which are flashing out as the Achan, the cause of all the defeat, and restlessness, and songlessness of our lives?

Now, let us burn these things; let us bring them out and hand them over to Christ. Let us ask Him to use that sharp two-edged sword which divides to the soul and spirit division, and that it may cut out of us the thing which has cursed us. Ah, brethren, it means coming to the knife. And I love that fourth chapter of Hebrews, which after it has told us of the sharp two-edged sword, the very mention of which makes the spirit quiver, ends by saying that "we have a great High Priest." Glory to God, if there is the knife, there is also the great High Priest. If the knife is to be used to-night, it will be used by a Hand that was nailed to the cross, the Hand of the blessed Lover of souls. Let Jesus cut the gangrene out.

I heard the other day of a man who, when passing through a factory, had his hand suddenly caught by a piece of the machinery, and he was in danger of being in an instant dragged to death. He seized a hatchet, and with his own hand cut off the other hand, and so saved his life. But there are not many men who could do that. It may be there are those who could do it, but I speak for you weak ones here, and I say for myself, that I could never use the knife. I could only lay myself down on the altar before Christ, and say: "I am willing; cut away." Will you do that? Will you get on the altar and let Christ cut the Achan and the Babylonish garment out? The very minute you do that, that very minute a door of hope will open in the rock before you, and you will pass into blessedness.

SOME CAUTIONS.

Hope for what? Let me be quite clear in what you are to expect. You are not to expect that you will ever get to a position in which you will not need, at the end of the day, to use the Lord's Prayer. When Christ has done this for you, though you live up to your light, and are saved from known sin, there will always be a chasm between your best and his best; and because of that chasm you will need to ask for daily forgiveness. It is when a man sees his own whitest, and gets a glorious vision of God's whitest, that he needs to say: "Now mine eye seeth Thee, and I abhor myself." We shall always need to ask God to forgive us.

Let us also understand that we shall never reach a point where we shall not be tempted. The nearer the soldier gets to the captain the more likely he is to suffer from the bullets that fly around the captain himself. You never find the boys pillage an orchard in which there is not much fruit, and the richer your life gets the more the devil will worry you. Temptation is often a proof that a man has got something worth the devil's stealing.

You will never reach a point either when you will be unable to fall, as if some mechanical operation had been performed inside you, and you were no longer able to fall. But I will tell you what you will reach. You will reach through the door of hope a position in which you will be saved from known and conscious sin; in which you will be saved not only from known and conscious sin, but you will be saved from the desire to sin; so completely does Jesus save. We pass through the door of hope to fight under the banner of Joshua, Jesus, the Saviour, who leads from victory to victory. Then the soul begins to sing again: out of that agony and sorrow, and the defeat of the valley of Achor, it passes into the life that sings, as the river sings in its hasty rush towards the ocean; singing in the dark as well as in the light; in the storm that sweeps across it as well as in the sunshine; in the winter as well as in the summer—a life that sings until it flows into the ocean of God's own life. So may it be.

HEART SANCTIFICATION.

By Rev. EVAN H. HOPKINS.

In 1 Peter, iii. 15, we read, "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts," or as it might be rendered, "Sanctify Christ as Lord in your hearts." A man said to me some time ago: "I do not believe in a religion of the heart; I believe in a religion of the intellect." I found it necessary before we took a single step together that he should clearly explain to me what he meant by the heart. It was not long before I discovered that what he meant was that he did not believe in a religion of excitement or animal feeling; he believed in a religion in which the head or the intellect had some part. I thoroughly believed with him thus far; but yet I believe that as the Lord has not only given us intellect but has given us emotions, He wants our emotions as well as our minds, and He can sanctify our emotions. He wants the whole man. "Sanctify Christ as Lord;" that is the grand lesson we have to learn—to know that when we leave this tent this afternoon, we can always be sanctifying Christ as Lord, every day and in everything. And it strikes me you will find it will have a marvellous influence, not only on your outward conduct, but on your inner experience.

First of all, notice the place where Christ is to be hallowed—in your hearts. The heart is not exactly the whole man; any more than the helm is the whole ship. But you give me the helm and I will command the ship. Whatever has the heart has the man. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." How important for us now to be brought to that point. I have been very much instructed in noting carefully, from the Old Testament as well as the New, how Scripture uses the word "heart." And I have come to the deliberate conviction that what the Scripture means in most cases by the heart is

THE INNER DISPOSITION OF THE MAN.

If you say it is identical with the new nature you will get into confusion. Here is a man who has been born again. There is no question of his having been brought to a knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ; but that man passes into various conditions of heart. Let us suppose that having been once earnest and devoted he has become worldly. Has he ceased to be a child of God? Has he become unregenerate? Surely not. He is a disobedient child, but he is still a child. The new nature is there, but he has got another heart. It is very important to bear this in mind when we come to speak about a cleansed heart. For instance, a true child of God may be in a backsliding condition. Look at David when he wrote that 51st Psalm. As a backslider he prayed, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me." He is not praying to be regenerate; he is praying to be cleansed as to his heart, as to the inner disposition of his being—that central mysterious part of the man which the Bible calls the heart.

Or a Christian may be in a doubting, unbelieving condition. So we are warned as Christians to take heed lest in any of us there be an evil heart of unbelief. If that is our condition to-night we need to be cleansed from an unbelieving heart. Or it may be a Christian man is in an undecided vacillating condition of heart. The world has laid hold of him by its attractions, and now instead of the heart being fixed it is wavering. You have come to this Convention, and it may be you hear a good deal that once used to delight your heart, but now you cannot listen to it in the same way. It makes you sad, because you see the necessity of decision, and you cannot make up your mind to decide. Or it may be that you are in a hard, unloving condition. There is bitterness or malice. Or it may be our hearts are full of prejudice. We see the privilege and the blessing, but because we have opposed it we are not going to give in. If we are in any of those conditions

OUR INNER BEING NEEDS CLEANSING.

Let us follow the question a little further in order to get as clear an idea of it as possible. What is the heart? It is the place in which these three things are focussed—the mind, the emotions, the will. The mind. What a blessed gift is this mind! You have all heard the story of a gentleman going to a lunatic asylum. One came out and said: "Have you ever thanked God for your reason?" That man had lost his reason. And God spoke to that gentleman through that lunatic. What a wondrous gift, I say, is the mind that God has bestowed upon us: that faculty of mental perception, the seat of our thoughts. What is the direction that your mind is taking? We use a phrase about one "giving his mind to it." You know what it means. What are you giving your mind to? That will indicate the direction in which you are constantly tending.

Come to the emotions—the seat of the affections. What are you desiring, longing for stretching yourself out to obtain? In what direction—Godward or worldward? Self-seeking, self-glorifying? Are there reserves? Are you giving your whole desires to God, or are you keeping back some for yourself—something secret, something that will not bear the light?

Or take again the will, the power of deciding, of choosing. What a wonderful gift is this gift of the will, with which God has endowed us. He has given us a will that we may have the power to give it to Him. On which side is your will? I say the condition of these three things will settle the question as to the state of your heart, and whether it needs cleansing. You say, "I know my heart is not right, but thank God I am a Christian. I have no doubt as to my acceptance. I know what it is to lose the burden of sin at the Cross, and to come to the mercy seat in prayer and say 'Abba Father.' I know when God shall call me, it will be to heaven. But I confess that my heart is not quite right now." Yes, something is wrong. How can it be put right? Put it into God's hands. Remember one thing—the heart

DOES NOT GET RIGHT BY GROWTH.

Some people think they are going to get their hearts cleansed by spiritual growth. Suppose you had a watch that will not keep time; would you get it right by winding it every night? No; take it to the watchmaker; he must adjust it, and then it will go. So you cannot make progress till you are put right. The Lord can set you right in a very short time. Of course, if it is a question of growth it is a question of time. We believe in progressive sanctification undoubtedly. But we also believe in the conditions of progress; if they are not obeyed, no wonder you don't progress. This cleansing of the heart is one of the essential conditions of progress. You say, What do you mean by it? Take the thoughts first. Have you ever prayed that prayer—"Cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of thy Holy Spirit."

Take the desires. Our brother (Mr. Meyer) has reminded us that our desires may be cleansed. You say, "Is not that GOING A LITTLE TOO FAR?

I do not quite see how that can be, unless you hold the doctrine of sinlessness." Let me put it in a simple, familiar way. Here is a man who has given way to the sin of drunkenness. Let us suppose that he was not born into the world with that sin. He has given way to temptation, and this thing has become a habit. It may be that he comes under the power of the Gospel. The Spirit of God shows him that this drunkenness must go. But he does not see how it can go even now, and there are times when he has a tremendous craving for the drink. That goes on for a little time. He rejoices in the forgiveness of sins, and his heart is so full of peace that he does not think of the habit of drinking. After a little while that habit comes round again with tremendous power. There is a fight and a defeat. Now the devil says to him, 'You are not converted; it is all sham." But you, who are a well-instructed brother, go to him; he is brought again to the feet of Jesus in confession, and is restored. You tell him the Lord has forgiven him. Then he looks up into God's face, a reconciled, pardoned, and restored child. Then you say, "Brother, don't you believe that God who has pardoned you and saved you from hell can keep you from falling into that besetting sin of drunkenness?" He believes that, and then and there he trusts the Lord for keeping.

You see him next day going down the street. He passes by the old public-house he knows so well. As he passes by a whiff comes out, and he smells it. The old desire is revived, and he has a tremendous struggle, but he prays, "Blessed Lord, keep me now," and Jesus is keeping him. Now he goes forth triumphantly; he is kept from yielding. Praise God for that. But he goes to his room and begins to pray: "Oh, Lord, I thank Thee that I have been kept, but what a tremendous struggle it is! Oh, those evil desires! How can I hold out?" Another brother goes to him, and says, "Do you believe the Lord can take away that desire?" "Oh no, that is going too far. I am quite sure He can keep me from yielding, but surely He cannot take away the desire." Every evil habit may be removed, but you say that He who pardons and delivers can not only keep us by restraining us; He can take away the desire for drink. You believe that as to drunkenness thoroughly, but not as regards many another temptation.

Now we come to the point. How very scriptural you are when dealing with a drunkard. And yet when we speak about this as an instantaneous possession you say you believe in doing it gradually. We all believe in progressive sanctification, but there is, as I say, something necessary to progress which has to be done instantly. And remember, we have to deal not only with negatives, but positives. It is one thing to have our minds and emotions cleansed and our wills put right; but there is the positive side. There is a threefold glorious exchange. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Jesus Christ." Christ's mind for my mind; that is worth having. That is the first great exchange on the positive side. It is not enough to talk about a clean heart. That is only negative. A clean heart means simply that sin is absent. I want something more than that. When the Lord comes in Himself to be your Holiness, you will have a holy heart. And I need to have my spiritual condition maintained, or I will lose it. I would not then cease to be a Christian. When I fail and therefore the sin is all the greater. I come back to Him as a child who has fallen but who ought to be kept. Well now, as we have the mind of Christ instead of our own mind, so we should have the love of God instead of our own love. Look at those wonderful words of the Lord Jesus in John xvii.: "I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it, that the love wherewith Thou hast loved Me may be in them." The love of God is to be shed abroad in our own hearts by the Holy Ghost—the Divine love communicated to us. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath"—manifested? Well, that is true; but it is better than that. "What manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." It is not enough that we should have the name of a child; I want to have the disposition, the nature, the love of a child. God has bestowed on us such a love, that we can love him back with his own love. And so with regard to the will of God. "Not my will, but thine be done."

I FAIL AS A CHRISTIAN,

All that is true when the heart is right: when we sanctify Christ as Lord of our heart. That implies that you know him as Jesus. Is it really true that in this large assembly we have all come to Him who shed his blood to wash us from our sins. Jesus—the name that belongs to his humanity—Jesus died for me, Then do we know Him as Christ; not only the One who was anointed here on earth in his private capacity, to do his Father's will, but He who at the right hand of God was anointed as Head of the Church? Do we know him for a fresh unfolding of his power as Jesus and Lord in our hearts? We cannot sanctify Him in the sense of making Him holy; it means that we are to glorify Him as the Holy One. If He is Lord within me then my heart is both a throne and a shrine. I have to enthrone Him as Lord of all—my King. I have to enshrine Him who is the centre of government. Now obedience is a delight. He is also the object of worship. There we shall see how great and glorious He is. Here is the secret of

CALM, COURAGEOUS RESTFULNESS.

Look at the verse immediately preceding, "Be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled; but sanctify Christ as Lord in your heart." See the force of the little word "but." We fear man so much because we fear God so little.

Another thing; this is the secret of readiness. If we sanctify Christ as Lord, we shall be ready for service—ready to give an answer to him that asketh a reason for the hope that is in us. While we shall not perhaps satisfy every idle caviller, every one who comes honestly and candidly to ask for a reason will have the answer. Sometimes you have felt that you knew what you ought to have said when it was too late; the time had passed and you were not ready at the right moment. If you sanctify Christ as Lord in your heart you will be prepared unto every good work.

One more thought: it is the secret of humility. You will know how to witness and to speak for Christ with meekness and reverence. I think we need that in the present day. Thank God for liberty and freedom; but oh for more reverence! It is only in Christ's presence that we know what true humility means; because it is before the Great and Holy God that we stand.

THE KESWICK MISSION.

REMARKABLE REPORT BY MR. GRUBB.

Midway in the Convention, on Wednesday afternoon, there is held the meeting when a report is presented of the year's doings in connection with the Keswick Mission. The tent was crowded, and the interest was kept at straining point from first to last. Rev. G. C. Grubb was announced as the chief speaker, and, as it turned out, he was the only speaker besides the Chairman, Mr. Wilson. His address extended over an hour and a quarter, and was of so unique a character that we reproduce it almost in full.

A hymn having been sung, prayer was offered by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, who had just arrived from China, via America.

The Chairman made a brief statement on behalf of the Committee of the Keswick Mission. The amount contributed for the general mission during 1891, he said, was £1326 18s. 3d. The sum of £573 13s. 3d. was given for other missionary societies. At the end of the year there was a balance in hand on the general fund of £1174; but since then £374 has been expended. There is a sum of £400 in hand for special work in China, £200 for Syria, and £358 12s. 6d. for other specified objects. The amount expended last year was small, partly because a large proportion of the expenses of the colonial mission were paid by friends in the colonies and in England. Requests have come for missionaries from conventions, from Canada, South America, India, and elsewhere, and all these claim our sympathy. Inquiries are being made of some of the missionary societies on what lines they would allow missionaries of the Keswick Mission to work in sympathy or in connection with them, the funds being found by the Keswick Convention. Nothing definite is yet arranged, but it is hoped that a lady will go to China this autumn as a Keswick missionary. It is believed that suitable arrangements could be made by which many earnest young people who have received much blessing at Keswick can go forth in the Master's name, and in the power of his Spirit to proclaim to the heathen the truths that rejoice their own hearts. It is the wish of many contributors to the fund that it should not only promote missions to our own countrymen in foreign lands, but be used for direct Gospel work among the heathen, without establishing any new missionary society. It is also felt that the sister country of Ireland should have a share not only in our prayers, but in practical support of those who are working for the Master there.

Mr. Wilson remarked that a continuance of the freewill offerings would be welcome in order to the extension of the work. By bringing together those who desired to go abroad, and those who are prepared to support them the Committee hoped to be able to send not ones or twos, but a larger number from the Convention. He was sure that those who went out from Keswick had no desire to appear as though they were going out to teach other workers how to do it; they wished to take the lowest place in the Master's service, that He might use them as He would.

MR. GRUBB'S REPORT.

After prayer and thanksgiving to God for the wonders He had wrought since they were last at Keswick, Mr. Grubb began his address by taking a leaf out of the book of Tertullus, the orator, beseeching the congregation of their clemency to hear him patiently. On April 3, 1891 (he said), Mr. and Mrs. Millard and I, at the bidding of God, went forth again to the colonies. We reached Gibraltar, and there the wonders began. We went ashore and were informed that we would have two hours there, as the boat would start in that time. A bright, clean-looking sailor had come on board and found us in the second-class saloon. He asked, "Are you the Rev. Mr. Grubb?" "Yes, that's the man." "Well, I saw a Rev. gentleman up there on the first-class deck, but as he was smoking a pipe I knew he could not be you. So I passed him by and came down here. Won't you and Mr. and Mrs. Millard come and hold a meeting to-night in the Soldiers' Institute?" I said we could not do that as the steamer was to sail in two hours. "Well, I am surprised at that, because we prayed last night, and we all felt in our souls that God had answered our prayer." "Oh, well," said I, "if we go we go, but, at all events, if we hold the meeting the Lord will have to do a little miracle; and I won't be surprised if He does." We went to the Institute, saw the friends, and then came back to the boat at eleven o'clock in the day. The screw turned and off went the boat. Where were the soldiers' prayers then? We went on for about a hundred yards when there was a sudden stoppage. We all ran to see what was the matter, and there was a chain cable wound round our propellor!

GOD HAD STOPPED THE P. AND O. BOAT

in his own way, and according to the soldiers' prayers the meeting was held that night, and several souls blessed. So I saw that the captains of all the steamships are under the control of my God. I went to one of the officers on board and said: "How long will we be here?" "Till six o'clock to-morrow afternoon." "Do you know why the boat stopped?" said I. "There was a chain round the propeller." "Oh, but I can tell you more about that. The reason was that the sailors at the Institute prayed we should have a meeting." He hoped we would not have any more prayer-meetings like that, as it might seriously interfere with the progress of the ship. We sailed away with the glory of God in our souls, and the soldiers and sailors stood on the shore shouting after us. They have wonderful lungs when they go about it. We replied with as loud voices as we could muster; and we are not very bad either, for one of the Tasmanian papers announced that we were worse than the Salvation Army; and they have remarkably good lungs, too.

We went on day by day with the peace of God in our souls. One night, a week before we got to Colombo, Mr. Millard and I were looking over the side of the ship. We were praying to God for special guidance in Ceylon, and I said to him "Milly"—that is how he is known in the Mission party—"the Lord has told me to bring on from Ceylon Mr. Campbell, Mr. Horan, "Jacky" (Mr. Jackson), and David. "Well," said he, "if you bring on any one these are the four names." So day by day we prayed, "Oh, Lord, is it thy will that we should bring them on?" It is a serious thing to add four to your family at one step. We had no special money for the supply of their needs, but we knew that money is nothing with the Lord. We reached Colombo, and I believed it God's will that they should go. We had a fortnight in Ceylon, and we spent the greater part of it in prayer to be perfectly certain of God's will. If you start out in faith you must be as certain as daylight about God's will. And you must be able from the voice of Satan. That can be done; and I can tell you we had it in Ceylon. We were staying at a house a little distance out of Colombo that a friend very kindly put at our disposal, and there we gathered to wait on God in prayer. One day Mr. Millard and Mr. Campbell were there praying. They said nothing to me about it. They prayed: "Now, Lord, we will put Thee to the test; wilt Thou send up into this room those who are to go to Australia, and only those." They waited. The door opened, and Mr. Jackson went in and knelt with the other two. Mr. Horan was at his tea, but somehow he thought to himself, "I must go up," so he left his tea and went upstairs, and went into the room and knelt down with the others. I also was downstairs, and I said to myself, "I will go up and have a little prayer." I went into the room and found these friends there before me. But where was David; was he to come or not? He was at the time in Colombo, five miles away. He knew nothing about the prayer in the upper room. We had asked the Lord to bring all those who were to go. As David was walking along the street of Colombo he lifted up his heart to God and said: "Where am I to go now, and what am I to do?" The Lord told him to take a carriage and drive out to Dellagama House at once. David got into a conveyance and drove out. He appeared with his black face all shining with glory. Now we were certain that David was to go with us to Australia. So we sailed, and arrived at Melbourne.

We were cordially received there by the Bishop, the Dean, Mr. Macartney, and other of the clergymen in Melbourne. Several English churches were thrown open for the Mission. The friends said to us: "How are the expenses of the Mission to be met? Will you have collections at the close of each Mission?" "No; the Lord has told us not to have any collections." "What will you do then?" "Oh, we will trust that the money will be supplied by those who have received blessing in their souls; or the Lord can send it from Kamschatka." "The expenses will be considerable." "Yes, I know they will; but, all the same, we will trust the Lord and go forward." So these good men agreed to offer the prayer of faith, and not to bother their congregations about any collections.

SOULS SAVED IN A CATHEDRAL.

We had missions in various parts of Melbourne and in the suburbs of Kew, Caulfield, &c. Then we went on from mission to mission in Melbourne; but perhaps I may take you at once to the cathedral mission. The Bishop granted us the cathedral for two Sundays and the intervening days. It holds about two thousand people, and well packed it was. The people were so anxious to be present that they came two hours and a-half before the time. One night the traffic manager came to me and said the streets were blocked. There were scores of conversions in the cathedral, though some people thought the building ought to be consecrated again after the mission. Perhaps they were right, perhaps they were wrong; I only hope the Lord will consecrate all the cathedrals in England in the same way, by making them give out streams of salvation to the thousands around, dying in their misery and pitiful iniquity. Oh God! let not Satan reign in the cathedrals of England. Well, the Lord Jesus Christ reigned during the Melbourne Mission. Souls stepped out—men and women—in the cathedral, and tears of penitence fell upon its tiled floors.

The thanksgiving service came. For that we took the Town Hall, which holds 4000, and thought that would be enough. We had to admit by tickets, and we found that some 10,000 people had applied. So we had to take the Exhibition building, which holds 10,000, and there we had the closing service in Melbourne. When the night came there was a great storm of thunder and rain, but notwithstanding the rain (and you know when it rains in the colonies it does rain—Keswick rain is nothing to it) about 5000 people came out. When I asked those who knew that they had received blessing in their souls during the mission to stand up, fully 3000 rose in the building. Oh God, make them like the 3000 at Pentecost!

After that we took flying excursions to Geelong, Ballarat, and Bairnsdale. In Ballarat the Bishop very kindly gave us the cathedral; we also had services in a number of churches. God was mightily with us. The secret of the blessing we had in Ballarat was the prayer-meeting we used to have in the Baptist vestry. We used to meet there and pour out our souls in a most unorthodox and noisy manner, but it brought down a blessing on the town. One of the souls blessed was a Nonconformist minister, whose soul was filled with glory. Before the Mission he used to take all the longest words in the dictionary; it was magnificent to hear him preach—splendid! But he got such a blessing that he and the glory of God flowed through his church. We owe much to him, for he took the trouble to report the Geelong Convention and the Launceston Convention, and God has given a mighty blessing to these volumes. Six thousand five hundred volumes of the Geelong Convention report were sold; and about the same number, I think, of the Launceston report.

Here is an incident that happened to our friend as he was preaching in his church one Sunday morning. God said to him at the close of the sermon, "Tell your congregation that there are six of them who have been blessed this morning." He said, "O Lord, they will think me a madman if I say that." He tried to close up the sermon without saying it, but all the power left him. The Lord asked him again to tell the people that there were six souls saved that morning, and he blurted out at the end of the service, "I know there are six of you anxious to be saved this morning." He prayed and dismissed the congregation. "Now, Lord, where are my six souls?" Well, he found five anxious, and they trusted in Jesus as the result of that sermon. A week passed, but he had not found the sixth. Two weeks, a month, two months passed; and at the end of two months the sixth person came to him and said: "Mr. ——, I am the sixth soul." "Oh, it is a wonderful thing to have real dealings with God. He does not leave you in doubt about the minutest particular. I do not believe an atom in this vague generality of faith, and I am more

"OUR WORKING GIRLS."

"It does seem so sad to think of them, pent up in hot rooms during the lovely summer weather!" So writes a sympathetic subscriber to the Holiday Fund of the Y.W.C.A., whilst herself enjoying the cool green depths of Windermere. Sad indeed it is to know that thousands of young lives are almost entirely spent within the narrow streets and vitiated atmosphere of a great city. Toiling all the year round in crowded workrooms and factories as these girls do, they surely enlist the practical sympathy of all hearts filled with the spirit of humanity—the Spirit of Jesus Christ. Their weary eyes are wistfully fixed upon us at this season, and we, in our turn, can only stretch out our hands for help, asking that our fund may again become the connecting link between the rich and poor.

Those whose lives are spent in "pleasant places" can perhaps hardly realise the intense enjoyment secured to our city girls by two or three weeks' happy freedom once a year; their delight in the rippling sea waves and moss-carpeted woods; their joyous rambles through the sunny fields; nor how, when, their brief holiday ended, and refreshed in soul and body, they resume their daily toil, happy memories of these innocent country joys cling to them still, brightening and purifying the city's gloom.

There are numbers who after six long days' monotonous toil receive but the miserable sum of eight shillings and this must be eked out for food, lodging, and clothing; not a penny can they lay aside towards the brief rest and change so sorely needed, though our Holiday Club encourages those whose earnings are rather larger to save what little they can. Our work grows from year to year, yet we are constantly meeting with toilers who cannot remember their last holiday, so far behind does it lie! We yearn to know that each of our working women receives the cheer and refreshment of a summer holiday, and to this end we earnestly plead for additional help ere the fleeting days of sunshine pass away. Gifts of money, whether small or large, will be most welcome, and we also hope that many new friends will extend their loving-kindness to our girls by invitations to their country houses, so bringing the healing of sympathy and friendship to many hearts hitherto solitary and sad. Help for the Y.W.C.A. Convalescent Sick Aid and Holiday Department should be sent to the Hon. Secretary,

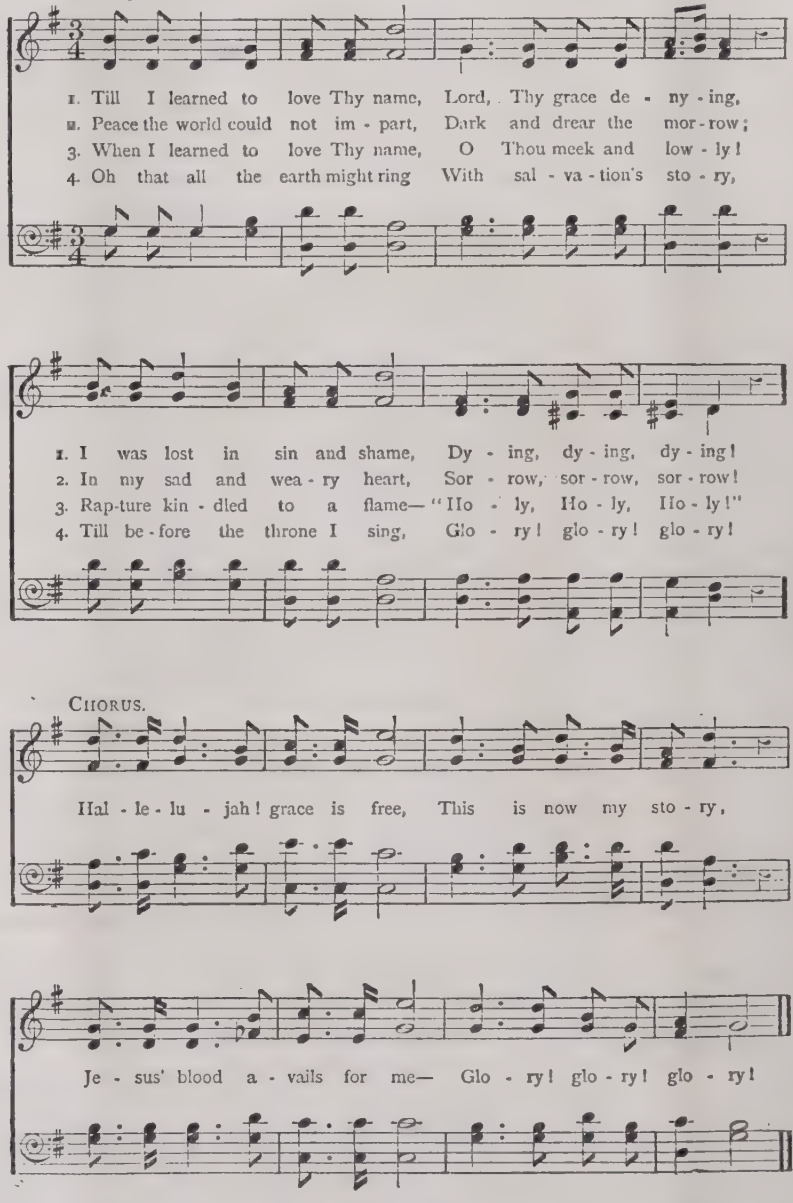
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR SOCIETY:

A TOUCHING STORY.



A most interesting meeting on behalf of the S.C.E. was held in the Congregational Church, Keswick, on Thursday of Convention week, presided over by the pastor, Rev. W. J. Bain. The addresses were of a very encouraging and useful character, but we are unable to find space for a detailed report. We cannot, however, withhold the following touching incident, which was related at the meeting:

A minister, evidently whole-hearted, enthusiastic, and successful in Christian work, had come to Keswick seeking closer fellowship with God, and the fulness of the Spirit. The previous night he had gone to his room and told the Lord that he must give up his work unless He would give him the blessing that he needed. Vividly as an audible voice the reply came, "You must not give up your work." "Then, Lord, give me this blessing." The voice said, "Claim it," and he did. Then the Lord said, "Take it." "I do take it." "You must thank Me for it." It was the most difficult of all—to give thanks for something which seemed impalpable. But he gave thanks, and then rest and peace and joy filled and satisfied his spirit. Once more the word came, "This blessing is in answer to the prayers of the young people at home." This assurance was very sweet to him; he had asked them pray for him. The first thing in the morni he wired to ask the secretary of the C.E. if th had been praying for anything special on t previous night, and the return telegram repli that they had been praying that he might filled with the Spirit.

REFORMATION IS NOT REGENERATION.—Nothing less than creative power can be equal to a new creation. For the highest success in any true work for God and man, the Spirit of God is a necessity.—Dr. A. T. Pierson.

MRS. BAEYERTZ commenced on Sunday her Notting Hill Mission, making the most favourable impression, the West London Tabernacle being nearly full in the evening. On Monday, the afternoon Bible reading was well attended considering it was Bank Holiday, while the Gospel meeting in the evening was most encouraging. Mrs. Baeyertz's addresses have so far been greatly enjoyed as spiritual, helpful, evangelical, and sound in every way. Already there have been interesting tokens of fruit. The mission is intended to go on till Wednesday next.

MISSIONARY BISHOP OF EASTERN EQUATORIAL AFRICA.

THE welcome accorded, at last year's Keswick Convention, to the missionary Bishop of Eastern Equatorial Africa, will be fresh in many minds, while his burning words—uttered, as he himself said, as the mouthpiece of twenty millions, from whom rang the cry, "Carest thou not that we perish?"—still echo in hearts not a few. Doubtless, during the past week, many privileged again to meet in happy conference have thought prayerfully and sympathetically of him who, while they have been renewing the sweet fellowship of Keswick, is once more in the forefront of the battle, face to face with the cares of an arduous undertaking, and the added anxieties and perplexities of the present crisis in Uganda.

ALFRED ROBERT TUCKER, who comes of an old Westmoreland family, was brought up in the Lake District. He is now a little over forty years of age; and, before his mind was directed to the ministry, he attained some eminence as an artist, several of his pictures having been hung in the Royal Academy. He himself has stated that his thoughts were first turned to Christian service by observing the spiritual destitution in the dales where his early years were spent. As opportunity arose, he sought to labour for those around him, and by-and-by felt definitely called to the ministry. At that time a brilliant career as an artist seemed open before him; but, once he realised the higher call, he gladly surrendered what others might have deemed a more attractive prospect.

He graduated at Christ Church, Oxford, taking his B.A. in 1882; and it is told how, while at Oxford, he gave himself to open-air preaching and personal effort amongst his fellow-undergraduates. Ordained in 1882 to the curacy of St. Andrew-the-Less, Clifton, he enjoyed for some time the privilege of working under a spiritually-minded man, Rev. E. P. Hathaway. After three years of earnest service, he removed, in 1885, to St. Nicholas, Durham, where he remained five years as a fellow-worker with Rev. H. E. Fox. Probably (under God) much of his zeal for and devotion to foreign missions is due to this association with the Vicar of St. Nicholas, inasmuch as Mr. Fox is intensely in earnest on the subject of missions, and anyone in close contact with him is likely to catch something of his enthusiasm.

During these eight years of busy parish work it is stated that Mr. Tucker's heart often turned to the foreign field, and particularly to Central Africa, and he kept himself well informed of the history of the Uganda Mission; but so far the door had seemed closed. Meanwhile, in consequence of Bishop Parker's death, the executive of the Church Missionary Society were looking out for a successor, and it is recorded that Mr. Tucker had been suggested as possessing the peculiar gifts required for the post. Certain difficulties, however, presented themselves—as, for example, that it was unprecedented that a curate should be raised to a bishopric; while, further, Mr. Tucker was married, and, in view of the deaths of Bishops Hannington and Parker, it had been intended that the new bishop should be unmarried. So the matter dropped, and no communication was made to Mr. Tucker on the subject.

But the Lord has his own ways of working, and early in 1890 Mr. Tucker was led to offer himself to the Church Missionary Society for the mission-field in East Africa. He felt, he said, that the call had come, and he and his young wife were ready to obey. This offer was, of course, for simple service as a missionary, but the committee felt that the Lord's hand was in it, that here was the right man for the vacant bishopric. From all they had learned, they judged that Mr. Tucker possessed the special qualifications necessary for such a responsible post. When informed of the charge they wished him to undertake, he felt time was required to consider and pray over such a serious matter. In due course, however, he intimated his willingness to accept; his name was submitted to the Archbishop of Canterbury, who, approving of the choice, nominated him, and he was consecrated on April 25, 1890. Within six hours after the consecration service at Lambeth he was en route for Zanzibar. In the course of a farewell sermon in St. Nicholas Church, Durham, the new Bishop said:—

> The call which came to me seemed irresistible, and it was mine simply to obey. Words fail me utterly to give expression to what I feel as to the responsibility laid upon me, as to the glorious privilege which is mine, and as to my own utter unworthiness to take part in such sacred work, such high and holy service. When the possibility of it first came before me, I could but lie down in the dust and cry out, "What am I that I should touch such work?" But, thank God, the blessed Saviour came and whispered those gracious words, "Fear not, thou trembling one, trembling with a sense of thy own unworthiness: I will make my grace sufficient for thee." And so cheered and lifted up, called with such a call, energised with such a blessed hope, I desire to go forth to this work to which God has been pleased to call me.

Arriving at Zanzibar on May 14, weak and ill through accidental poisoning on board the steamer, Bishop Tucker was startled by the news that Mr. Cotter, one of the party preceding him, had died that morning, and his first duty was to take sorrowful part in the funeral. Next he had a telegram announcing the despatch of the "Emergency Party," a band of four, who, in response to an urgent telegram from Mr. Hooper, had started, at four days' notice, to reinforce the Mission. These soon reached Zanzibar; but alas! in July one of them, Mr. Hill, died at Saadani; while, a few months after, another of the party, Mr. Dunn, also passed away. The Bishop, who had suffered sorely on the long journey to the interior from fever and ophthalmia, reached Uganda on December 27, 1890, the first of the three bishops to enter M'wanga's capital. The very next day being Sunday, Bishop Tucker addressed a thousand native Christians in the church they had themselves built.

Miss Sarah G. Stock, in her deeply-interesting book, THE STORY OF UGANDA,* describes the Bishop's care to lay the foundations of a native ministry by setting apart six young men as evangelists, tells of the eagerness of the Baganda to secure the Swahili Testaments, of which a small edition had been brought by the new-comers, and recalls how the Bishop dealt with misunderstandings between Protestants and Romanists. As to his return last year, the author says:—

> The Christians provided Bishop Tucker with the necessary supplies during his sojourn amongst them, and would have been only too glad to keep him longer. But he and his brethren felt that the right course was for him to proceed home to England at once, to relate what he had seen, and bring out fresh labourers to occupy the fields for work opening on all sides. Accordingly, on January 22, 1891, he and Mr. Hooper bade farewell to the missionary band, and to the warmhearted converts, many of whom accompanied him some way along the road to the lake. Their last morning on the shores of Uganda must be described in the Bishop's own words.
> "We were astir before sunrise. The purple flush of the dawn was brightening when there came, on the stillness of the morning air, a sound which stirred our souls to the very depth. What was it? From some little distance, from a native hut which we could see but dimly in the half-light, there came a voice from one pleading with God in prayer, then came the response, then once more all was still. What was the meaning of it? These were the voices of Christian men and women engaged before sunrise in family worship. They were men and women who only a few years ago were living in all the darkness of heathendom. Could we, as we stood there on the Uganda shore for the last time, could we have had a more touching proof of God's work of grace in the hearts of the people, and of the power of the everlasting Gospel to change men's minds, turning them from darkness to light, from the power of sin and Satan unto God?"

Bishop Tucker reached England on May 23, 1891, but before his arrival some of the reinforcements he had come to ask for had already started for Africa. Mr. Ashe had set out for his former field of labour, with a party of others. . . . One of these had, like Cotter and Hill, to lay down his sword at the very outset. Rev. G. H. V. Greaves died at Zanzibar just a month after reaching Africa.

How last year Bishop Tucker was welcomed on June 2, and how he pleaded the cause of Uganda in Exeter Hall, at Keswick, and in many parts of the country, must be fresh in the minds of all our readers. On December 4, he started once more for his field of labour, taking with him seven fresh missionaries, in addition to six who had previously gone forth. At his farewell meeting great enthusiasm was aroused, and some £3000 was raised, in response to an appeal by friends of the Society, for a special fund to prevent the withdrawal of the British East Africa Company from Uganda.

Since reaching Zanzibar, the Bishop has been pushing his way to the great lake. How he has been affected by the recent fighting at Uganda remains to be made known; and many await with interest letters from him which may throw more light on these troubles and on their issue as regards the missionaries.

FROM A VETERAN MISSIONARY.

By the Lord's protecting care, my dear wife and myself have been spared to the time of old age. The threescore and ten have long been past. Infirmities are increasing, and no wonder; but we have very much to fill our hearts with love and praise. The kindness of the Lord is, indeed, very great in his dealings with us. We are still permitted to live in the midst of a great, a glorious work. Many precious souls are brought to our Redeemer's feet on this station. Earnest calls are made by people in different parts of the country, and as far as our resources will allow out-stations are being planted and supplied with native teachers.

My son is at the head of a large boarding institution for youths, and he is greatly encouraged in his work. Every year there is an increase in the number of the pupils, but we are obliged to refuse many applications from the insufficiency of room. There are at present eighty-four young men; if only our accommodations permitted, we might have a hundred. Each year, several of the pupils present themselves for the Government examination to obtain teachers' certificates, and a fair proportion pass.

In another building on the station there is another boarding institution for young men who desire a religious training, and are too old to prepare for the course followed in this upper school; that school also gives great encouragement to Mr. Mabille (the missionary). At present, there are fifty-five young men being trained there, many of whom come from distant tribes, and will return to carry light and knowledge to their country. I am truly thankful that before my departure for my home above I am permitted to see such blessed progress made.

It must not, however, be thought that heathenism has disappeared from the land. Alas! no; many, many thousands are still in gross darkness. But He who has done such great things by his servants will continue to work, and in answer to the prayer of faith we may yet expect more glorious results.

I may add that a boarding-school for girls is in active operation at Thaba Bosio, under the direction of our missionary, Mr. Foccottet, assisted by two young ladies in this school. There are at present thirty pupils, and the work is most encouraging. Our industrial institution at Kuiting is also giving us much satisfaction, different trades are there taught to twenty-two young men. In our printing office at Morija, thirteen young men are constantly employed printing or bookbinding.

May the Lord continue to prosper all the blessed works in which you are engaged. The Christian is ever a source of joy to us.

MELBOURNE NOTES.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union has, during the past year, done much good in Victoria. The Secretary, Mrs. M. E. Kirk, and the members have formed branches in many of our inland townships, and have influenced the colony throughout for good. Recently, the Union welcomed two prominent members of the World's Women's Christian Temperance Union from America, Dr. Kate Bushnell and Mrs. Andrew, M.A. These ladies are holding meetings in Melbourne and the provincial towns with marked success.

The Christian Endeavour Movement has made rapid progress in Australia, and numbers of associations have come into existence during the past twelve months, and their influence has been markedly felt in the Church. Indeed, so powerful has the movement become that older societies have begun to consider whether some of its methods might not with advantage be introduced into their own constitution. One very practical work in which the Endeavourers have engaged is the visitation of many who are suffering sadly through lack of work. The members have carried cheer and sympathy, practical charity, and the message of salvation to many a home where the prevailing distress has helped to open the door to them.

The Victorian Sunday-school Union held its meetings on the Queen's Birthday, May 24th, when excellent papers were read bearing on the work of Sunday-schools and on Bible study. A special feature of the evening gathering was a model Christian Endeavour meeting conducted by Mr. J. B. Jackson.

I recollect reading, some years ago, with much interest, a series of papers in The Christian, on "The Kingdom of God." Many considered them absurd. But the truth contained in those papers is becoming better understood.

On the evening of May 27 two missionary meetings took place, not far from one another, in Melbourne. The China Inland Mission held its annual meeting at the Y.M.C.A., under the presidency of Hon. James Campbell, M.S.A. Rev. Alfred Bird, of Hawthorn, is the enthusiastic secretary to the Australian branch of this grand enterprise. There are now no fewer than thirty missionaries from Australia settled in Chinese towns, and preaching the Gospel to the natives of the flowery land.

The other gathering was a representative one. About seventy delegates of the Presbyterian Fellowship Union, at the invitation of the President, Mr. Robert Gillespie, J.P., assembled to hear from their missionary to Corea, Rev. J. H. Mackay, who had returned from his field of labour invalided. The history of this mission, so far, has been a somewhat sad one; alas! like the foundation of so many missions. The first missionary sent out by this Union was the Rev. J. H. Davies, who was accompanied to the mission field by his sister. Mr. Davies was carried off by small-pox a few months after landing in Corea. He was absent on a tour of inspection at the time, and his sister at home was also prostrated with illness, and unable to go to him. Rev. J. H. Mackay, of Ballarat, volunteered for the service, and married a devoted Christian lady, specially qualified by hospital training for active useful mission work. She has been removed by the stroke of death a few months after landing at Corea, and some time after, Mr. Mackay himself became so seriously ill as to be obliged to return to this colony. He has recruited, and is about to start off again to his work, and will probably be joined at Corea by a young medical man, who has already done good service in that country. There are several ladies on the field who are supported by the Victorian Presbyterian Ladies' Mission.

The Countess of Meath, during a recent visit to these Colonies, was very active in her endeavour to form a league of the children in these lands, who should carry out the same objects as the Ministering Children's League in the mother country. Beginnings were made in several centres, and the organising secretary for Victoria, Mrs. Ormond, of Toorak, has now her hands full in carrying on the work and supplying information to those anxious to establish local branches of this interesting league.

IN THE AUSTRIAN ALPS.

As you have from time to time inserted in The Christian notices of our work amongst the scattered Protestants of the Austrian Alps, and many have sent us aid in various forms, perhaps you will allow me to tell your readers that my husband is now spending a short time in England and would be very thankful for opportunities—either public or private—to bring before the notice of prayerful believers the sadly neglected condition of many hundreds and thousands of our "brethren in the faith" in this Catholic country.

An Austrian lady wrote us a few days since as follows in reference to my husband's itinerating work in Syria, Carinthia, Duchy of Salzburg, the Tyrol, and Vorarlberg:—"You will soon be starting on your wanderings, and I want to send you a line expressing my earnest desire for much blessing on this dear and precious work. I am so full of thankfulness that the Lord has sent out at least one messenger to the scattered and forsaken ones. But I will never cease to pray that He may make more hearts willing and able to go out and do the work waiting for so many! Thousands are waiting for the Gospel message. Oh, that the Lord would send help!"

This sister, though an invalid, does much to strengthen our hands. My husband travels every summer, seeking out those who never have an opportunity of hearing the word of life, and who live far away from any church or pastor or Protestant school. Their children have to attend Roman Catholic schools, and are frequently baptized by Catholic priests because the parents are too poor to travel two or three days' journey to the nearest Protestant pastor. They are most thankful for visits, Bible-readings, tracts, scriptures, &c.

Our Bible Nurse has just moved into a small cottage with six convalescents. Besides the care of these she visits the Protestant sick in their homes. We are hoping for more accommodation so as to receive more serious cases. Just now a poor and homeless Protestant woman, whose sad disease prevents our taking her into our limited space, is suffering much persecution at the hands of the nuns in the public hospital. Will you pray that she may be kept firm? Our Young Girls' Home, for servants and others out of place, is now in operation, and our Bible-readings are being carried on during my husband's absence by his young German assistant.

After the Keswick Convention my husband will be at liberty to accept invitations, either for drawing-room or public meetings. He will probably be in the North of England and in Scotland during the first week of August, and during the second week in the West (Herefordshire, Bristol, and Bath). Letters addressed to him at the German Home, 28, Finsbury-square, London, E.C., will be forwarded. M. A. Reinmuth.

HOP-PICKERS, ALTON.—The season is close on us; very soon the pickers will be here. We are most anxious to erect the same number of tents as last year, but are not as yet in a position. All our six tents were full last season, together with a vast house. Many evidences were given of deep impressions and decision for Christ. Will the Lord's people aid us to carry on similar work during this season?

BODILY HEALING THROUGH FAITH.

I will run on to Bairnsdale. This was two undred miles from Melbourne in Gippsland. At he archdeaconry of our friend Archdeacon angley, we had a glorious outpouring of the loly Ghost. (Mr. Grubb did not enter into articulars as to the work here, but read extracts rom a letter from a clergyman there, telling of mission he had conducted for a brother clergyman where there was much blessing, and many estifying to salvation. He told of a lay reader ho had given up his charge to superintend a ible carriage. The letter gave a case of faith-ealing of bodily ailment which, said Mr. Grubb, as only one of a number that had occurred in heir experience. It was a young girl who was aralysed and suffering from internal injury. he had been helpless for five months, and was iven up by the medical men, who were agreed hat she was sinking fast. She received pardon rom Jesus, and then she was led to pray and rust for healing. She trusted the Lord on ebruary 29, got up out of bed, walked to the oor, asked the matron for her clothes, and was ealed instantly both of the paralysis and the ffect of her injury. She has been in perfect ealth ever since, and is giving glory to od.)

There were other instances. We had some among he mission party. One was at Bairnsdale. You ay think it a little thing to mention, but God teaching us to trust Him like little children. Irs. Millard got a terrible abscess in her mouth, nd for four days suffered great agony, so that he could not take any of the ladies' meetings. ll in the town knew that she was so ill. Without seeking much guidance from the Lord, I uppose, potion after potion was applied, but he trouble only got worse. On the fourth day e met for prayer. "O Lord, why is our sister ike this? It seems to us so necessary that she hould take this meeting for ladies; heal her, ord." As we were praying, the Lord said to Mr. illard: "Take that saucepan off the fire." You ay be inclined to smile, but listen. In that aucepan there were the materials for her ealing, but it was borne in upon him that we hould trust the Lord only. He rose at once rom his knees and took off the saucepan; and here and then Mrs. Millard was healed and she ook the meeting. You may say what you like bout it, but that is the case

AS SURE AS YOU SIT THERE.

When we were at Sydney, Mrs. Jackson's oung brother (for Mr. Jackson was married at ydney) fell from a tree and cracked his skull. he doctor said the case seemed hopeless. If they erformed an operation perhaps he might recover, but even then he might be a helpless idiot for he rest of his life. Mr. Millard and Mr. Jackson ent to the mother and said that not a knife was o touch her son, as they had been praying about , and God had given them the assurance that e would be healed perfectly. The doctors ame for four or five days in succession without erforming the operation. Each time they said ey would wait. The doctor came one morning nd said the lad was wonderfully improved. "Yes," said the little fellow, "we have asked Jesus to make me well, and He has done it." hat child is now in perfect health and at school t his studies.

Why do I tell you this? Because the Church f God looks upon these things as almost reater miracles than soul miracles. I do not hink they are. We are so unbelieving about utward things. I believe my Lord Jesus has not hanged in his power towards the body. Our aith towards Him has changed. There has been change in nineteenth-century faith, and the hildlike spirit of taking Jesus at his word. hat is the reason why we see signs and wonders o more. It is no use your saying the age of miracles is past. The age of doubt has come—hat is the reason. I know my Lord is a miracle-worker. He alone can do wonders in the soul, nd I praise Him. But my trust in God or the healing of the body, and the committing of all disease to Him, is six times stronger than it was two years ago. When I spoke here before, some of the Christians in Keswick were kind enough to say they thought a little rest would do me good, because any man who talked about faith-healing was rather close to lunacy. So now I repeat what I said before with greater emphasis. To the praise of the glory of God's wondrous grace we desire to testify that He has kept us in perfect health since we saw you last.

THE GEELONG CONVENTION.

Now a word as to the Geelong Convention. Oh, you say, now you are coming to something. Well, the Geelong Convention was born in prayer. Some of the clergy in Melbourne used to meet for an all-night of prayer. Fancy clergymen doing that. It is bad enough in all conscience for the Salvation Army; but for respectable clergy to do it, that was something wonderful. When we heard of it we began to think there was something coming. The outcome was the mission in Melbourne and the Geelong Convention. Each of these stirred up the Christians, and also stirred up the wrath of the enemy to a wonderful extent. If ever there is a Holy Ghost work done there will be a devil work done too. Satan will always try to counterfeit the true work of the Holy Ghost. Now when God is opening the eyes of the Church to prayer and faith for healing, Satan is trying to counterfeit it by the ridiculous Boston Mind-cure and so-called Christian Science. He has counterfeit holiness for true holiness; everything he counterfeits as an angel of light.

The Geelong Convention came, and truly our God was with us there. I have no time to tell of the shout of a king in the camp; of how heaven came down, and Christ set his covenant seal on the gathering of his people. A great deal of wonder was excited through the whole of Australia by the report of the missionary meeting. I saw it had been telegraphed to London, and by some strange mystery my name and General Booth's got mixed up. I do not know whether there is any likeness between us. I do not know how it happened, but I wish to say that General Booth was not at Geelong, and had nothing to do with the missionary meeting.

At the meeting our revered father, Mr. John Watsford, the grand old Wesleyan missionary, one of the first in Fiji, spoke, and as he unburdened his soul the whole of the six hundred Christians were melted into weeping for the state of the heathen. How I would like to see a flood of tears go through this tent—not sentimental, but real tears—for the hundreds of millions without God and without hope in the world. Just as I was about to pronounce the benediction, the Lord seemed to say to me: "Do not close the meeting; wait, wait." And I waited. Just at that moment a little bit of paper was handed up to the platform. I opened it, and found two pounds for the China Inland Mission from a lady. As the chairman, I was in duty bound to announce it. I said, "A lady has sent in two pounds for the China Inland Mission." From that time onward a ceaseless stream of gifts came up until there was about the value of £1100 given and promised. One lady and gentleman said they would support a missionary in China; they offered £120 yearly for that. Any number of gold watches were given, till I had a little pile of them, and I had to say that I would require the assistance of a pony and cart to take them away. Quite a pile of jewellery was given. And, just fancy, an archdeacon took his archdiaconal ring off his finger and put it on the table! His fingers were empty and unadorned, but he got his soul blessed in a way he had never known before; and when he went back home he was considered just as bad as the Grubb lunatics in his own parish, and souls are being saved all over that part of the country. One or two gentlemen laid plots of land at the feet of the Lord. They said they would give so much frontage for house building, or so many acres of land; so it was a real reproduction of the days when people brought houses and lands and possessions and laid them at the feet of Jesus; and great grace was upon them all, for they had all things common. That money is being made use of to-day, and there are missionaries now in the field as the result of the Geelong Convention.

But it did stir up the wrath of the enemy. The Melbourne papers and other papers had a report of the proceedings. One Melbourne paper said: "Mr. Grubb, to his many other accomplishments, has added a knowledge of hypnotism, wherewith he hypnotises his congregations, and then he fleeces the money out of them!" One clergyman—there are some curious clergymen in the world—wrote to me: "Dear Sir,—I would like you to conduct a mission in my parish. My church is in debt, and I hear you are very good at getting money out of the people. I hope you will come quickly and conduct a mission!" I gave that clergyman "a suitable reply." It appears missions can be held for various purposes.

MR. BIDLAKE'S DEBT.

About this time our brother, Mr. Bidlake, joined the Mission party. He will excuse me if I say one word about him, though he is in the tent and his beloved father too. Mr. Bidlake, after some years of wandering from Jesus—yes, I dare not hide it—in a very terrible way, came back to God during the Melbourne Mission, and through God speaking to him in the silence of his own soul. We are very plain with one another, and do not varnish one another over. That you may understand what a blessing it was that Mr. Bidlake got in his soul, let me tell you what an old friend of his, a Roman Catholic, said to him on the Sydney platform. "Well, Bidlake, I am glad to see you, old fellow. With all due respect to the Bible, I never quite believed in the conversion of the Apostle Paul, but since I have seen you I do believe it." I say no more than that; but I am sure there is one thing he would like me to mention. He said to us when it came home to our mind that God wanted him to join the Mission party, "I never can do it." "Why?" Because I am £300 in debt through my betting and other things. God wants me to pay off that debt, and I will have to stop in business for the rest of my life and pay it off." I said: "Let us ask the Lord to send £300 to pay your debt. If God wants you for his work He will pay your debt off very soon. I won't have anything to do in this Mission with any man who is in debt." So we prayed. Some days after, a cheque for £50 arrived, and from that day to this we have not been able to find out who sent it. Some time after, a cheque arrived for £250; and so the debt was paid. It was addressed to Mr. Bidlake, and inside was written "The Lord's Release." In saying this I am not trespassing upon private feelings, and he would be one of the first to tell you if he had the opportunity.

He came on with us to Sydney, and some of the grandest souls brought to the knowledge of Jesus through the Sydney Mission were converted through Herbert Bidlake's testimony to the instantaneous power of the cleansing of God in his heart. One man can scarcely speak for another, but I do say this, that God instantaneously delivered Bidlake from the power of old sins, and it was through praying for the blessing of a clean heart that he got this power. I also wish to say that most of the earnest young fellows in Melbourne, Sydney, Tasmania, and New Zealand, who are on fire for God, are those who trusted the Lord Jesus for the definite cleansing of their inner being from the defilement and enthralment of sin and corruption, as they asked to be brought under the power of the Lord the Holy Ghost. They are those whose testimony is most blessed through the colonies.

TRUSTING FOR PERSONAL NEEDS.

At Sydney we were joyfully received. A number of the clergy threw open their churches to us, and their hearts too. The Melbourne people added their prayers to those at Sydney, and there was a flood of blessing sweeping everything before it. I am sure the prayers of Keswick were not behind. God told us to trust Him still more in Sydney, and especially for personal needs. Let me give you one or two examples. Perhaps I ought to tell you we were not always very flush of cash. For instance, at one place we had not enough money to pay for our tickets back to Melbourne. There were seven of us, and it was nearly two hundred miles. We would have been willing to walk, but we did not quite think that was the Lord's will. So we had a prayer meeting. "O Lord, we have only a few pounds left, so please send us some money." That afternoon, as Mr. Campbell was going along the street a gentleman touched him, and said, "Give that to Mr. Grubb, please." He looked at it and it was ten pounds. Next morning brought a letter in which there was a cheque for £100. When I got back to Caulfield I found £35 more. One day we would be down to sixpence, and another day we would be up to £300. Oh, it is lovely to trust the Lord for money. And I may tell you that my income during the mission was £3500. I got it all, and I spent it all; for we believe in having no balances over.

When we were in Sydney we were rather down again in pocket, so we had a little prayer-meeting. At that time we wanted to send four missionaries to Ceylon. David also had it laid on his heart to return with them to Ceylon. What about the money? We wanted £125, and we prayed for that in the morning. In the afternoon a letter arrived from England containing £100. There was the temptation to spend it on our own immediate needs; but we all agreed that we ought to give it to the missionaries. So we gave it to Mr. Bidlake, who was the manager of a bank before he joined the party. He went down to the office of the ship, and although the price of the tickets was £125, the man, without any pressing, took off twenty per cent; so the £100 paid for them exactly. The Lord knew all about the discount, so He only sent us the £100. Off they sailed for Ceylon, with their souls rejoicing in God; and they have been working there and praising Him ever since.

MORE ABOUT SYDNEY.

Well, a few more things about Sydney. The blessing among the young men there was very remarkable. I will tell you what one family did. I remember getting a great blessing from Mr. Moody eighteen years ago, when he urged us to lay hold upon one soul and keep hold of that soul, and stick to him till you have got him saved. There was one family in Sydney greatly blessed. They had a lot of friends and relations living in the country, three or four hundred miles off. They used to get them down to Sydney one at a time, and led them as sheep to the slaughter. As soon as the one that came down got converted, he was sent back by the next train. He would bring down another, who got converted in turn, and returned to bring down another. And really they have turned out to be some of the best cases of conversion. There was a young man, well known in Australia as a great athlete, a football player, and betting man. He was converted at the Mission, and after that he used still to carry his betting-book about with him. When he met any of the fraternity he would say: "What have you got on to-day?"—meaning, "What good tip have you for the races to-day?" Then he would say: "Look here, this is the tip, 'God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son.'" He would get a fresh verse every day from the Lord before he went out, and the business fellows got to know very soon what sort of tips he had. Oh, that you Christians would get "the straight tip" for the heavenly race. Some of you are running very crookedly, I fear. The Lord teach us to run straight.

It would take me too long to tell you about Paramatta, but there was a most wonderful blessing there, and they have been holding open-air meetings ever since. With regard to Sydney, I might add that the Christian young men there are known by carrying their Bibles with them. Instead of reading novels in their morning ride, these earnest young fellows have their Bibles, and may be seen reading, talking, and praising God. Mr. Millard had a letter from one of the officers of the General Post Office in Sydney, stating that since the Mission Bibles are as common in the Post-office as racing-cards were before. Another consequence of the Mission has been an immense sale of Bibles. I really think the booksellers ought to have given me a percentage on them, but they didn't. In one shop in Sydney alone they told me they had sold between three hundred and four hundred pounds' worth of Bibles. And the other shops were in proportion. They had to get a cargo of Bibles from England. The same thing in a degree happened in Melbourne, in Launceston, Hobart, and throughout the Colonies.

I may also say that God greatly blessed the publishing department of the Mission. He allowed me to bring out a second edition of some sermons I preached in Sydney; three thousand copies were printed. We did not think it right to charge for anything at the meetings, and we gave away 120,000 hymn-books in different parts of the Colonies to those who came to the Missions.

JEWS CONVERTED.

God mightily blessed the work at Goulbourn. The Bishop asked us to go there. Since then the dear old man has gone to his rest after faithful service. There was a Jew converted there. Mr. Millard was speaking in the open air, and he was led to speak specially about the divinity of Jesus. This Jew was an interested listener, and Mr. Millard met him in the church when the open-air meeting was over. I was preaching on Zaccheus. One would scarcely think that a very good text for a sermon to a Jew, but there and then he opened his heart to Jesus. When the sermon closed he said, "I receive Jesus as my Messiah." Here is a letter I have received from Pastor Soltau, of Launceston, Tasmania, telling me of the result of a mission there. It is a glorious testimony. Mr. Soltau says:—

"We had during the mission one glorious case that I must tell you about. For some weeks a young Russian refugee Jew had been hanging about our meetings; a very pious fellow, well read in the Talmud, but not well read in the Scripture. He was well able to hold his own against all comers; when our young fellows tackled him, he quietly asked for proof that Jesus was the Messiah, and they did not know how to answer him. He came regularly to improve his knowledge of English, and was interested. One Sunday evening he came to ask of me the favour of a Bible in English 'which had those little things down the sides, so that when you are reading one chapter you could find out some other verses about the same subject in another part of the book.' I gave him a large-type reference Bible, which he wrapped up carefully in a handkerchief and took away to study. A month passed and I had no opportunity of talking closely with him afterwards, only to see him amongst others at the meetings.

"One Monday evening it was wet, and we had not more than seventy out, so I closed up the service earlier than usual, and as I had been speaking on the Day of Pentecost, I asked all who were desirous to know more of this experimentally, to stay for half-an-hour of prayer, and to gather up round me. The majority did so, and the last to move up and sit down by me was J——. I was surprised, for I thought he could not have understood much about the matter of the outpouring of the Spirit. We got to prayer in a few minutes, and after two or three had prayed, I was amazed to hear J—— beginning, in a Hebrew drawl, to pray; very solemnly he went on, till he broke out into English: 'Oh! God of my father Abraham, God of my father Isaac, God of my father Jacob, Thou knowest how long I have been seeking the light, and have prayed and prayed that I might have the true light to guide my wandering feet. O God, I got a Bible here a little while ago, and I have been reading it; and Thou knowest, Lord, how the other evening I was for a long time reading it and praying for light, for I wanted to know if it was true what I heard them saying all around me. And then I went to bed, but I could not sleep, and had to get out of bed and go on my knees again and cry to Thee for the light. And now, O Lord God, I thank Thee with all my heart, that whilst I was reading the 9th of Daniel, and the 26th verse, the light shone in, for there I read that Messiah was to be cut off, but not for Himself, that our city was to be taken and destroyed, and that we were to be for many days without priests, and without a king, and without a sacrifice, and without a home. And it is all quite true; it has been true a long time; and so, Lord, the other part must be true as well; and Jesus was cut off, so He must be the Messiah. And now I confess that Jesus is the Lord Christ, my Messiah and my Saviour; and, O God of my father Abraham, I thank thee that this night I know I am saved; and I am one of the lost sheep of the house of Israel whom Jesus came to seek and to save, and I am so happy.'

"This was the burden of his prayer, and it was thrilling to hear him in his broken English. It seemed as if heaven were opened over our heads, so real seemed the presence of the Lord through the Holy Spirit. He has steadily grown since in knowledge. A curious thing about him is that he does not bring his English Bible with him to the meetings, but brings his Hebrew Bible. Reading out in Hebrew, he translates to us in broken English, and expounds as he goes. His face lights up as he makes new discoveries of the prophecies of Christ in the Old Testament, and explains them to us."

Having spoken for over an hour, Mr. Grubb said he would have to draw to a close. Time would not permit him to refer to the missions at Nelson, Wellington, Hobart, and many other places. He related the following lively incident about a Church Missionary Society man in New Zealand. One day he went into a book shop, and had offered to him: "What God hath Wrought," by Mr. E. C. Millard.* Said Mr. Grubb, jokingly, I do not think I can have any fellowship with the man who has not read that book. If you want to get a blessing, read it. I wish to say the Lord is circulating some five or six thousand copies of it. A second edition has been called for, and is printed. Well, the bookseller said to Mr.——"This will suit you." The missionary bought it, and began to read it; and as he read, the conviction laid hold of his soul that he had never received the baptism of the Holy Ghost for service. He was accustomed to preach regularly, and he systematically wrote out every word painfully. he preached Sunday after Sunday from manuscript, but there was very little blessing with it. After having read "What God hath Wrought," he went to his bedroom, and fell down before God, and said: "Oh, God, I must get a real blessing; I cannot go on like this." And God blessed his soul. One or two Sundays after that he had to go and take part in a Maori service. The missionary clergyman was absent, and his heart almost rose into his mouth, as he had brought his manuscript, and he had to take the whole service. "Now, Lord, is the time for proving Thee." He stood up and began to speak as the Spirit gave him utterance. An Englishman who was present came up to him afterwards and said, "Why, Mr.——, what has come over you? You speak like a Wesleyan now!" A fountain had been opened within, and the rivers of living water were flowing out. No pumping effort, no hydraulic pressure, was needed now. It flowed out calmly and beautifully, and the people felt that it was a message from God. Since then he has been holding missions in different parts of New Zealand, and his soul is filled with glory. I read that at one place where he was they had seven meetings in one day, and God gave in that one day the blessing of ten days; and showers of blessing have been covering the district ever since.

And now, in closing, let me say that we give the praise and honour and glory to the God of all grace. There is nothing in me, nothing in any member of the party in ourselves. Apart from Jesus I know that in me, that is in my flesh there dwelleth no good thing; and that any thing that has been done or said or thought that has brought glory to our Lord, has been done and said and thought because of the glory of the Holy Ghost in our souls, because of the sweetness of the presence and guidance of Jesus. Oh, that I had time to tell you about

THE GUIDANCE OF GOD.

If there is one thing that we all need to learn at Keswick, and throughout the Church, it is that we must get our eyes off circumstances. I know of no more dangerous downfall to a soul than to be guided by circumstances. The first thing is to get God's will on the subject, and if you will only wait before God you will hear his voice.

There was a young fellow converted in Sydney, and there was an infidel in his office. The infidel said to him one day: "I do not understand the way you talk. You say God told you to do this, and the devil said something else. What nonsense you talk! How can you hear the voice of God?" "Six weeks ago," said the young man, "I was like you. I was far from God, and therefore I could not hear his voice. Now I live with God, and am close to God, and therefore always hear his voice."

There are people who are in great perplexity about guidance. Get sufficiently close to God, and then you will hear his voice in the minutest matters. "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow Me." "My sheep know my voice, and a stranger will they not follow." We are powerless so long as we do not hear the voice of Jesus Christ in our souls. That is the reason why so much of our machinery is useless because we go on from year to year without hearing the guiding voice of Jesus.

When Mr. Bidlake and Mr. Horan came home via Ceylon the Lord showed us that we should go home in order to bring on David and do some work in Ceylon. When on board the ship there was an infidel joking to Mr. Horan one day, and he summed up his speech this way: "Look here, I believe that Jesus Christ was a very peculiar sort of a man, and we are waiting to see that the people should be a peculiar people, too." That was what he said, and I leave it with you. Keswick will have failed this year—I know that Keswick will not fail, but it will have failed—if it does not produce this effect of making you a peculiar people—peculiar in the holiness of your heart, in the purity of your lives, even in your dress it may be, and in your eating and drinking; peculiar in prayer alone with God; peculiar in your intense love for the Bible, and in your intense love for all the members of the Body of Christ, whether Church of England, Baptist, Wesleyan, Plymouth Brethren, or anything else; and peculiar also in your receiving the power of the Holy Ghost; that there may radiate from you beams of glory and blessing and joy, and peace, and power, and purity, that the nations see Jesus coming to catch up His saints to Himself. Oh, Lord Jesus, hasten day when all we who are one in Christ Jesus shall be caught up together in the clouds to meet thyself in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. "Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

Mr. Grubb desires us to say that the Keswick Convention was in no sense responsible for the support of the mission tour; but he wishes with thankfulness to acknowledge the receipt of £100 in March, 1891, and £200 in March, 1892, from the Keswick Convention Mission Fund. The balance of the amount expended, £3200, was sent by the Lord through other kind friends in the Colonies and England in answer to prayer.

THE FILLING OF THE HOLY GHOST,

BY DR. ELDER CUMMING.

Having read Acts viii. 5-17, Dr. Cumming said he would take the latter part of the passage as his first text. Those men spoken of were all baptized believers, but as yet the Holy Ghost, who had come at Pentecost, had fallen upon none of them. They were only baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. "Then laid they their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost." Lest it should be said that this was something special, and belonged to a church or to the opening of a great epoch in the history of the Church, I take as my second text Acts ix. 17. Three days before, Paul had been "struck down" (as they call it in times of revival) on the highway to Damascus. And there he had dealt with the Lord about his soul. He had been received of God, and had become a converted man. Before the interview was over he had asked of the Lord Jesus: "What will thou have me to do?" and had put himself at the disposal of the Lord to do what he was told. The Lord commanded him to go to Damascus, which he did. He had spent three days there in darkness, and in silence, and in prayer, and in much meditation, when this man Ananias comes, also at the command of the Lord, to visit Saul, to touch his eyes, that he might receive sight; and to do something more—lay his hands on him, that he might be filled with the Holy Ghost. This was for Saul, though he had been, to use a word once used on this platform, "tremendously converted" three days before. Now he was to receive, and he did receive, a special blessing, which the writer of the Acts, under the guidance of the Spirit of God, calls being filled with the Holy Ghost.

In connection with this I read the question at the beginning of Acts xix., where it is recorded that Paul came to Ephesus. Finding certain disciples there, he said, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" The Revised Version says, "Did ye receive the Holy Ghost when ye believed?" It seems to me a strange question if you accept the reading of the Revised Version. The Holy Ghost is the only agent in the conversion of a soul, but the words used here seem to mean much more than the mere initial act by which the soul is brought to Christ. Therefore, in every way I prefer the reading of the old version. But whatever be the rendering that one accepts it really comes to this, that a believer may be asked the question: "You have been converted; we take that for granted. But have you received the Holy Ghost at conversion or since?"

Whatever difference of opinion there might be as to some of the points that could be raised upon these passages, I think we shall be at one substantially on this point—that there is a special spiritual experience which is denoted by being filled with the Holy Ghost. Another point on which we cannot fail to agree is this, that such an experience; that there are many Christians who, while they cannot go the length of saying, "We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost," are yet constrained to say, "As for ourselves, we do not know of anything, either at our conversion or since, that answers at all to what we find in the Acts of the Apostles about the filling of the Holy Ghost. We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that there is such a blessing set down in God's Word, and that it is perhaps the thing of all most to be desired by a Christian man or woman in order that they may stand right with God, and may fulfil the will of God."

I think no one could have been present this afternoon at the missionary meeting held in this tent, without feeling that there was presented what I would call in its simple and actual meaning of what God wants his people to be in the present day, both in one's relation to God Himself, and in one's relation to God's work. I do not say that every item in a man's experience can be reproduced in any other man. Where the Spirit of God is there is liberty, and where the Spirit works there is diversity. But in all the diversity there is unity. And one Christian, though his experience in certain points may differ from another man's experience, yet understands and sympathises with, and thanks God for the experience that does not in every respect tally with his own. And I venture to say that no Christian man whose heart is true and right with God, could have been here this afternoon, could have seen and heard what was heard and seen without being profoundly thankful to God that we have still on earth a manifestation of the power of God somewhat similar to what it was in Apostolic days.

I also venture to think, Christian friends, that this Convention is no longer in the position in which it was this morning; that to-night and for the rest of its course it must perforce occupy a different place. I believe it to be as impossible to put back this Convention to where it was last night or this morning, as it would be to make the sun of to-day begin his course again as in the morning. I venture to say with all humility that if those two or three thousand people gathered here this day were all filled with the Spirit of God, or most of them, it is not possible that we could continue to live as we have lived, to work as we have worked, and to have our whole circumstances and belongings influenced so little as they have been in days gone by.

My profound conviction is that if this thing that we call the reception of the Holy Ghost (which some call the baptism of the Holy Ghost but which I prefer to call the being filled with the Spirit of God, for it is a uniting and not a dividing phrase), if this spiritual blessing became the experience of the bulk of those who are here now, and that not for a passing hour, but to be renewed as the need came from day to day and from week to week, even the world itself would feel that some change had come which could only be explained in some such way. I ask you what the descent of the Spirit of God in those early apostolic days did. First of all, there was on the part of the leaders of the Church; on the part of the Apostles of Christ. Who has not wondered at the choice Jesus made of his apostles? To me it has been a marvellous spiritual problem that when God wanted to found a church on the earth, He could find no better men than twelve peasants—for such they were almost entirely—who walked the highways, or fished in the sea of Galilee. Of these twelve men was there a single man whom you would venture from his natural gifts and qualities to rank among the world's great men? If Jesus Christ had never lived would John the son of Zebedee ever have been heard of? Would Peter the fisherman ever have emerged from the local obscurity of the neighbourhood of Galilee. Would John the Baptist ever have been a name that would have gone beyond the neighbourhood of Jerusalem? What was it that took these plain, simple men—men of the horny hand, men of the daily labour, of small education, whose thoughts never went beyond their daily bread—what was it that made these men the great heroes of all time, and made their names familiar in every language? What was the change that came over Peter, the fisherman, who, if you read between the lines, you would say had been in his early days given to falsehood and lying? For if lying ever comes out from the lips of a consecrated man in one of the most solemn seasons of his life, you can tell what he was in his youth, and before Christ had him. He was a man who had been given to petty lying in former days, and had been accustomed to seal his lies with oaths and cursing. It is

I believe it is verifiable from the letter of the Word. What do you find, and that almost in the course of a single day? A total and marvellous spiritual transformation that made him a man of power, whose words rang through the wide world. What made the change in Peter? Pentecost. Peter was a Christian; he had been at the feet of Jesus; he had been a disciple for three years past. He had done what I fear we have not done—"Lord, we have forsaken all and followed Thee." And Jesus never said "No, you have not forsaken all." Yet what was he? What you and I have been, and ten times better than we have been before the Spirit of God came upon us in power—if He has come. But when God's Holy Spirit came down to the poor fisherman's soul, you see what He made of him; and you see what He can make of any Christian to-day. For the elders of the Church, the Apostles of Christ, speakers, Christian workers, undergo a total transformation when they are filled with the Spirit of God. O, Christians, at this Keswick Convention, who do not know already what it is to be filled with the Spirit of God, should not that thing be prayed for and sought for with all one's heart and soul?

What next did the Spirit of God when He came down and was fully received by Christians? The whole Church undergoes a similar transformation. Not on this occasion a transformation so much in point of power. I do not know that we are ever to look for a church composed of individual members who shall be remarkable for power. I suppose there will always be the pawns upon the board; there will always be the privates in the army. But this is clear, that God calls on all his people for grace, for godliness, for humility, for liberality, for self-sacrifice. What do you find so soon as the Spirit of God came down and was received, whether at Pentecost or in Samaria, or in the room at Damascus, or at Ephesus?

GREAT AND MARVELLOUS GRACE

upon the whole Church; such grace as we have never had in it again. You see how it took hold of their possessions; what it made of these covetous, selfish men who loved money and prided themselves on their family possessions. Twice over we are told the most remarkable fact that they gave; and gave all they had; and had all things common. There were no more poor because there were no more rich. All were rich in faith, and none in worldly goods.

I spoke the other night in some opening words—perhaps it was too soon, before our hearts had been melted, and before the hammer of God's Word had broken some—I spoke of a scene in Israel's history, where the people met with God and were so impressed that they stripped themselves of their ornaments. Since then I have turned to the passage again to see what was done with the ornaments, and I find they never put them on again. They found they were better, happier, more tasteful without them. What did they do? The first part of the story is in Exodus xxxiii., and in Exodus xxxv. we read what they did. These jewels and ornaments went into the Lord's treasury, and to such an extent that we read in chapter xxxvi. that Bezaleel and Aholiab came to Moses and asked him to tell the people to bring no more. Oh! friends, was there no call to-day from the Spirit of God, through the voice of our friend, to the people assembled here at this Keswick Convention to STRIP THEMSELVES OF THEIR ORNAMENTS?

Do you suppose that if all the needless and superfluous ornaments here to-day, and which we should be better without, were put together down on the floor, there would not be a heap that would almost be visible through the whole tent? Then we might almost have written another chapter in the Acts of the Apostles to the effect that they sold their possessions—that every man and woman among them parted with their ornaments and goods, and great grace was upon them all. At all events, if the Spirit of God comes and fills the hearts of men with the reality with which He came at Samaria, at Ephesus, and over that early Church, you may be sure of this—that in your life and in my life there will be wonders compared to which, I was going to say, those we listened to this afternoon would be regarded as commonplace and poor. We have not exhausted the power and grace of our blessed Lord.

Once more, what did the Spirit of God do when He came down in power at Pentecost? I suppose Peter the fisherman preached that day his first sermon. He went out, no doubt, as one of the missionaries sent by Christ during our Lord's life. But I suppose they were more conversations than sermons that took place then, and I assume that this was Peter's first appearance as a public preacher. And with him on that occasion, and no preparation, except what came from God Himself. What happened? Are we three thousand in the tent to-night? Not quite, perhaps; but taking in all those fringes we are not far short of it. As many as you here went down before the power, I was going to say, of the fisherman's sermon, but rather before the power of the Spirit of God falling upon the people. They were bowed at the feet of Christ; were brought from death to life under that one sermon of the fisherman Peter, who had never stood in a pulpit before. Hear that, brethren in the ministry, whose hearts have been well-nigh broken by labour on labour that never seemed to be crowned by the conversion of a soul. See the result of one sermon from Peter, because the Spirit of God for the first time had filled his soul. Are you a Christian, a minister, a worker—I care not what you are—a saved soul who has experienced the grace and love of Christ, but never known what is the power and presence of the Spirit of God when He comes down to fill the soul and is received by it? What would you be and do under a power and presence such as that?

Under what conditions may we become partakers of this marvellous gift? First of all, I have to ask this plain, unmistakable, and, I fear, not pleasant question:

DO YOU WANT TO HAVE IT?

For it is an awful thing to have a power within me that orders me, that takes the command, and to whom I must be the servant. It is an awful thing for me to have the will and the choice and the desire quite taken out of me; to have henceforth no power to say, "I want this or that." It is awful to have the Holy God come down so close to me as to take me up in all the faculties of my spirit, my soul, and my body. When God appeared in Sinai the whole people said: "Let not God speak any more to us, lest we die." Even Moses said, "I do exceedingly fear and quake." Think of God coming down into your soul, taking possession of you altogether, and dwelling in your soul; is not that an awful thing? You are afraid to touch fire. "Our God is a consuming fire." There is no material fire on earth to be compared with the fire of God, the living God, touching the spirit. Do you want to have this awful possession? Do not ask it lightly; but if you do ask it, remember the position. If you will face the fact of having God the Spirit as your Master in everything, then that is the first condition—willingness to receive Him.

The next condition is willingness to obey Him when He comes. I do not know what He will do with you; but I do honestly tell you I do not believe He will let you continue as you are. I have not the least idea that He will let you live as you have been living, or speak as you have been speaking, or preach as you have been preaching, or work as you have been working. You say you want to know a little more about this. But for God says He must be trusted and not bargained with. He offers you this marvellous Divine and eternal blessing. It is at your threshold, and you may have it. But it shall be on condition that God is entirely master. You may ask: "Will He strip me; make me a poor man; turn me out a beggar on the street?" Oh, what a thought of God you have in your heart. Much you need to have the Spirit of God. If the Spirit of God were in your heart, filling you, you could have no thought like that about your Father. Did you ever read the parable where the man said, "I knew thee that thou art an austere man, reaping that thou hast not sowed." That is the way you are thinking of God to-night; you are thinking worse of God than that—an austere father; not a father at all. Can you not trust God, in what He is going to do with you if you get a blessing like this?—though it be a life of sacrifice in the future; a life in which you will find many bitter things; a life of shame; though people point at you and say, "He has quite lost his judgment; he seems to have gone half mad"; "she has become such a peculiar woman since she got this blessing that there is no living with her." Your friends may fall away; many of them must fall away. You will be an isolated man or woman for a time. But, oh! the presence of God, the indwelling of God, more, infinitely more, than anything you can offer Him—a life of blessing, a life of holiness, a life of light, a life of Christ,—that is the meaning of being filled with the Spirit of God. And if you are willing to take, and willing to obey; if you will sign your papers beforehand and say, "Yes, Lord, I sign them blank, and Thou shalt fill in the orders day by day; I take my marching orders from Thee; I will go where, when, and so long as Thou wilt"—these are the terms.

ONE MORE CONDITION.

Do you know the difference between asking and taking? When you were converted you did not ask; you took Christ. Now, you are not to ask for the Holy Spirit merely; you are to obey the commandment, "Be filled with the Spirit." We prostrate ourselves in asking that all here may be filled. I trust to hear of earnest prayer meetings in which the cry of many will go up to remove hindrances, and for the Spirit of God to come down on the people. But for yourself, you must come to close quarters with God. You must not ask, but take. Oh, Lord, I expect that blessed, marvellous, holy gift; I expect, I take thy Spirit. I thank Thee, Lord. How can I thank Thee for this honour, and for this blessing, that the Spirit has fallen upon my soul? "And they received the Holy Ghost."

THE SECRET OF SPIRITUAL HEALTH.

BY REV. W. S. STANDEN.

Read with me Jeremiah xxx. 17, "I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the Lord; because they called thee an Outcast, saying, This is Zion, whom no man seeketh after." Here we have a reference to the time of Jacob's trouble, and a very literal picture of what will take place in regard to God's people Israel, when He gathers them together from their scattered places, and unites them in one, with the Lord Jesus Christ on the throne of David. That has never yet taken place. The Lord Jesus Christ has sat upon the throne of God, but He has never sat upon the throne of David. He will do so, and then the promises of this chapter of Jeremiah will have their literal fulfilment.

The passage is, however, as much a lesson to the Church of God, and to every individual in the Church of God, as it is a lesson on the past history of God's dealings with his people Israel. So we will endeavour to see what was the condition of the people, and what were the causes thereof; also, what was the remedy; for God never tells us of any evil condition that is hard without making known to us the remedy for it.

We have here under notice the people of the Jews in the time of their chastisement. The Lord is punishing them, although he can never cast them off. From this they are suffering, until at last they begin to cry, or the Lord begins to show them what their condition is. He says (v. 12): "Thy bruise is incurable, and thy wound is grievous. There is none to plead thy cause, that thou mayest be bound up; thou hast no healing medicines. All thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not; for I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy," &c. Are not many children of God to-day conscious of a condition like that? Are there not some who have to say that they suffer from and smart under

AN INFLICTED WOUND THAT IS INCURABLE?

Some Christian people who thus suffer are constantly crying out in their wounded condition and lamenting that they are unable to recover soundness of health, notwithstanding all their trying. Perhaps there is in some cases a bitter sting, because of a consciousness that they have brought the suffering upon themselves. Are not some smarting under bruises from repeated falls, smarting through and through, in their consciences and lives? They have failed to find a remedy, and they cry out, "My bruise is incurable, and my wound is grievous."

We all have to learn that if, through our own waywardness or our own wilfulness, we are chastised or wounded, the cure and remedy is only in the hands of the Lord Jesus Christ. Many are ever trying to get themselves out of this condition, but they find no relief. In Jer. x. 19 we read of a second class of persons who are bruised and wounded: "My wound is grievous: but I said, Truly, this is a grief, and I must bear it." Are not many saying this? They are trying to bear the wrong condition of soul that they are in. But if we are in any condition other than one of health in the Lord's sight, it is not for us to learn how patiently to bear it, but how to be delivered from it. In Jer. xv. 18 you read: "Why is my pain perpetual and my wound incurable, which refuseth to be healed?" Are there some here in this condition who say, "I have been to Keswick before, but still my wound refuses to be healed? It seems to stare me in the face, and is, if anything, worse than before." The Lord is desirous of dealing with such. It may be that before He could h you He had to bring you down to see the ca of the evil, and that there was no remedy in y own hands. When He has done that, He bri you to his feet.

Then we look at the cause of this condit When we go to a doctor, it is not merely treatment of symptoms, but for ascertaining cause of the disease, in order that it may be cu tively dealt with. There are many things wh trouble Christians that are and Christians often seek to be cured of former rather than the latter. "Ah!" some "that I might be cured of a bad temper, an habit, or an envious disposition." But these symptoms, with a cause lying behind them. Lord will deal with the cause, and He begins the heart. In Jer. xxx. 14 we see that his peo had turned aside to other lovers, who in time distress had forgotten them. The very pers that had enticed and drawn them aside fr God now turned round against them. In H ii. 5, you read what took place. She said, "I go after my lovers that give me my bread and water, my wool and my flax, mine oil and drink. Therefore, behold, I will hedge up way with thorns," &c., saith the Lord. Many God's children go to the Lord for salvat on, have never gone to Him for the satisfaction their souls; and when and so long as this is case, whether we choose it or not, our hearts be drawn aside from God, and we shall turn other lovers.

So surely as we go outside the Lord for sa faction or attraction, so we shall find that very things that we go after will turn agai us, and prove as thorns in our side. Many c dren of God are surrounded by a hedge of tho which scratch and tear them as they endeav to escape from the position and condition i which they have brought themselves. "T Lord our God is a jealous God." He not o desires our love, but that all our heart's should flow in and through Him.

When the Lord has shown the people th condition and its causes, He turns them to H self for the remedy. In v. 17, He says, "I restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee thy wounds." He does not put it the other w heal the wounds and then restore health. W restored health, the wounds disappear. The L begins at that which caused the wrong. It mus put away. The outcome is that the "outca people become the light which God intended the world. The light is to shine through people, and they, by the power of the Spirit, to be such an attraction that others will s them that they may know the Lord. How m people, during the past twelve months, h looked at you and said, "This is a Christian t can show me the way to be what I want to we shall not have to be always seeking a sinners, but we shall find that sinners will s after us. We shall not need to go to fell Christians to show them how to be in a heal condition; for when they see that we have secret, they will come to us that we may it on.

It cost the Lord Jesus a good deal to go to cross for sinners, but it also cost Him a g deal to go to that cross to be the Physicia his people. Have you thought how much it Him that He might promise to restore he unto us and heal us of our wounds? When read Isai. liii. do we often think that it spe not only of sinners, but of the wounds that h been inflicted upon Him in the house of friends? Every transgression among sin wounded Christ, but every transgression am his people likewise wounded Him sorely. was wounded for our transgressions, He bruised for our iniquities, and the chastisem of our peace was upon Him, and with his st we are healed." The Apostle Peter applies t words to our being dead unto sin and alive t righteousness. For every wound we are suffe from He was wounded, and He comes to us says: "I can heal thee of thy wounds and rel thee of thy bruises."

And many say, "That is just what I am n ing—that the Great Physician may res health to my soul, and heal me of my woun Then shall you give the Lord Jesus joy of h for He shall see of the travail of his soul, an satisfied. The Spirit of the Lord God was u Him, not only to proclaim the Gospel, but He might heal them that are bruised—and bruised ones are among his own people.

THE TONGUE OF THE TAUGHT.

BY REV. G. H. C. MACGREGOR.

Turn to Isaiah l. 5, "The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned (them that are taught. R.V.), that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary; he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned" (they that are taught. R.V.) The noblest ambition of every Christian is to be a soul-winner, but do not many of us feel that we have failed entirely in our efforts in attaining our ideal? The passage we have read should come as light in the darkness to discouraged workers. It is the utterance of the Servant of the Lord, that glorious Personage of whom we read so much in the latter part of Isaiah. We find that this Servant of the Lord was called upon to glorify God by speech and by sacrifice; he was a witness, a worker, a prophet, and a martyr. But before he could undertake the work of prophet, he had to receive a special gift from God—he had to be specially endowed; and this power for service, he tells us quite distinctly, was a distinct gift from God. Many of us seem to think that the desire to be a successful worker will make us such. That is a mistake. Just as forgiveness and deliverance from daily sin are the gift of God, so the power for effective witnessing is the gift of God.

Note that the reference is not to the tongue of the learned, but of the learner—him that is taught, the disciple, the follower. What are the marks or tokens of the man who has received this gift? First, he has power to arrest men by what he says—to compel attention to his words. How can men be blessed except they will hear? Unless we win a hearing for our witness, what will our witnessing do? Therefore, the man who has this tongue will be a popular speaker. There is a popularity that is a curse to the Church of Christ; at the same time, there is a popularity which is a great and gracious gift from God, and enables its possessor to make his witness heard in a wide circle. If you read history you will find that almost all the men who had this gift were men who had

THE POWER TO ARREST.

Take Whitefield and Wesley in England, President Finney in America, and Mr. Spurgeon in our own day. What is true of the public teacher is true also of the individual Christian. One of the most effective workers for Christ I ever met was a lady who never spoke in public, but whose conversation always arrested. It was speech in the power of the Holy Ghost, and you could not get away from it.

The man who has received this gift from God has also power to awaken men. Here it is that the difference is seen between a mere orator and a man speaking in the power of the Holy Ghost. The words of the orator awaken the intellect, delight the fancy, play on the emotions, touch the will for a moment, and then are lost. But the words of the man whom God has endowed enter the heart and stay there. If you take two sermons, say one by Mr. Spurgeon and one from among the countless number that were preached on the same day, you will find very little difference in them. Yet what a difference in result! The one, though accorded a literary superiority, accomplishes hardly anything; but the other goes abroad in the world and brings thousands of souls to a sense of sin, and to the feet of the Lord Jesus Christ. The difference comes of the fact that the one spoke in the power of the Spirit, with the tongue of the taught, while the other spoke without it. And that is where the explanation of spiritual success is to be found. The power for spiritual work is not in man or in enthusiasm; it is not explicable on human principles, but is a gift from God Himself.

But the man with this tongue is not only able to arrest and convince men—to break them down under a sense of their sinfulness—but he also has the power to lead men to Christ. That is complementary and supplementary to the other. What a difference between workers in this respect! One sits down for hours, and there is no result; another converses for a few moments, and the inquiring soul enters into peace. The one has the tongue of the learner, which in actual work proves to be

THE TONGUE OF FIRE.

Some of you have spoken to unconverted people, and know how impossible it is by human means to lead them into the light of God. So it is also in preaching a full salvation; it cannot be done except God gives us power. Why do we get it from God? The first reason is, to drive out the dumb devil that even possesses Christians, to sweep out the shameful cowardice that prevents us speaking for Christ. Notice the context of the verse to which I have drawn attention. Faithful witnessing for Christ almost always involves one in suffering. The Servant of the Lord received the tongue of the taught, and then (v. 6): "I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair; I hid not my face from shame and spitting." It has been said that three men have received injury at the hands of their fellows—the criminal, the military enemy, and the prophet. There seems to be something in the utterance of truth that rouses the very devil in fury, and therefore he stirs up hate. Now, flesh and blood shrinks to meet this hate. Therefore it is that God, when He calls us to witness for Him, gives us special power to do it. There is in Him supply for all our needs, and when our heart and flesh would faint and fail, grace is given to enable us to do God's work. When we have got this grace we cannot help speaking. It is with us as with Jeremiah, "The word of the Lord is like a fire in my bones"; and as with Paul, "Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel."

Again, God gives it to us for guidance as to how we are to speak; that we may know how to succour the weary with words; not only power to do the thing, but guidance to do it rightly. How much mischief has been done by witness for Christ that was not after the leading of the Holy Spirit! Many a man has been repelled from Christ by a testimony that was not in accordance with which we need as well as power, if our witness is to be effective. How shall I meet that inattentive ear, break that hard heart, and bring this desponding Christian into the light and liberty of God's children? God can do it, and He does it by giving us this glorious gift.

How is the gift to be got? Come with me to where I found the secret. When our Lord started upon the proclamation of the glad tidings of the Kingdom of God, He had to receive the tongue from God. We read in Matthew iii. that when He was baptized, He "went up straightway out of the water, and He saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon Him." Again, in Acts ii., "there appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." So, you see, we receive this tongue of the taught through the bestowal upon us of the Holy Ghost. We cannot do God's work without God's Spirit. It is because the Church of Christ has thought that organisation, elaborate ceremonial, or eloquence would do spiritual work, that we see so much failure. No spiritual witness or work is effective until men are filled with the Holy Ghost.

How are we to be so filled? How is the tongue of the taught to be received? By surrender and by faith. We received Christ by surrender and faith; self-despair leading us to cast ourselves entirely upon the Saviour. How did we get continual forgiveness and recognise that sanctification is a gift of Jesus Christ as well as justification? By surrender and faith. Now we want power for service. Jesus Christ has been revealed to us in all his beauty, and our hearts are filling with love to Him. How are we to take to others the blessing that we have? We need enduement from on high. It is only to be got

BY SURRENDER AND BY FAITH.

It is along the same road as we have already gone—a road that leads us onward into the presence of God and his Son Jesus Christ. God has bound Himself very especially to give us this. Our Lord said, "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more shall your Father in heaven give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him?" Yet we are again at the old game of unbelief! We ask for the Holy Spirit. God has promised to give it; He says, "How much more!" Let us not misbelieve God, nor do Him the injustice of thinking that He grudges us the great gift.

There are two conditions. It can be received by us only to the glory of God. It is just here that many of us miss it. We seek it in order to attract attention, that it may be said of us, "What a wonderful worker!" God will not make Himself a convenience for promoting our glory; and until we are brought, by the surrender of our lives, entirely to Him, to know that his will is to be done, and to wish it to be done, we cannot claim this power.

The other condition is: we must take this gift moment by moment. "He wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear." We must look up to God for definite help for definite service, and it will be forthcoming; but, in reverence I say it, we cannot get the Holy Spirit in a lump. With the Divine enduement we shall speak to men in darkness and the shadow of death, the very words of God, in the very power of God.

The missionary meeting on Saturday morning was a memorable gathering. We hope in a future issue to describe it at length. From all parts of the tent gifts of money, and jewellery, heartily yielded out of love for Christ, were handed up to the Chairman. On Monday morning, at another missionary meeting, the result was announced: with a promise of £100, the proceeds in money reached a total of £1,166. This is not so much as was contributed last year, when there were several large donations; but it is encouraging to know that it represents a wider interest, for the gifts were much more numerous. The packets of jewellery, including a large case, numbered about eighty.

The two meetings were addressed by Rev. G. C. Grubb and his fellow-workers, Rev F. Baring-Gould, Miss Guinness, and a large number of missionaries.

(To be continued next week.)

MR. MOODY AT KESWICK.

Mr. Moody has paid a very interesting visit to Keswick. Arriving on Thursday morning last, when the Convention was in full session, he attended the successive meetings, his heart and soul being thrown into the great themes which occupied attention. He had been announced to preach in the Congregational Church, in the place of Mr. Meyer, who was obliged to give up his engagement there, as he sailed for Northfield on Saturday. The building being only a small one, the trustees of the Convention kindly placed the spacious tent at his disposal for evangelistic services.

The evangelistic meetings arranged for Saturday and Sunday, in connection with the Convention, were given entirely into Mr. Moody's hands, and other gatherings were also held. The attendance was very large, including hundreds of ministers, students, and other Christian workers. To these the proceedings gave intense pleasure, for not only were the addresses instructive in character, but they led to many out-and-out decisions for Christ.

Mr. Moody set forth the heinousness of sin and the need for conversion. He also described the operations of the Holy Spirit. His words to workers on Sunday morning were pungent and pointed, and many heard to great profit. In the evening over two thousand persons were present. Among those on the platform was Bishop Ryle, long an exponent of Evangelical principles. In the opening prayer the Bishop asked that abundant blessing might attend the word to be spoken. He made affectionate reference to Mr. Moody's long-continued work for God, and listened with evident satisfaction to the plain message that was delivered. The discourse was founded on the case of that Herod who once gladly heard John the Baptist, but later on, refusing to break with sin, beheaded the prophet for having faithfully rebuked his wickedness.

The appeal that was made at the close reached many hearts. Mr. Moody asked who would consecrate themselves to the Lord forthwith, and "I will" was the response from all parts of the tent. As on previous occasions the after meetings afforded opportunity for personal converse with distressed souls. Among those who came to rejoice in the salvation of Christ were many young people. The Mission is looked back upon with gratitude to God, who by his Spirit owned the word of his servant. Mr. Moody took occasion to emphasize the need of reaching the working-men.

ON HOLIDAY.—The little village of Ayth, N.B., has lately been visited by a large number of holiday seekers, and amongst the number were a goodly few of the Lord's people, who held forth the word of life each night during the week for an hour and a-half. The Christians engaged in the work felt the work to be hard, there being so much cold indifference to and formality in the religious life of the village. A meeting for the deepening of spiritual life was held in the Mission Hall on Thursday evening, which was well attended, and on the closing night of the week, the party of Y.W.C.A. workers from Dundee held a consecration meeting for women only.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

BY REV. F. B. MEYER.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 7.—LEVITICUS XX.

The people were to show their holiness to the Lord by the rigour with which they cut themselves off from the habits of the surrounding peoples. They were bidden to sanctify themselves and be holy, but at the same time they were reminded that they could not keep God's statutes apart from the action of his Holy Spirit. Do we not need constantly to go back on this, so helpless are we in ourselves. What comfort there is in the constant assurance, "I am the Lord which sanctify you"; as if his abiding presence were enough to secure the holiness on which He had set his heart. And if for them, how certainly for us, as He has promised to make us blameless, if not faultless, by sanctifying us wholly in spirit, soul, and body. Toward the end of the chapter notice how upon the separation there comes the promise of the land of inheritance, so certainly does the soul, which is given up to Christ, find in Him more than it resigns. Even our food is a matter of importance. Whether we eat, or drink, or whatever we do, all is to be done to the glory of God, and all to be avoided which might injure the bodies which He has given to us, or the lives of others. These distinctions were largely ceremonial, and are abolished in the Gospel, but there are matters of diet which involve deep moral questions, and about which we need to watch and pray.

MONDAY, AUGUST 8.—LEVITICUS XXI.

The holiness of the priests was taught by many striking signs. The prohibition to touch the dead, even their dearest; the restrictions as to the women that they took to wife; the purity demanded of their children; the necessity that they should be without blemish in their person; the requirement that their bodies should be free from deformity—all pointed to the truth that they needed to be specially exempt from every symptom of failure, if they were to present the bread of God. It is not quite the fact that the bread of God of the Old Dispensation is represented by the Lord's Supper of the New, but it is at least true that those who handle the memorials of his death should avoid defilement of flesh and spirit. The Israelites were encouraged to separation and holiness by the memory of the holiness of Jehovah. We have yet a more touching and moving incitement: "Come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you. Having, therefore, these promises, let us cleanse ourselves..." Notice the tender provision for the maintenance of those who, for physical reasons, were debarred from entering the Tabernacle. They were at least assigned their share of the priest's bread, so pitiful is God. "The lame take the prey."

TUESDAY, AUGUST 9.—LEVITICUS XXII.

What minute care was taken to emphasize the holiness of God! No pains were spared to make it clear that they must be pure and holy who ministered before Him, the inward character being indicated in the outward ceremonial of cleanliness. The priests were not to approach the holy things, or even eat of them, if they were defiled; and it was only by frequent bathing that they could preserve their right to minister in the Holy Place. Oh! my soul, dost thou always consider thine own condition before feeding on the Word of God, or engaging in some act of service? Thou needest to be very careful, lest thou be cut off and cast away as an unfruitful branch. Is not this one reason why the study of the Scripture is at times so unprofitable? We have not bathed first. Equal care was taken about the victims offered in sacrifice, and Malachi bitterly complained that these olden prescriptions were disregarded. We must not offer that which costs us nothing, or that which we cannot use in other ways. Our best must be for Him who freely gave his best for us. Again notice the recurring phrase, "I am the Lord which you sanctify." You who feel that you can never satisfy his requirements, offer yourselves to Him, that He may make you holy by his indwelling, as He did the Burning Bush or the Temple. Hallow us, oh God, who brought us out from Egypt, that we may not profane, but hallow thy holy name.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10.—LEVITICUS XXIII.

The soul needs periodic times for refreshment, and these, in the case of Israel, were connected with specific events, when there came a pause in the busy rush of life, and there was time to review the past, to repeat vows of consecration, and to gather in families at solemn ceremonials which must have left a lasting impression on the national existence. The religious chronology of Israel was determined by the use of the unit seven, seven days, seven weeks, &c. Do we know enough of the Sabbath-keeping of the heart, the commemoration of the Passover of Calvary, the wave-sheaf of the Resurrection Life, the holy day of Pentecost. We ought to have solemn rests in our lives, and mingle in holy convocations, and dedicate days of atonement in which to afflict our souls before God. The feast of tabernacles seems significant of our life here, for we have here no abiding city; and even in heaven there is a counterpart of this joyous Jewish feast, as the nations of the redeemed commiserate, when the toils of earth are over for ever, the experiences of their wilderness pilgrimage.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11.—LEVITICUS XXIV.

The olive oil that burnt in the holy light was beaten well, there was every indication of careful preparation, and we must be equally solicitous to prepare the supplications and intercessions which we offer to God by previous meditation. The lamps were to burn from evening to morning, through the night watches, as indeed the Church must shine till the daybreak and the shadows flee away. As to shewbread - is it not an emblem of Him on whom the Priests of Aaron's house should feed continually, and who is ours in an everlasting covenant? Oh, that we, in our turn, might become bread for others, so that they might find nourishment in our simple, holy, and devoted lives! What a curse is brought into religious society by these half-castes, who have as much of the Egyptian as of Israelite blood, who have the name of Israel, but lack the reality of godliness. May we be Israelites indeed, in whom there is no guile. The awe with which the Name is mentioned recalls the early chapters of the Acts, when it was the badge of the first disciples (John iii. 7). We must not forget that the law of retaliation was an accommodation to the low state in which the people were at that time, and does not pertain to the liege servants of Him who has told us not to avenge, but to bear our wrongs, leaving vindication or vengeance with God.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 12.—LEVITICUS XXV.

Not the people alone, but the land was to rest. This demanded considerable faith in God that He should give them in the sixth year food for the seventh, and that the soil should of itself be productive. But there was a deep economic reason here also, namely, that there is no better way of enriching the soil after repeated crops than to let it lie fallow. Very beautiful, also, was the provision of the jubilee, in which every man returned to his freedom and his estate, when all slaves were freed, all debts released, all mortgaged lands restored. This wonderful system not only kept houses and lands from accumulating in the hands of a few, and preserved a race of independent freeholders, but it was a constantly recurring type of that blessed time which awaits us, when the tyranny and wrong and oppression of time shall pass away in the golden light of millennial bliss. How sweetly does the word "redemption" recur, as if it were sweet to utter. Oh that our lives were more constantly permeated by the thought that we have been bought back to God by precious blood, and have inalienable rights.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 13.—LEVITICUS XXVI.

The promises to obedience were neither few nor small. Nature herself seemed laid under contribution to make life blessed for those who lived for God. "All things were theirs, whether things present or things to come." Full of bread, the people also dwelt in safety, and enjoyed the fellowship of God, who promised to be their companion and partner in their lot. Their enemies fled before them, the wild beasts did not molest them, the sword of the foe should not invade their territory. In each of these we may see some spiritual counterpart. Not only for love to Jesus, but for the true love of themselves, men may well be urged to keep his commandments. What an awful picture follows of the contrary! And if such penalties ensued on the violation of the law of Moses, how much more terrible must be the sufferings of those who disobey the Gospel. But mark, oh man, the pitifulness, the tender mercy of God! He cannot forget his covenant, though we have utterly failed. He will not be faithless, and on the least symptom of repentance He will open the doors of his tender love, and let forth all his olden kindness. Oh, what a God is ours! He does not deal with us after our sins, nor reward us according to our iniquities.

International S. S. Lessons.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 14.

ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA.

Acts v. 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT: Gal. vi. 7.

Note how the spirit of love dwelling among the disciples manifested itself (iv. 34-37). Such a sacrifice of all their possessions was not commanded. The value of it consisted chiefly in the fact that it was voluntary. The love of Christ constrained them, so that they did by the power of that love what the rich young ruler refused to do to secure eternal life (Luke xviii. 22, 23). To have Christ in conscious possession makes it easy to give up all for Him. When we read this story, let us think not how poor they became when they had parted with all, but how rich they were to be able so willingly to dispense with what others value so highly.

The story of the dark deed of Ananias and Sapphira, with the terrible judgment that followed, appears all the worse in contrast with such a picture of self-sacrificing love.

Their Sin. There was no sin in their possessing the land, nor in selling it and resolving to give part of the price to the Lord. But it was sinful to offer the part as though it were the whole (4). They acted at Satan's suggestion (3). As he had entered into Judas to destroy, through his perfidy, the cause of Christ, so did he seek an opportunity to enter this infant Church. Persecution from without cannot injure the Church, but sin tolerated and unjudged within can do incalculable harm. They acted in concert (2, 9). Wife and husband were equally guilty. This does not excuse them, but rather aggravates their offence by giving to it the character of a deliberately-formed purpose to do evil. Their sin consisted mainly of three things:—(1) Spiritual pride. They aimed at appearing to be as self-sacrificing as the rest. They would have the credit of doing what others had done. Though this may appear trifling at first, yet it is certain that many of the most grievous sins have their rise in this. Nothing is more beautiful in the character of Robert Murray McCheyne than his dread lest his pursuit of holiness should be a snare to him. To seek a reputation for holiness would be sin, and would open the door for numerous evils. (2) Covetousness. In spite of their appearance of unselfishness, they evidently loved their wealth more than their Lord. If they parted with a portion of it to get the reputation of being what they were not, they still retained a portion for themselves. This spirit brought judgment on Lot's wife (Gen. xix.); kept the young ruler out of heavenly treasure (Luke xviii.); and led to the apostasy of Demas (2 Tim. iv. 10). See 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10. (3) Falsehood. Not unto men only, but unto God (3, 4, 9). All hypocrisy may be regarded as lying unto God. They were free before making the vow; having made it they were bound by it. Not to perform would have been hardly more guilty than a mere pretence to perform it (see Deut. xxiii. 21-23; Ecc. v. 4, 5). This needs to be especially emphasized. The "white lies" which are sometimes excused in business, the half truths which are sometimes used in order to deceive, bear striking resemblance to the sin of Ananias. A lie is not merely in the words used. We may use words that are true in a sense, but if the intention is to deceive they are a lie. Comp. Abraham's deception (Gen. xii. 13; xx. 11-13).

Their Judgment. The description is very fully given (5, 6, 9, 10). Did it involve their eternal death? The narrative does not tell us; but they had proved themselves unfit for a place in the Church, and so were cut off. It was not the act of Peter, but that of the Holy Ghost, to whom these two had lied. (1) It was needful for the effective witness of the assembly. The Holy Ghost can work through weak and insignificant instruments, but not through those who tolerate sin. As Gideon's host was strengthened by the diminution of its numbers, as Joshua strengthened the Israelites by the removal of Achan, so was the early Church strengthened by the removal of these two. The effect produced upon others is proof of this (5, 11). An assembly like that was one which hypocrites "durst not join" (13). (2) It warns us of the judgment which will follow sin. Sometimes it has followed immediately, as in this case. In Devizes Market-place there is a monument erected to commemorate a similar act of summary judgment upon a woman who, as soon as she had called upon God to strike her dead if what she said was a lie, fell dead at once. This is one of many instances that prove that judgment is still in his hand. "But it does not follow immediately upon every lie." True; and therefore men lie with impunity (Ecc. viii. 11). But if in longsuffering the judgment is delayed, it is not less sure. What use should we make of his longsuffering? (See Rom. ii. 4-6, and 2 Pet. iii. 9).

Obituary.

MRS. HOWARD, OF TOTTENHAM.

Many will deeply regret to hear of the passing away of Rachel Howard, the widow of the late Mr. Robert Howard, whom some of our older readers will recall as one deeply interested and actively engaged in the work of God in earlier years of revival; and mother of Mr. Theodore Howard, Home director of the China Inland Mission. Hers has truly been a long life of service for the Master. Her home has been a true resting-place for the Lord's people, to whom she has ministered unweariedly, not only of her substance, but of her unfailing sympathy and wise counsel. World-wide, indeed, will be the sorrow, as her place cannot easily be filled up. But how great is her joy now in the presence of her beloved Saviour! Miss Howard, her bereaved daughter, is wonderfully supported; but how poor Tottenham is without her none but those can tell who have known and loved her here.

BISHOP CLAUGHTON.

In our last issue we mentioned the death, on Monday (25th), of Dr. Claughton, who resigned the bishopric of St. Albans in 1890, owing to advanced age. Born near Manchester, in 1808, and educated at Rugby and Trinity College, Oxford, he was ordained in 1834, and appointed one of the tutors of his college. In 1842 he was presented to the vicarage of Kidderminster, where his work for a quarter of a century was of a remarkable character, and on his leaving the parish for the bishopric it was stated that "long will his name be cherished with that of Baxter as among God's most eminent blessings to Kidderminster."

In 1867 Dr. Claughton was nominated Bishop of Rochester, a large and scattered diocese, extending from the centre of Kent over Essex, and to the western side of Hertfordshire. He proved quite equal to the responsibility cast upon him, and soon made his presence felt from one end of his diocese to the other. New parishes were formed, new churches were built, and weekday services were multiplied. He did not, however, make any very distinguished mark as a bishop; he laboured quietly, steadily, and successfully. By-and-by, the diocese being divided, Dr. Claughton elected to take St. Albans, where his greatest work has been the founding of the Bishop of St. Albans Fund for the needs of "Londoners over the border" in the vast parish of West Ham, which includes Stratford. In 1890, owing to advancing years, Dr. Claughton resigned the see of St. Albans, and has since lived in retirement at the episcopal residence, Danbury Palace, his seclusion only having been disturbed by the recent celebration of his golden wedding, which was made the occasion for a remarkable evidence of the affection in which Mrs. Claughton and himself were held. But his health and strength had been failing for some months past, and his death, though somewhat sudden, cannot be said to have been altogether unexpected.

The Strangers' Rest.

In marked contrast to the revels that prevailed last Monday in and near Ratcliff-highway was the sane and sanctified way in which the day was kept at the Strangers' Rest. The reading-room was filled from the hour of opening with sailors of various nationalities. In the afternoon there arrived more than twenty workers. A bright, open-air meeting was held near the "Rest;" it was noticeable that many of the lowest classes of the neighbourhood drew near and listened attentively. After a somewhat longer indoor service, at least three hundred sailors took tea together.

When tea was over, Mr. J. T. Isaac, the hon. secretary made a few kindly remarks to the seafaring guests. During the remainder of the evening the English, German, and Scandinavian sailors occupied separate apartments, so that all might hear the Gospel in their own language.

SOMERS-TOWN—The evangelistic services held on Sunday evenings in connection with the Christian Men's Union Gospel Mission, Somers-town, have been attended each week by two hundred of the very poor of the district. As a result, several are now about to join churches in the neighbourhood.

SHEFFIELD POSTAL AND TELEGRAPH CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—An all-day conference was recently held in connection with this Association. There were several decisions for Christ at the meetings, and the work of the Holy Spirit has gone on ever since. The men and their wives have been blessed in many instances, and there have been touching cases of telegraph lads introducing one another to the workers, and telling one another the way to eternal life. The hours of labour of postmen prevent meetings on ordinary conditions, but cottage gatherings have been held for them. Meetings of telegraph messengers were arranged in the Y.M.C.A. It is hoped soon to provide reading rooms, which will not only confer a great boon upon the men, but provide a centre for spiritual effort on their behalf. The president of the branch is Mrs. Jabez Sharman, 11, Sharrow Head-terrace, Sheffield.

Personalia.

Rev. W. L. Watkinson has been elected by the Wesleyan Conference to fill the editorial chair vacated by Dr. Gregory.

Rev. Ernest H. Pearce, assistant-master at Christ's Hospital, has been appointed Metropolitan District Secretary to the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Dr T. Chaplin has returned to London, having visited the London Jews' Society's stations at Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Berlin, Hamburg, and Konigsberg.

Dr. Talmage has been addressing large audiences in Inverness, Aberdeen, and other parts of the north. While in St. Petersburg he had an interview with the Czar.

Rev. John McNeill recently conducted special services at Inverness. The local Courier says his hearers may question or criticise what he says, but they never fail to listen.

Mr. Joseph Hannington will be in England after September 1, and will be open to engagement to speak on Palestine, the Jews and Prophecy, before going to Egypt.—Address La Corbinière, St. Servan, France.

Rev. J. S. Hill has been selected by the C.M.S. to be Dr. Crowther's successor as Bishop of the Niger. Educated at the Islington Missionary College, Mr. Hill has seen service in West Africa, Australia, and New Zealand.

Dr. Pentecost was at the Keswick Convention, but had to leave before the close in order to preach on Lord's Day in the Presbyterian Church, Marylebone. We rejoice to learn that his pastorate is being greatly blessed of God, many persons having at recent services been convicted of sin and found peace through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Archdeacon Henry Johnson, formerly of the Niger Mission, who has recently been on a visit to this country, met with a serious accident on his return journey. As the vessel was entering the harbour of Sierra Leone, he slipped on the deck and fell, breaking the bone of his thigh. He is likely to be laid up for some time.

Mr. Walter Price, who has long been known as an active worker in connection with the Sunderland Young Men's Christian Association, has received and accepted the unanimous invitation of the Norwich Y.M.C.A. to undertake the position of general secretary there. The appointment also embraces the duties of district and travelling secretary of the eastern counties. It is expected that Mr. Price will enter upon his duties in the beginning of September.

Right Rev. B. W. Morris, D.D., Bishop of Oregon, announced at the recent Annual Convention of his diocese that he had come to the conclusion that the time had arrived for him to resign his work and his office to younger and more capable hands. He spoke of his long impaired health, and his physical inability to perform the arduous duties of his diocese as they should be done, and of his intention, after mature and prayerful deliberation, to resign his bishopric in October. This announcement (says the New York Churchman) produced a sensation of profound sorrow and regret.

Rev. H. Foster Pegg, speaking last week in the Town Hall, Birmingham, on the special services he has so successfully held for men, said it seemed to him, in saying a few farewell words, that he should state clearly his meaning in holding these services for men. In holding those services he had tried simply and solely to persuade his fellow-citizens to become Christians—Christians in the deepest, truest sense of the word. He conscientiously believed that such Christianity was the best thing for them in this life. It met them at their lowest point and raised them to the highest. During the time he had been in Birmingham he had had opportunities of observing the glorious results of men leading Christian lives.

Evangelistic Notes.

Ireland.—The Methodist Mission tent is at present pitched at Letterbreen, and is being well attended.

Mr. William Brown commenced last week a Tent Mission at Basingstoke in a tent belonging to the Evangelistic Mission.

Great Missenden.—Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh is conducting a special evangelistic mission at Great Missenden Baptist Church. The spiritual results are very encouraging.

Boston, Lincolnshire.—Mr. Josiah Spiers has just concluded a most blessed mission here. Night after night many souls have been gathered in, till there is now a large band of converts—not by any means all children.

Mr. Edward Hurditch has just held a mission in Regent-street Baptist Church, Belfast, the attendance on the Sabbath being large, and the interest well maintained. We believe there is a likelihood that Mr. Hurditch may visit this district again in October on a short evangelistic mission.

The Tent Mission held in the Yorkshire villages since the middle of July by Mr. W. H. Gorham has been very successful. Many have been saved and believers have been quickened. At present Mr. Alexander Clark has charge of the tent. On September 20 and 21 a convention will be held in Doncaster.

The Book World.

A Ministering Friend.

Edwin Octavius Tregelles: Civil Engineer and Minister of the Gospel. Edited by Sarah E. Fox. (Hodder and Stoughton. 10s.) In simple and unpretending style the story is here told of a long and busy life of ministering at home and amongst the liberated slaves in Jamaica. E. O. Tregelles, of a Cornish family of Friends (uncle, we believe, of the learned Dr. Tregelles), was led to a public confession at the age of twenty-one, was soon recognised as called by God to minister the Gospel, was deeply moved on behalf of the blacks just set free, and went forth in 1843 to labour in the Word. God appears to have greatly blessed his faithful service amongst the freedmen, as also afterwards in Norway and at home. He lived to his full fourscore, and fifty of his best years were spent in active ministry.

These particulars are necessary to be given in order that the burden of the book may be made plain. It is full of busy service, yet all done in that humble, quiet, restful way so eminently characteristic of the best type of Friends. His own diaries and letters—and the biography is mainly in his own words—breathe a spirit of deep, fervent piety, and of a very close walk with God. Well may Elizabeth N. Capper say: "I longed that all the dear young people present (at his funeral) could have seen, as it were, that long life of dedication spread out. If they could see it, even in the small degree that I see it, they would feel animated with a fresh sense of the blessedness of an early and full surrender."

Strange Figures. With this title Messrs. Lang Neil and Co. have issued a new and somewhat enlarged edition of Rev. James Neil's work on the figurative language of the Bible. The little book is of sterling value, every page making some contribution to sound exposition of the Scriptures. (1s.)

Is Christ's Coming Imminent? a prophetic study by Mr. Henry Varley (3d. A. Holness), gives the articles which recently appeared in The Christian, with additions. The importance of the subject need not be urged. We are, however, glad to call attention to pages so full of sound exposition, couched in language easy of comprehension. An acquaintance with the elements of prophecy does more than great stores of critical knowledge to establish believers in the faith of the Gospel. These pages outline the greater prophecies, and we trust they will have many careful readers.

The Faith and Life of the Early Church. An Introduction to Church History. By W. F. Slater, M.A., Biblical Tutor, Wesleyan College, Didsbury. (7s. Hodder and Stoughton.) Subjects of absorbing interest are discussed in these pages, which theological students are sure to read with profit. Occasionally the author lapses into such criticism as cannot promote spiritual edification, but his work as a whole is useful. The topics are for the most part such as have been controverted for centuries. The various studies bear evidence of wide reading, and thoughtful people will appreciate the lucid statement of facts, even where they cannot accept the conclusions at which Professor Slater arrives.

Divine Brotherhood. Jubilee Gleanings, 1842-1892. By Newman Hall, D.D. (4s. T. and T. Clark.) During his long pastorate, Dr. Newman Hall has published several thoughtful tractates, which are here collected into a volume worthy to rank with others from his flowing and graceful pen. The "brotherhood" defined by the title is not set forth as a mere human aspiration, but rather as a spiritual realisation through the reconciling work of Christ. Various phases of the brotherhood are treated in these pages—its friendship, priesthood, and freedom. One chapter deals with "The Saviour's Bible," another with "Prayer, reasonable and efficacious," others with temperance, the conventual system, and war. A fitting conclusion is found in "The Hope of the Brotherhood: The Coming of the Lord." The volume provides stimulating reading on topics at once spiritual and practical.

St. John: A poem, by Mary Beale. (1s. 6d. Digby, Long, and Co.) Occasional rhythmical shortcomings are more than compensated for by the excellence of many of the stanzas of this poem, from the pen of one who has read the New Testament to admirable purpose.

Messrs. J. S. Virtue and Co. have published two shilling manuals which should find their way into many a home. Easy and Economical Cookery, for young housekeepers, by Millicent Rose Fardell, and Healthy Households, a guide to sanitation in the home, by Guy Cadogan Rothery. Each of these contains a large amount of information of practical utility.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

From Alfred Holness: An Old Roman City: a Memorial of the Martyrs. By Charles Bloomfield.

Candidates-in-Waiting: a Manual of Home Preparation for Foreign Missionary Work. With preface by Rev. F. E. Wigram, M.A.

From Hodder and Stoughton:—The Epistle to the Ephesians. By Rev. Professor G. G. Findlay, B.A. 7s. 6d. (Expositor's Bible Series.)

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

A legacy has been received by the C.C.C.S. of £500, from the late Sir John Coode, K.C.M.G.

"Palestine Exhibitions" are to be held at Bath, Clifton, Cambridge, and Ipswich in the coming autumn.

The Church of England Waifs and Strays Society has received a legacy of £500 under the will of the late Mr. W. Smallwood.

Rev. H. Foster Pegg, who has done such a useful work in Birmingham, said farewell last week to his attached people on the eve of leaving for his new charge, St. Matthew's, St. Leonards-on-Sea.

Archdeacon Farrar's remarkably vigorous sermon on cruelty to children, delivered lately in St. Paul's, seems likely to arouse fresh interest in the protection of the young.

The arrangements in connection with the Simultaneous Meetings in London for the C.P.A.S. in November next are proceeding satisfactorily. It is proposed to follow up this effort in the metropolis by arranging similar special sermons and meetings in other parts of the country in the spring of 1893.

The Bishop of Ballarat recently announced that he had invited a qualified missioner from England for the purpose of holding missions in the bush. It is now stated that Rev. E. Allanson, Partney, Lincs., has placed himself at the disposal of the bishop for eight months without remuneration as missioner, especially for country parishes.

About 150 cyclists attended the ancient parish church of Dearham on Sunday week for a special service. The church was crowded to the doors. Many of the cyclists came from Carlisle, Keswick, Silloth, Whitehaven, Cockermouth, Workington, Wigton, Maryport, and neighbouring towns. The Vicar of Dearham preached an earnest sermon.

The midday services from 1.20 to 2 o'clock in the churchyard of St. Botolph's, Aldersgate, which we have before noticed, continue to be exceedingly well attended. It is very interesting to see a number of men of all classes giving up a good part of their luncheon hour to these religious services, which are conducted with so much spirit by Rev. T. Selby Henrey.

The C.M.S. Gleaner says in reference to the Uganda troubles:—"The Prince of Peace is our leader, and we long to see peace after this painful strife, that his Word may have free course and be glorified. Let us be instant in prayer for our brethren in and near Uganda, for the officers of the I.B.E.A. Company, for the Native Christians—both Protestant and Roman Catholic.

The Church Pastoral-Aid Society has, we understand, taken over the circuit work of the Church Home Mission. There is much need for this department of Christian activity, and it will, we hope, be reorganised with vigour. It is almost impossible to hold with advantage a week or ten days' parochial mission in a small rural district, but the circuit plan enables neighbouring parishes to combine, and one missioner can then visit them in turn.

Within the past few days, the words "Site of Paul's Cross," in a circle, have been chiselled out on the stone way, through the enclosed part of St Paul's-churchyard at the east end, going from the north side to the south it may be seen. It is directly opposite to No. 41, St. Paul's-churchyard, and many a visitor will be interested in noting the spot where testimony for the truth has, in the past, often been unflinchingly delivered, by those who spoke for the truth.

The jubilee services at St. James's, Muswell-hill, N., were held on Sunday week. The vicar, Rev. E. P. Cachemaille, preached in the morning from Eph. iii. 10, on the spiritual work and witness of the Church on earth. At the evening service—being the last in the half-century—instead of a sermon he read the Thirty-nine Articles, briefly explaining their classification, divisions, and general bearing. He expressed regret that the Articles were not oftener required to be publicly read in the services of the Church of England, say once a year.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. F. J. Austin has been appointed pastor of the Moat Church, East Grinstead.

Oak-street Old Chapel, Accrington, which has been converted into a Sunday-school, has been re-opened.

Rev. Joseph Makinson, of Loftus-in-Cleveland, has accepted the pastorate of Elsecar Church, near Barnsley.

Rev. J. MacIldowie, on returning to his work at Gideon Chapel, Bristol, after a severe illness, has received an enthusiastic welcome.

Rev. E. W. Watson, of Wollerton, Salop, at the close of a ten years' ministry there, has been appointed a teacher at the High School, Madras.

Memorial-stones were laid a few days ago of the new church in Stockport-road, Manchester, adjoining the present school-chapel. The cost will be £5,000, of which £2,247 is in hand.

The re-opening services of Pangbourne Chapel, after enlargement and renovation, took place on Sunday week, when sermons were preached by Revs. F. Rosier (pastor) and J. S. Bruning.

Mr. W. J. Edmonds, of Hackney College, who has been appointed by the London Missionary Society to Tsiafahy, Madagascar, was ordained last week at Christ Church, Westminster-bridge-road. Dr. Newman Hall presided, and gave the charge. Rev. J. A. Houlder, of Tamatave, described the field of labour. Revs. E. Wardlaw Thompson, Prof. Christie, B. Briggs (Madagascar), and others took part.

The members of the Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion have just held their annual conference at Tunbridge Wells. The attendance of ministers and delegates was very numerous, and a spirit of unity and enthusiasm pervaded the entire proceedings. A vigorous paper on "How to Extend the Work and Influence of the Connexion" was read by Rev. W. Clayton Fuidge, of Kidderminster; one on "The Consolidation of the Churches," by Rev. J. Mountain, of Tunbridge Wells; and one by Mr. Samuel Smith on "The Trust Funds of the Connexion," from which it was shown that considerable alteration and simplification in these funds would prove of great advantage in aggressive work.

BAPTIST.

Rev. G. R. Jones, of Cefn Mawr, has been laid aside by paralysis.

Mr. Thomas Woodhouse, of Bristol College, has accepted an invitation to the pastorate at Stourbridge.

The pastor's second anniversary, held last week at Manor Park Baptist Chapel, proved very interesting.

The annual meetings of the Welsh Baptist Union will be held at Caersalem, Carnarvon, on August 15, 16, 17, and 18.

A new Baptist chapel has been opened at Cwm, Mydrim. The site was given by Mr. Lewis Morris, the poet.

A special effort is being made by Rev. G. W. M'Cree to rebuild Borough-road Chapel, erected in 1839, and in the very heart of a dense population.

Rev. J. Gelson Gregson preached at Graham-street Chapel, Birmingham, on Sunday week in connection with the reopening of that building.

Mr. Pople, a member of the church at Bromdesbury, and a student of Bristol College, has been accepted by the committee of the Missionary Society for service on the Congo.

For the Baptist Centenary meetings Exeter Hall has been secured for Tuesday and Wednesday, October 4 and 5, and an introductory service will be held at the Metropolitan Tabernacle on the Monday evening

Early in June the church at Guilsborough, Northamptonshire, gave an invitation to Mr. Malcolm M. Thomson, of Liverpool, to become its pastor. He has now decided to accept the invitation, and will enter upon his duties in September.

The Autumnal meetings will be held this year in London, and will be of a special character owing to the proposed further celebration of the Missionary Centenary. Rev. E. H. Roberts will deliver his presidential address on Monday, October 3.

During the past few months the students of Regent's-park College have been working at Union Chapel, Aldeburgh, Suffolk, with marked and pleasing success. On Wednesday last, July 27, Mr. Chas. Edward Wilson, the Student-Pastor, baptized three candidates, the first service of its kind held here in ten years. Since October last there has been an increase of fifteen in the membership.

METHODIST.

Cardiff has been chosen as the meeting-place of next year's Wesleyan Conference.

A new chapel has been opened at Freckleton. The cost of the building is estimated at £1300.

There are, according to returns just received, 33,523 church members in the Methodist Church in South Africa, being an increase of 2533 for the year.

The thirty-sixth anniversary of Bristol-street Chapel, Malmesbury, has been celebrated, when special services were conducted by Rev. J. Sheppard.

A form of "The Reception of New Members," prepared and presented to Conference, has been remitted to the District Committees for consideration.

The Itinerancy question gave rise last week to a long and animated debate at the Wesleyan Conference, the pros and cons being fully presented. Practically, however, the matter is shelved for another year.

The Wesleyans in St. John's, Newfoundland, have lost through the great fire their principal church, also their College, Training School, and a block of buildings, worth some £10,000.

The bequest of £5000, left by Sir William M'Arthur for the purpose of founding scholarships in the Methodist College, Belfast, becomes available this year, and will be a considerable augmentation to the endowments of that institution.

Says The Methodist Times: The conversation in the Pastoral Session on the proposed extension of the ministerial term was intelligent and amiable, and seemed to indicate that the opposition to the proposed modification was not nearly so violent or so extensive as had been asserted.

The President of the Wesleyan Conference says that in Austria at this time there perhaps is a sharp struggle going on for liberty, and a lady of very high rank, the Baroness Langenau, has taken up the cause of Methodism, and with all her might, and all her means of influence, and with intense devotion and zeal, is prosecuting the rights of Christian liberty at the very headquarters of power in Austria.

The memorial-stones of the new Central Hall, Bradford, were laid last week. The building will cost £4700. On the ground floor are to be two large shops, one on either side of the vestibule and entrance-hall, which will give access to the chapel and schools. The latter were built twelve years ago at the rear of the chapel, and as they are roomy and convenient they will not be interfered with by the present scheme. On the first floor will be the Central Hall. Galleries are to occupy three sides, and altogether there will be accommodation for about a thousand people.

PRESBYTERIAN.

We learn that Durham Church, Gateshead, is now freed from debt.

Rev. Dr. Thain Davidson is going to spend August at Colwyn Bay, and will (D.V.) preach every Lord's Day at the Presbyterian Church.

The Boys' Brigade formed in connection with Westbourne-grove Church (Rev. Dr. Morison), have spent a week in camp at Hayling Island, near Portsmouth.

Quite a number of English Presbyterian missionaries will be leaving for China in the autumn at the end of their furlough. Two new missionaries will go out at the same time—Messrs. Sandeman and Steele, the former of whom has just been ordained in Edinburgh.

The memorial missionary steamer, Henry Henderson, built for the Foreign Missions Committee, has been launched at Govan. It was named by Mrs. A. L. Bruce, a daughter of Dr. Livingstone. The vessel is intended for the African Mission, and has cost £1200.

The Sustentation Fund Committee and assessors appointed by the Synod to inquire into the working of the fund, will recommend that the stipends of all ministers of aid-receiving congregations be £200, this amount having been hitherto paid only to ministers whose congregations have raised a minimum of £110.

Rev. John Watson, before commencing his sermon in Sefton-park Church, Liverpool, on Sunday week, addressed the children with special reference to the holidays, and as to the best means of securing enjoyment when away from home. He strongly urged them to cultivate a spirit of unselfishness, and to look to the happiness of others as well as their own.

It is announced that the £6000 left to the English Presbyterian Church by the late Mr. George Duncan was apportioned thus: £1000 for the Foreign Mission Fund, £1000 for the Home Mission Church Extension Fund, £1000 for the College Endowment Fund, £1000 for the Widows and Orphans' Fund, £1000 for the Aged and Infirm Ministers' Fund, £500 for the Jewish Mission Fund and £500 for prizes in Higher Instruction. Mr. Duncan died worth a quarter of a million sterling.

Friends of the late Rev. W. Burton Alexander will be interested to learn of a very pleasing circumstance which occurred the other day, testifying to the esteem in which he was held by his late congregation at Whitefield Presbyterian Church. Shortly before his death in November last he resigned his charge, owing to the state of his wife's health, and his attached congregation at once set about contributing toward presenting a testimonial. His sudden death put a stop to the movement at the time, but about ten days ago a beautiful clock reached Mrs. Burton Alexander, bearing the inscription: "Presented to Rev. W. Burton Alexander in token of the love and esteem of his sympathising congregation."

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Five Friends attended the Grindelwald Conference, and Joseph Radley, of Lisburn, memorised in English a poem of welcome by Pastor Strasse, to the visitors, in the German tongue. Occasion offered several times for holding up Friends' views of truth to the Conference.

Joseph James Neave has been liberated by Friends to visit St. Petersburg, having much upon his heart the spiritual condition of the people of Russia. Much prayer ascended on his behalf, that he might be guided and made a blessing to the suffering and sorrowing ones wherever he might go, and way be opened for him everywhere.

The Bradford Adult School, to the number of three hundred, teachers and scholars, have paid a very pleasant visit to Belfast and district, and have been hospitably entertained by the Friends' school there. After guiding their English visitors about, it was a pretty sight to see the Belfast teachers and scholars waiting on them at table during dinner and tea, thus showing the brotherhood existing between the English and Irish schools.

There are about six thousand young Friends members of Christian Endeavour Societies, and during the great Convention at New York an "International Christian Endeavour Union of Friends" was formed, and officers appointed for the year. English Friends have a Union of many years in operation, of a somewhat similar character, yet they might profit much by joining this great international organisation, and a revival might be the outcome.

Some time ago the village of Baabdât, in Syria, requested to join the Friends' Church of Lebanon. Since then there have been religious meetings held among the people. This has, doubtless, angered the Maronite priests, and as a consequence, on the 10th ult., about twenty of them set on Theophilus Waldmeier, the missionary, and but for the coming of travellers along the way, fatal consequences might have ensued. The authorities have the matter in hand, but meantime Gospel work is maintained, and it is hoped all will be overruled for good.

SALVATION ARMY.

Adjutant Abdul Aziz, a convert from Mohammedanism, is now in charge of the Salvation Army social work in Bombay. Under him two native female officers have started work for women.

We regret to announce the death of a worker in connection with the Salvation Army in Cardiff—viz., Captain Matthews, of the Rescue Home in Moira-terrace. During four years the deceased lady held the position of house "mother" under the local superintendent, Mrs. Gosmith.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Rev. Dr. Wilson, Presbyterian minister, of Cootown, has been appointed an Assistant Commissioner on the Educational Endowments Commission.

The Congregational Church, York-street, Dublin, which Rev. H. H. Scullard, M.A., is the pastor, is about to be improved and a new lecture room and schoolroom added at a cost of £600.

Lord Plunket, Archbishop of Dublin, has issued an earnest appeal to members of the Church of Ireland for funds to enable him to open free of debt, in September, the Episcopal Reformed Church at Madrid, now in process of erection, at a cost of £10,000, of which nearly £8500 has already been obtained.

Miss Mary McGeorge, M.D., the first duly qualified female medical missionary sent out to India by the Irish Presbyterian Church, who is now home on furlough, has been delivering in Randalstown and the neighbourhood addresses on Zenana Mission work, which have attracted great attention.

The income of the Irish Methodist Home Mission Fund for the year just closed was about £13,000, and was the largest it has had for a long time. This state of the fund, however, is mainly owing to a donation of £500 presented to the treasurers at the late Conference by Mr. James Hunter, of Doagh, and also to the fact that a Southern Methodist has given a donation of £250.

Temperance Notes.

The Japanese are said to be taking to drink.

Among the Siamese, it is stated that there is hardly a sober man among a hundred.

In China, the proportion of men and women who drink spirits is said to be 60 per cent. of the population.

A Temperance Union has been formed at Hazel Grove, with all the ministers of the town—who, it might be stated, are teetotallers—as vice-presidents.

Miss C. A. Gray, Continental missionary of the Good Templars, recently planted the Order in Leipzig, by instituting the "Gute Hoffnung" (Good Hope) Lodge.

The Good Templar Order, which was introduced into the North German Province of Schleswig, in 1883, has continued to make such progress that there are now over two thousand members in Germany.

At Dewsbury, at a Women's Conference, Mrs. Septimus Buss (of the B.W.T.A.) read a valuable paper, on "The Licensing Laws." Great earnestness and enthusiasm characterised the whole series of meetings.

In an important letter to the editor of The Birmingham News, Mr. Joseph Malins calls timely attention to the threatened danger to young men arising from the growing practice of granting drink licences to athletic clubs.

The annual conference of the British Temperance League, recently held in Batley, was an admirable success. Dr. J. Edmonds, of London, read a remarkable paper on "The Drink Crave," which elicited much discussion.

In connection with Irish Methodist Sunday-schools, of which, according to the report just issued, there are 316, with 2747 officers and teachers and 18,639 volumes in the libraries, there are 228 Bands of Hope and 25,523 members.

The autumnal meetings of the B.W.T.A. will be held in York, during the week beginning October 10. In connection with these the annual meetings of the Yorkshire Women's Christian Temperance Union, in affiliation with the B.W.T.A., will take place.

A series of open-air Temperance meetings have been held during the summer months at Tennymount, Belfast, and addressed by Messrs. Coulter, Glasgow, and Herring, of the Irish Temperance League, and a goodly number have been got to sign the total abstinence pledge.

When Mrs. Massingberd, of the B.W.T.A., and a vice-president of the United Kingdom Alliance, succeeded to her father's estates, one of her first acts was to close the "Massingberd Arms," and to reopen it on temperance lines. She has also established a large and flourishing coffee tavern in Bournemouth.

At the recent annual meetings of the Free Methodist Church, Rev. T. Thornley reported a year of sustained activity and progress in the temperance work. There is a total increase of sixty-nine organisations, and 8415 members. The Sunday-schools of the denomination show an increase of twenty-one thousand pledges.

"People have been making a great shout about the Direct Veto," said the lessee of a big public-house in Liverpool, "but if it were not for the people who attend chapel, I might shut up, my profit would be gone. Its not the poor working-men who keep public-houses open, but the so-called 'respectable' people."

Great excitement was caused in the U.S.A. House of Representatives, Washington, on Thursday last, by the reading of an extract from a book recently written by Mr. Watson, one of the representatives for Georgia, declaring that "in the present Congress drunken members reeled about the aisles, and drunken speakers debated grave issues." These statements were received with a storm of hisses. Mr. Watson, however, reiterated that every word in the book was literally true, and he would be ready to defend every assertion made therein. Renewed and prolonged hisses almost drowned the voice of the speaker as he made his last remarks. The House appointed a committee to investigate Mr. Watson's charges.

RETIREMENT OF MR. GEORGE HATTON.

Dear Sir,—May I beg space in the columns of The Christian to return my grateful thanks to the large number of friends who have so very kindly sent me letters of love and sympathy during the last few weeks?

Not a few of these notes have contained monetary gifts, large and small; and it has been a great source of pleasure to myself to pay these over to the Mission account.

During the past thirty years and more, many of the communications received from God's servants through The Christian have been a great source of comfort to me, particularly in times of discouragement and depression, and I feel sure that I may, with confidence, leave the Lord's work in connection with our loved Mission in the hands of God's stewards who have hitherto taken so deep an interest in it.—Sincerely yours,

Geo. Hatton.

CHILDREN'S HOLIDAY HOME.

President—George Williams, Esq.

THIS Home at Foots Cray, Kent, has been opened for the benefit of poor sickly children connected with the several Mission Halls occupied by the Society, all in localities where the poorest classes reside, and who are totally unable to pay for a holiday, and yet most urgently in need of it. The Home provides accommodation for 18 children at a time. The cost of each child is 6s. per week. Last year over 300 poor little things received the benefit, who found it to be a real boon.

To continue this for the present year an earnest appeal is hereby made to sustain this truly charitable work. Help in any form will be gratefully received by the Secretary, as under; or by the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., at the Bank, 54, Lombard-street, London, E.C.; or the Editor of The Christian.

HOMES FOR

AGED CHRISTIAN BLIND MEN & WOMEN,

77 to 69, HANLEY ROAD, CROUCH HILL, LONDON, N.

WILL READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN" kindly render aid under the following circumstances:—£250 is all that is required to extinguish the debt on these Homes. A special and final effort is being made to do this by the 21st of this month, the date of the Founder's jubilee. Unless this is done, conditional promises of help cannot be claimed. With noble generosity subscribers have given; we are now compelled to appeal to other friends for help.

We plead for 82 blind sufferers. A thankoffering for the invaluable boon of sight will be heartily welcomed, either for the general maintenance or jubilee memorial fund.

Contributions, however small, will be gladly received if sent to the Founders and Hon. Superintendents, Rev. H. and Mrs. BRIGHT, 77, Hanley-road; or to Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, Office of The Christian, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C. c709

St. Giles' Christian Mission

CHILDREN'S HOLIDAY FUND.

The Holiday Season is close upon us, and the Children attending the Sunday Schools of the St. Giles' Christian Mission are anxiously looking forward to their Annual Treat. Last year, in addition to giving a Day's Outing to

1500

Little Ones, drawn chiefly from the Courts and Alleys of St. Giles', we were enabled to send considerably over 200 for a fortnight in the country. We are anxious to do at least as much this year.

WILL YOU HELP?

Donations will be most thankfully acknowledged if sent to our Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard St., E.C., or to Mr. W. Wheatley, Superintendent St. Giles' Christian Mission, 4, Ampton St., Regent Sq., W.C.

FRESH AIR FOR POOR CHILDREN.

Mr. Hill should be addressed Prince's Retreat, Buckhurst-hill, Essex.

"GIVE THE CHILD

A Neat Illustrated four-page Card addressed to Parents who send their Children to the public-house to "Fetch the Beer."

By G. E. MORGAN, M.A.

A useful adjunct to evangelistic and temperance work. See opinions of eminent Christian workers:—

"'Give the Child a Chance' is capital. Poor lambs! I was quite outwitted lately at our Band of Hope. I asked, 'How many of you this week had to go for beer?' Almost all the hands went up, but one lad exclaimed, 'I don't sip as I used to!'"—Miss Annie Macpherson.

"Admirable. I wish it a wide circulation."—Mr. Robert Anderson, LL.D.

"I like it more than I can say."—Dr. Barnardo.

"A capital thing! We intend to work it well."—Mr. W. S. Caine.

"Excellent and greatly needed. . . Delighted to take some."—Mr. F. N. Charrington.

"I like your card immensely."—Rev. S. A. Selwyn.

"Will be productive of very much good."—Mr. John Cory.

"I admire your ingenuity. There's a great deal to do and the time is short."—Mr. T. A. Denny.

"I like your card very much."—Rev. Newman Hall.

"I have long felt that something was required. It will do an immense amount of good."—Mr. George Holland.

"It seems to meet a great want very effectively."—Rev. Hugh Price Hughes.

"Just what is needed. Constantly bewailing the evil it is designed to remedy."—Mr. John Kirk (Ragged School Union).

WILL POSITIVELY CURE

THE MOST SEVERE FORMS OF THE FOLLOWING AILMENTS:—

COLDS.

Madame ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-Nos Castle:—"Madame Patti has found the Carbolic Smoke Ball very beneficial indeed, and the only thing that would enable her to rest well at night, when having a severe cold."

CATARRH.

Rev. HENRY S. LUNN, M.D., writes from 5, Endsleigh-gardens, London, N.W.; November 16th, 1891:—"I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

ASTHMA.

Miss HUDDLESTON writes from Walmersley House, near Bury, Lancashire, 15th October, 1891:—"Miss Huddleston is finding the Carbolic Smoke Ball a great blessing for Asthma. She is very glad to say it is doing her a great deal of good when hope had almost gone."

BRONCHITIS.

Dr. H. G. DARLING, M.D., Linden-cottage, Shepherd's Well, Kent, writes, 18th April, 1892:—"I had used the Carbolic Smoke Ball only a few times when it gave me immediate relief—although I am 83 years of age and have suffered more than one-third of that time from Bronchitis complicated with Asthma."

DEAFNESS.

Mrs. KINGSLEY writes from Woking Village, Surrey, May 10th, 1892:—"I have very great hopes of being able to hear quite well by the end of the month. My whole throat was in a dreadful state, and when we consider I have been deaf since 1884, I think the improvement in the two months since I commenced using the Carbolic Smoke Ball is wonderful."

One CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL will last a family several months, making it the cheapest remedy in the world at the price—10/- post free.

The CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL can be refilled, when empty, at a cost of 5/- post free. Address:—

FORTIETH SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS.—A SEVERE CASE.

The patient is Mr. JAMES DODGE, of 5, BLANCHARD-STREET, LONDON FIELDS, HACKNEY. He came to me on the 1st of December last. He had suffered from bronchial attacks in the winter for forty years. They had become worse of late years, and the case had become one of Chronic Bronchitis and Asthma. Attacks of breathing were very bad, so that he dared not lie down.

In two months he writes me:—"Your medicine (of which I procured a second supply) has acted like magic. I take my rest quite peaceably now. My breathing is wonderfully restored. I shall recommend your treatment wherever I go."

LETTER from an OLD PATIENT—a CASE of SEVERE CHRONIC COLD.

Mr. S. E. WORTON, R.A.M., of South End House, ELLAND, writes me:—"Dear Sir,—Nearly thirteen years ago I was a patient of yours. I need hardly say how thankful I am that, under God, your treatment of me was blessed to my complete restoration to health. Two or three friends of mine have also benefited exceedingly from your treatment. I now write you on behalf of another," &c., &c.

NOTE.—CONSULTATIONS FREE at Coombe Lodge, Peckham, on TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings only. No charge except the usual charge for three or six weeks' supply of medicine. All Patients should read the Book first.

TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN."

Dear Friends,—I feel constrained to make an earnest appeal to you for special aid, under circumstances of peculiar and pressing need, for carrying on our work among the little ones.

We have had serious illness in Stepney-causeway and scarlet fever at Feltham, involving much anxiety and expense.

Our last year's accounts closed with a large balance on the wrong side, and during the year many of the dear friends on whom I have relied for help in times of need have passed from works to rewards.

Under these circumstances, I do most earnestly appeal to you for prompt and generous aid to prevent the sad necessity of stopping any branch of the work.

Trusting my great need will be accepted as my excuse for this plea,—I am, sincerely yours,

MARIE HILTON.

THE HOP PICKERS' MISSION.
ALTON DISTRICT.
The object of this Mission is to erect tents for the use of the poor Pickers during their stay in this neighbourhood. Last year six tents were erected in the parishes of Selborne, Binsted, Holybourne, Worldham, and Bentley. Each tent was fitted up with seats, lamps, a platform, pictures, Scripture texts, and temperance wall-papers. Tea was provided every night, magic-lantern exhibitions, and Gospel addresses, which were listened to with marked attention. The moral and spiritual good done to these people is evident. The testimony of the magistrates and their clerk is that since the tents have been worked, crime has decreased 75 per cent. We have seen men wholly given up to vice, reformed and now filling good situations. More tents are required for this year.—S. CHINN, Village Pastor, Superintendent. c2459

THE CURE OF CONSUMPTION

BRONCHITIS AND ASTHMA.

DR. ALABONE'S REMEDIES.

Why the success of these remedies all barriers have been broken down, and it is now an acknowledged fact that CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, and ASTHMA are curable by this specific treatment, many thousands of cases having been pronounced as hopeless.

THE WHOLE OF THE REMEDIES ARE NOW, FOR THE FIRST TIME, AVAILABLE TO THE PUBLIC, and can be obtained from any chemist. Agent: J. Howard, 21, Queenhithe, London, E.C.

Dr. CRONIN, M.D., writes:—"You have done wonders for my patient. I hardly thought he could have improved so much under the treatment."

C. FAIRBAIRN, M.D., C.S., writes:—"The success of your treatment of Consumption is simply marvellous. I have had no less than 60 CASES OF CURE."

"Your remedy for Consumption has PROVED A SUCCESS in my own case, after having been GIVEN UP BY SEVERAL EMINENT PHYSICIANS."—T. YOUNG, L.R.C.P., L.R.C.S., &c.

W. WATSON DAVIES, M.D., L.R.C.S. writes:—"I have great pleasure in stating that a near and dear relative of mine, who was in an ADVANCED STAGE OF CONSUMPTION when I commenced your treatment (several members of her family having died of that disease), is now wonderfully improved in all respects, and has entirely lost her cough."

Members of the medical and other professions are testifying to the extraordinary results obtained from the use of these remedies.

"A narrative taken from real life, and given to us in a very felicitous manner by the descriptive pen of Dr. Elder Cumming, of Glasgow. Dr. Cumming is well-known to the religious public as one of the most attractive speakers at the Keswick Convention; and he uses the incidents, here so thrillingly sketched, of the experiences in the heart and life of a very remarkable woman to set before his readers the nature of sanctification and complete consecration. The whole picture is drawn by the hand of a master, and cannot fail in many ways to give great interest to the reader."—Dublin Evening Mail.

"We met with this remark in the volume before us, which, as 'Christ and the Scriptures' is its great theme, we take to be its keynote: 'Christians on their deathbed invariably look to Christ alone, and to the mercy of God exclusively. They then understand clearly "righteousness without works." They see eternal life as the free gift of God.' 'Start with this,' adds the author; as much as to say, 'As you would desire to end, so seek to begin and continue.'"—Gospel Messenger.

NOTES FOR WORKERS.

MEN and women sigh and long for the mountains, the seaside, and other scenes of rest and relaxation from work and worry. Happy they who can please themselves as to when and where they go for respite from town life and its weariness; but there are some who cannot get away from work and duty, and others who from experience only too painfully realise that change merely do good while they last. For all such we have a kindly word, and we rejoice that we can point them to a course able to do more for them than sea-breezes, and that without leaving home.

It is possible to produce upon the human system by other means just those effects which mountain air or the salt-laden breezes of the sea bring about, and that in an equally natural manner. The application of Odo-Magnetism is the means to which we refer, and it is beyond doubt that it is the finest method of invigorating the human system to which man has ever had access. It can always be in operation, and what a boon this is to those who through stress of work, duties or circumstances are unable to leave home. It not only secures fitness for work while in work, but it repairs any mischief that may have been wrought by previous over-taxation or brain-fag. It perfects organic action, nourishes the system generally, and gradually secures restoration to health in the fullest sense of the word. All its results are permanent, yet this treatment that can do so much is simple in the extreme; there are no rules to be observed, legitimate pursuits are not restricted in any way, and it involves no inconvenience whatever.

A writer has truly said, "This is a railway age of bustle and activity," and it is well to know that there is such a ready means of maintaining the brain power and recuperative force necessary to withstand the wear and tear of nineteenth-century life.

Rev. F. B. GRANT, Wolferlow Vicarage, Worcester.

May 3, 1892.—"I have been quite cured of the Rheumatism I had in my arm; grateful thanks for your Appareil Magnetique. My wife also is feeling very much stronger since she adopted your system; accept our thanks for all your skill."

Rev. J. ATKINS, Walmore Hill, Gloucester.

May 10, 1892.—"I am glad you retain my name as a reference—please continue so to do. Any patient that may apply to me will get the highest recommendation. I obtained a life benefit from your Treatment, and I am stronger now than I was years ago when I applied to you. But for your treatment of my case, I should have been dead and buried long ago. I cannot say more, but this is true."

Mr. A. FIELDING, 18, Lee Bank Road, Edgbaston, Birmingham.

May 19, 1892.—"My faith in your treatment of disease is stronger than ever. Last winter, though very trying, found me quite prepared for it, and I have during all weathers pursued my every-day work with comparative ease, while many around me have been laid aside. This has been a surprise to many of my friends, as well as to myself, but I quite believe your Treatment, with God's blessing, has secured this."

Those who desire to know what a simple course of treatment without physic can do—even in the most chronic sufferers—are invited to write to Mr. B. CORSON GARRATT, 16, Finsbury Square, London, E.C. Advice may be had in any case gratis, and the above are selected from numbers of reports received from those who reckoned themselves without hope of relief.

The Christian.

☞ It is particularly requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan & Scott, and not to individual members. Communications for The Christian should be addressed to the Editor. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

All Advertisements for The Christian should be sent to Messrs. John Haddon and Co., Central Advertising Offices, Bouverie House, Salisbury-square, London, E.C., accompanied by remittance. (For Terms, see Page 2.)

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of Miss M. F. Cusack, the "Nun of Kenmare."

We are pleased to inform our readers that our next number will be wire-stitched, and will appear in a coloured wrapper.

Mr. Moody's meetings at Preston were held in a large hall accommodating several thousand persons. Recent experience shows the great importance of spacious buildings being taken for use during his missions. In cities and towns where there are halls of large capacity they should be secured, so that the working classes, whom it is so earnestly desired to reach, may not be turned away in disappointment from crowded places. The people everywhere seem to have an open ear; then let the Gospel in its plainness be presented to them by one whom they are everywhere anxious to hear.

Many readers have kindly responded to our request on behalf of the children, but there must still be some who, while looking forward to their own holiday, have forgotten the little ones whose only glimpse of "meadows green and blossoms wild" is gained in the annual Day in the Country. Many missionaries and Sunday-school superintendents, labouring in poor districts, look for some help from "The Christian Day in the Country Fund" towards the expenses which they find it more and more difficult to raise locally, owing to the general migration from the central districts of those who can afford to give. The Day in the Country is not merely a delight. It also gives new ideas of God and his works, and makes it possible for the teachers to use the wealth of illustration to be found in nature, and which cannot be so profitably employed if the children know nothing of God in nature.

Romish practices in the Church of England have virtually received legal sanction by the judgment of the Privy Council in the Bishop of Lincoln's case. In the past, fear of the law has, doubtless, deterred some clergymen from ritualistic acts, but this fear is hardly likely to operate in the future. A live Protestantism on the part of the people may, however, do much to prevent the spread of Romanism in our land. It is deplorable to find in very many parishes a signal absence of that love of the simple Gospel which, with God's blessing, would constitute the clergy true evangelists and faithful pastors.

The Convocation of Canterbury opened on Friday last in St. Paul's Cathedral with a ceremony which we have little patience to characterise. It was a Latin service—hymns, liturgy, sermon, all in Latin. The proceedings were, in our judgment, an utter travesty of Christian worship. An ecclesiasticism which excludes Christ is vain; when it goes to the length of blinding the eyes of men from the great Head of the Church, as this performance did, it is a deadly snare. In word as well as in deed Latinization seems to be advancing in the Church of England. In the midst of it all, we thank God that there are many good and true witnesses alike among the ministers and active members of the Church.

Having the deepest sympathy with the objects, and rejoicing in the success, of the "National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children," we have much pleasure in receiving the following intimation to our readers from the Hon. Director, Rev. Benjamin Waugh:—

We know of no other paper whose readers so constantly and generously (unsolicited) evince such practical sympathy with the objects of our Society; and we shall be glad, if an opportunity occurs, if you would kindly convey to them our very sincere appreciation of their help.

We hope many of our readers take The Child's Guardian, the monthly organ of the Society, which is full of pathetic and appalling records of inconceivable cruelty and brutality to helpless little ones, and of the almost invariable conviction of those against whom proceedings are taken by the Society.

The "Brief Narrative of Facts" annually published by the venerable and revered George Müller, of Bristol, has just appeared (Nisbet, 6d.). It tells of the exercise of faith and patience, in many respects greater than during any part of the previous period of fifty-eight years during which "The Scriptural Knowledge Institution for Home and Abroad" has existed, and of which the Orphan Houses form a part. We are obliged to defer to next week our extracts from this touching narrative; we only insert the following, which shows that the teaching of the Keswick Convention has been given for over half a century by this faithful servant of God.

At my last meeting in Berlin I gave the Scriptural reasons why believers in the Lord Jesus should never be discouraged under the greatest difficulties.

That the chief business for each believer in Christ is, day by day, to seek to be happy in God.

I stated how believers can know, from the Holy Scriptures, that they shall be saved.

How they can ascertain the will of God under particular difficult circumstances.

I pointed out that we should seek to know God as He has revealed Himself in the Holy Scriptures.

I encouraged my hearers to have godly habits, such as those of reading the Bible every day, having family prayer morning and evening, and setting apart seasons for prayer as often as possible, &c.

I remarked that we should seek to have God Himself for our portion.

And urged upon the congregation to have but one single object for their whole life, viz., to glorify God, and to be consecrated entirely to his service.

One of the boasted performances of the Higher Criticism is a dissection of the Pentateuch into parts and portions assigned to various unknown writers who lived in different periods of Israelitish history. Many scholars of independent mind reject this theory as not proven; thousands of reverent Christians who study their Bibles, reject it as absurd in some respects, and in its entirety "not of faith." Those who have been disturbed by the fascinating manner in which the enemy has sowed the critical tares, will be glad to learn that in a pamphlet, just published, Rev. J. M. Denniston, M.A., examines the pretensions of criticism, and, in a practical manner, vindicates the integrity of the book of Genesis. The title of the essay is: Elohim and Jehovah, or the Employment of the Divine Names from Genesis I. to Exodus VI, (6d. Morgan and Scott.) The pages throw much light upon the inspired narrative.

A correspondent in India writes us privately with regard to a communication which appeared some weeks ago concerning the Eurasians: "After many years' experience amongst my countrymen and all classes in India, I beg to mention (1) that the intermarriages are not necessarily sinful; (2) that the present Eurasians are mostly descendants of inter-marriages that belonged to former generations. Many of the old families here go back for nearly a century, and have in their ranks some of our brightest and best and purest Christian brethren and fellow-workers. In saying this I am not denying that sinful connections do often occur, both Eurasian and European." Although the writer does not write for publication we feel it right to insert this portion of his letter, and we much regret if any misconception causing pain was occasioned by the communication referred to.

In reading the Pope's recent utterance in regard to the Jews, we are irresistibly reminded of the graphic picture which Bunyan has given us of the disabled giant pope, who could only sit and grin at those who passed by. We must shut our eyes to all history if we are to accept the Pope's statement that Rome's sole mission was persuasion, not persecution. That anything savouring of violence is contrary to the teaching of Christ we readily admit; but when the Pope goes on to assert that it is equally contrary to "the prerogative of his Vicar," we remember the myriads of martyr-fires which Rome has lighted and are bound to dissent.

We feel sure many will fully sympathise with Mrs. Hilton under the circumstances detailed in her appeal which appears on another page. The need is great and pressing; surely such a fact has only to be made known to call forth prompt and generous aid.

To all those who are interested in the "servant question"—and what Christian householder is not?—a paper on the subject in the July number of The Fortnightly Review will possess much importance. The writer has dealt with the topic in a sympathetic spirit; and if Lady Jeune's article does not deal so deeply as we could have wished with those relations between employer and employed that are all the more satisfactory for being brought under the influence of the Divine rule, there is much in it that may awaken a feeling of consideration for those who are too often in our household and yet not of it.

Sir George Findlay in his examination the other day before the Royal Commission on Labour stated that the railway company which he represented, the London and North Western, gives permanent employment to no fewer than 61,000 men, and that during the past thirty years they had had only three strikes. Sir George said that in his opinion the true preventive of strikes was to be found neither in legislation nor Board of Trade control, nor arbitration, but in the cultivation of a good understanding between the men and their employers, and in the establishment of sick, accident, and benefit funds fostered and assisted by the Directors, so as to show that the employers take as great an interest in their moral and material welfare as a private employer would do in the case of valued servants.

The disastrous effect of strikes was clearly brought out in the evidence of one of the representatives of the Trades Unions, Mr. Forman, who has had experience of several large conflicts between capital and labour in Ireland. Mr. Forman stated that a strike upon one of the railways in Ireland resulted in 250 of the men who took part in it losing their employment, and cost the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants £3000. When to this amount is added the sum lost by the men, some idea may be formed of the misery which follows in the train of such a contest.

In a very suggestive article on the parables contained in Luke xvi. and xvii., in the current issue of The Expositor, Professor Milligan shows that not only was our Lord's life one of ministry, but what may be called his reward, in the glory, is one of service! (Matt. xx. 28; Luke xii. 35-37). He writes:

The Son of man seen in vision by St. John, was "clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about at the breasts with a golden girdle" (Rev. i. 13); that is, He was clothed like a priest engaged in active service. The glory of our Lord in heaven, therefore, is still the glory of service, and in promoting the happiness of all whom He has redeemed, He finds his own most blessed reward.

In view of this, the precept comes with exceeding force: "Whosoever will be great among you let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant" (Matt. xx. 26, 27).

Forms of Inspiration.

We showed (July 14) the root signification of Inspiration to be such a communication as is certified to the consciousness of him receiving it as the very Word of God. The effect is ever this, whatever the channel of the communication may be. The inspired man has a clear discovery of the mind of the Lord, the ability to perceive what God's mind is, and the utterance needed to give it adequate expression in speech or writing.

We have now to look at the forms which Inspiration has taken. While one in essence, Inspiration has many forms. The Divine voice has not always come in one way; the revealed mind of God has not elected to flow in one bed. God "at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets" (Heb. i. 1). There is no monotony in this grand theme. At one time God spake to man through one sense, at other times through another. Sometimes He addressed the eye, sometimes the ear, and sometimes the hidden soul within. At one time the voice is soft and low, felt rather than expressed; at other times it is loud as "the sound of many waters" and terrible as "the voice of words," which voice they that heard entreated that it should not be uttered to them any more. Not infrequently the waking hour and the conscious moments are filled in by Him who is wonderful in counsel; but there are occasions when, as Job tells us, "in a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed, He openeth the ears of men and sealeth their instruction." Hence we must be prepared for a many-sided view of this subject, and must be ready to welcome the light along whatever Scriptural line it may come.

Now, without affixing importance to the question of order in the enumeration, it would appear that considerable frequency attaches to that form of Inspiration which suggests the utterance of a secret. Frequent side-lights occur in the Holy Scriptures. There is the confidential whisper of God filling a noteworthy place in this connection. 1 Samuel ix. 15, 16, is an instance: "Now the Lord had told Samuel in his ear a day before Saul came, saying, To-morrow, about this time, I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him to be captain over my people Israel, that he may save my people out of the hand of the Philistines, for I have looked upon my people because their cry is come unto Me." Note the expression, "the Lord had told Samuel in his ear," literally, had uncovered his ear, lifted the lock of hair that lay upon it, and breathed the secret touching Saul's visit and distinction. The like view of inspiration is given in 2 Sam. vii. 27; 1 Chron. xvii. 25; and also Job xxxiii. 16.

Closely allied to the form of inspiration just named is a kindred form relating to the eye. Sometimes God's voice is a voice to be read rather than heard, and in such cases it is needful that the organ of vision rather than of hearing should be uncovered. It is in such terms Balaam describes the inspirational afflatus which moved him to speak (Num. xxiv. 2-4): "And Balaam lifted up his eyes, and he saw Israel abiding in his tents according to their tribes; and the Spirit of God came upon him. And he took up his parable and said: Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open [the man with the unclosed eye] hath said; he hath said who heard the words of God, who saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open [i.e., uncovered as to his eyes]."

It would appear that the uncovered eye and also the uncovered ear have to do alike with the outward and inward conditions of Inspiration; the uncovering taking effect sometimes in waking moments, and sometimes in sleep or trance. From 1 Sam. ix. 9, we learn that the prevalent form of Inspiration in the earlier times consisted in visions. The seer saw sights. "Beforetime in Israel, when a man went to inquire of God, thus he spake, Come and let us go to the seer; for he that is now called a prophet (nabee) was aforetime called a seer."

More immediate, and, therefore, more distinguished so far as the recipient is concerned, is that form of inspiration wherein Jehovah deigns to speak with his servant as friend with friend. It is in this connection that the prophetical rank of Moses is made to stand out above all compeers; and that we have in him such a distinct type of the prophetical office of Christ, who was Jehovah's Fellow. Our Lord and Saviour, as the revealer of the Father, speaking the Father's words, reproducing the Father's voice, the exponent in all things of the Divine mind, had no vision, no dream, no ecstasy, no trance. Such an experience would not have fitted in with the lofty position our Saviour held as one whose consciousness was sublimed at all times by uninterrupted communion with the Father. And of this feature in Christ, Moses was the typical forecast. Hence Numbers xii. 6-8: "If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known to him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream. My servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all mine house. With him will I speak mouth to mouth even apparently and not in dark speeches, and the similitude of the Lord shall he behold." So Deut. xxxiv. 10: "And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face."

Allied to this phase of our subject is that form of inspiration which was known by the name of Bath Kol, literally, the daughter of the voice, an expression which signifies the immediate and audible voice of God. According to Jewish tradition, this kind of revelation was given after the return from the captivity, and, on various occasions, it figured in our Lord's ministry: as, for instance, at his baptism and at his transfiguration; and further, when in answer to our Lord's call, "Father, glorify thy name," the voice from heaven said, "I have both glorified it and will glorify it again."

It is doubtless by way of contrast to the Bath Kol, or the immediate and audible voice of God, that Peter says, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy." The former depends on the quickness and fidelity of the ear that hears—the outer ear—and, therefore, is liable to be misinterpreted. Thus in the case just cited, some of the people said, "It thundered"; others that "an angel spake to Him;" while our Lord said, "This voice came not because of Me, but for your sakes." The audible communication was not needed by Christ Himself, since the conditions of communion with the Father were perfect; nor was He at any loss to make the Father known, seeing that He had been with Him before the birth of time.

And this leads us to note, in conclusion, the more sure word of prophecy of which Peter speaks. Why is it more sure? Because it is not dependent on the external form in which it may have come. While, in the first instance, God has imparted his communications, in varied modes, to his servants, yet when they came to utter them, to record them, whether in book form or discourse, "they spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Those visions, those revelations which they had, those communications which came from above, could not have been handed down to us had the men who received them been left to their own resources in giving them expression. But they were not. Hence it is said, 2 Tim. iii. 16, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God," i.e., is Divinely inbreathed. The Revised Version of this passage is unscholarly and greatly to be deplored, suggesting, without the slightest warrant, that there are Scriptures not inspired of God, whereas Paul states the exact contrary, namely, that every Scripture is. They, the inspired men of old, were guided in the words they used, the figures they employed, the form and the matter of their discourse. It only stands to reason that if a man is moved by the Holy host to speak, and if he speaks as he is moved thereby, the words he utters are inspired, and the result is a record infallible and authoritative. As this paper is already sufficiently long, we reserve what we have to say on Scripture's own witness to itself.

Science in Council.

The address from the Chair of the British Association, delivered last week in Edinburgh, is, in some respects, noteworthy. Certainly it indicates a crisis which, sooner or later, must be fairly faced. Just one hundred years ago, when in the same city Hutton published his book on the "Theory of the Earth," it was assumed that the same operations then existing and apparent were sufficient to account for the past history of our globe, whether recorded on its surface or buried in its depths. In these operations the denuding power of water played the principal part. The slowness of this process, however, demanded unlimited time. Lord Kelvin (perhaps still better known as Sir William Thomson) tells us of a conversation he had on this subject with one of the most eminent geologists of his time, during the recent meeting of the Association at Dundee. His friend asserted that Geology would admit absolutely no limit. Lord Kelvin said, "Would you not admit a thousand million years?" He said, "No." "Would you not admit a million million years?" The prompt answer was, "No. We admit no limit. We admit no possibility of a beginning, and no indication of a limit leading towards an end."

So long as geologists were permitted to draw unlimited drafts on the bank of time, none could say them nay. If there be an eternity to work in, then these forces, though slow and slight, may, in the passage of untold ages, produce stupendous results. But of late, researches in physical science have adduced reasons for believing that the existence of our planet is not so ancient as geologists were willing to suppose. Taking the data presented by the cooling of the earth and sun, and the retardation of the earth's rotation by tidal friction, eminent scientists like Lord Kelvin limit the possible period of our planet's history to twenty millions of years; while others, like Professor Tait, are unwilling to allow more than ten millions. Under these circumstances the speculations of geologists evidently demand revision. This, however, they are by no means willing to concede. The President of the British Association contends that the links in their chain of reasoning are as sound and strong as those by which the conclusions of physical science are upheld, and, in turn, they challenge the method of their opponents. It is frankly admitted that since both cannot be right, one must be wrong. The quarrel is complete, and we may patiently await its settlement.

Evidently it occurs to neither that both may be mistaken. Yet to outsiders, like ourselves, this seems by no means impossible. For, in both cases, the inferences rest on premises at best assumed rather than observed. "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?" is a question as pertinent to-day as when it was first put. All our theories concerning pre-historic time can never be more than probable. The Creator alone can tell us the story of creation. In the exact and experimental sciences errors are duly detected and easily expelled. Not so in sciences like Geology, which consist of happy guesses more or less confirmed by processes going on under present observation Our globe may have been formed after the same fashion by which it is now being slowly and imperceptibly changed. But it is at least equally possible that its origin may have been altogether different in character. Besides, we must take into account a fact which science always ignores. This world is not now what it was when God saw that it was very good. Since it was moulded by the Divine hand the blight of sin has fallen on it. It has been smitten by the hand that made it. Instead of the Garden of Eden with its fair fruits, man has now to toil in the wilderness with its thorns and thistles.

"Cursed is the ground for thy sake" is the sentence pronounced on the earth after the fall; and how deep and dreadful was the descent of this curse it is impossible to say.

There is, at any rate, one lesson to be learned from the dispute made so emphatic by the President's address. It is as valuable as it is simple. Let us never be anxious to reconcile Scripture with present and popular phases of scientific opinion. These are as changeable as the moon; whereas "the word of the Lord endureth for ever." We have often avowed our readiness to reconcile Genesis and Geology so soon as any one succeeds in reconciling the first edition of Sir Charles Lyell's treatise on that science with his last. This challenge is not likely to be accepted lightly. We have learned to be suspicious of all attempts to reconcile the statements of a Book claiming to be final with the surmises of a science which is professedly tentative and progressive. In patience we would possess our souls.

The Factor in Gospel Preaching

NO. II.

By REV. J. F. T. HALLOWES, Birmingham.

Our Lord on earth preached with burning and sustained zeal, and now that his personal ministry is withdrawn his ardour for the salvation and sanctification of souls largely expresses itself by giving to his ambassadors something of his earnestness. He, who Himself preached in the power of the Spirit, longs that that power may so rest upon his representatives that their preaching may have an unmistakable and all-round energy.

In addition to what I said in a former article (July 21) as to the fulness of the Spirit in energising a Gospel ministry, I would further remark that this same fulness can give a preacher an unmistakable interest in human souls, as distinct from an interest merely in the subject of the discourse. Dr. Horace Bushnell, speaking as a minister to ministers, confesses that we "easily lose the sense of persons or souls, and get our whole appetite set for propositions," that we "sometimes have a wholly disproportioned interest awakened in subjects as distinguished from men." Have we not all seen a preacher so interested in his subject and its proper development that he appears to forget his audience? He is in touch with the subject, out of touch with the people. This is pre-eminently characteristic of those hermit preachers, who are study-bound all the week, but it is not confined to these. Men who are in touch with their fellows in the parlour seem to get out of touch with them in the pulpit.

Preachers actually before their congregation need a great and practical sense of the presence of man; this the Holy Spirit can bestow on them by giving them a great and practical sense of the presence of God. In his light they will see what they ought to see, not only truth, but the men, women, and children to whom they are declaring it; and in gripping the truth they will not forget to grip human souls. And in their discourses they will be saved from degenerating into the essay style, which is the fatal defect of some ministers. The Spirit of God will prompt them to say things which lie close to the needs of the people, to utter pointed appeals fortified by a free use of the personal pronouns "you" and "thou," which are found plentifully interspersed through the apostolic sermons reported in the Acts.

Yet another element of power which comes to the Spirit-filled preacher is the reduction of his self-consciousness to a minimum. Reduce self-consciousness, and inevitably other blemishes are reduced, such as needless references to self, the affected manner, and those artificialisms of tone and gesture which are apt to prejudice the preacher in the eyes of the hearers at the very beginning of his sermon. The renowned French orator, Bossuet, urges that "the great end of preaching is the glory of God and the benefit of man." "The preacher," he says, "will not neglect the ornaments of elocution when he meets them in passing, but neither will he affect them, lest he thrust himself too conspicuously forward, since his duty is to be but as a mirror in which Jesus Christ appears in his truth."

That holy man and acceptable preacher Samuel Rutherford certainly fulfilled this duty, for we are informed that "in all his chief appearances for God in public he studied to disappear." Who but the Holy Ghost can bring the obtrusive, vain, applause-loving self in a man to the vanishing point. No doubt but that death can only be secured and maintained by the full inflow of the Spirit's life.

Nor must we forget that the Holy Ghost makes the preacher personal in the best sense of the word. He is the Privy Counsellor of the preacher who is thoroughly possessed by Him, giving him special messages to particular persons in the audience, so that these shall hear their circumstances described, their moral character, including their sins, depicted, and their doubts and difficulties satisfactorily handled. The Wesleyan evangelist, the Rev. James Caughey, before a great congregation, was suddenly prompted, he believed, by the Spirit of God, to draw in much detail two characters in succession, the one of a man, the other of a woman, and in language the reverse of complimentary. Mr. Caughey then bade the originals to stand up. After a pause a man and a woman slowly rose and stood trembling before the vast audience, thus confessing that their sin had found them out. After the service they remained as enquirers, declaring openly that God had, through the preacher, revealed them to themselves that day.

Well does the Holy Spirit understand the exact attitude Godward of each sinner or saint in a congregation, and thus He can instruct the preacher to say words that will suddenly burst like a flaming meteor into the dark firmament of some soul, revealing all manner of foul, unclean, and hateful things. Or, to use a Scripture metaphor, the Spirit can put such a weapon in the hands of his servants, that through them God's Word shall be "living and active, and sharper than any two-edged sword, and piercing even to the dividing of soul and spirit, of both joints and marrow, and quick to discern the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Heb. iv. 12, R.V.).

Once more, when the breath of God has swept like a storm over the Church, it not only brings much, but it carries away much. How often in great revivals has it swept away the full-written manuscript by which the preacher has been limited, and in which he has been unconsciously trusting. As such movements bring out men as preachers, who never thought they could preach, so they often bestow on men who have occupied the pulpit for years a confidence which encourages them to speak extempore, assisted, perhaps, by brief notes, which foster their ideas and do not fetter them. Pentecostal times tend to bring back Pentecostal methods. One of those methods was certainly extemporaneous address. And when the Spirit's baptism of power comes to the individual preacher, it very commonly inclines him to give up reading his written sermon. And this is not wonderful, for it renders more immediately available at the moment of utterance such treasures of thought as he actually possesses, and not seldom gives him ideas which are fresh to himself. This enlargement of the thought-fund, which can be drawn upon by the minister in the presence of the people, is due partly to the Spirit helping memory and quickening feeling into an intensity, which of itself ministers to the energy of thought, and partly also to the annihilation of that self-consciousness and fear of man which deprive the mind of its full productiveness.

When I was an undergraduate at Cambridge University, I had ample opportunities of observing the powerlessness of mere intellect in the spiritual realm; how little men of intellectual light and leading could do of themselves to enlighten human souls, and to lead them to Christ. And in my vacations I learnt the great companion lesson, for I used occasionally to attend the chapel of a young Baptist minister at King's-cross, London, whose ministry, unadorned by learning or eloquence, but gifted with the immeasurably greater power of the Holy Ghost, was a channel of salvation to hundreds of persons. Thus did this object-lesson of weakness in strength, and of strength in weakness, impress upon me afresh that the Holy Ghost is the indispensable factor in Gospel preaching.

Are the Words Inspired?

In the hearing of Charles II. some wise men were endeavouring to explain how it was that a vessel filled with water became no heavier when live fish were allowed to swim in it. The King ventured to call in question the assumed fact, whereupon a vessel duly charged with water, having been weighed, certain live fish were thrown in, and it was found, as every one not a philosopher would have predicted, to have gained in weight precisely the amount of the addition. Some one has asserted that the number of false "facts" in current circulation exceeds even the number of false theories. Be that as it may, there is great need at the present hour to examine with some care the premises on which very pronounced conclusions are supposed to rest.

In illustration of this we may refer to an argument recently adduced against the verbal inspiration of Scripture. It was brought forward at the Grindelwald Conference. Some time ago, under the signature of a well-known American preacher, it figured in the columns of a New York weekly as the first of certain weighty reasons for refusing to believe in the inerrancy of the Bible. It assumed this form: "There are four accounts of the inscription on the Cross, and not one of them agrees word for word with another. Such a marked difference on so simple a matter of fact as this," it is argued, "proves that the writers of the Gospels were not anxious about verbal accuracy." Then follows the weighty conclusion that whatever be the inspiration of the Scriptures, it does not prevent serious discrepancies in the language of diverse narrators describing the same fact or event.

Will it be readily believed that not one of the Evangelists professes to give the same thing as another? Of course every careful reader of the Bible remembers at once the different versions of the inscription contained in the four Gospels. Surely there could not be any doubt as to the "title" written by command of the Roman and placed over the head of our Lord. How, then, can we account for the variations? Simply by noting what each writer professes to give. To bring this out more clearly we will set down the four variant statements, putting the name of that which each one intended to note in capital letters to catch the eye of the reader. We take the words from the four Gospels in the order they have in the New Testament.

"And set up over his head his ACCUSATION written, This is Jesus the King of the Jews" (Matt. xxvii. 37).

"And the SUPERSCRIPTION OF HIS ACCUSATION was written over, The King of the Jews" (Mark xv. 26).

"And a SUPERSCRIPTION also was written over Him in letters of Greek and Latin and Hebrew, This is the King of the Jews" (Luke xxiii. 38).

"And Pilate wrote a TITLE and put it on the Cross. And the writing was, Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews" (John xix. 19).

Thus at a glance it is seen that the only one who professes to copy the title or writing is the Apostle John. The other three give respectively the ACCUSATION, the SUPERSCRIPTION OF THE ACCUSATION, and the SUPERSCRIPTION. If Christian ministers, instead of adopting at second hand the objections of infidels, whose acquaintance with Scripture can scarcely even be called superficial, were more carefully to examine without prejudice the words of the Book itself to which exception is taken, they would save themselves and their hearers from many a needless and cowardly and shameful surrender of truths the most vital.

THE MEANING OF SERVICE.

BIBLE READING.

By REV. HUBERT BROOKE.

Turn with me to Exodus xii. 24-27. When the traveller in days of old walked through Canaan he came here and there upon significant memorials by which the past dealings of God in blessing, deliverance, and victory had been marked. He might come in from the north-east of the land, and pass by where God had delivered Jacob from Laban, and had put up a pillar as a testimony. As he came further down into the land he would come to the place where the great altar was put up by the tribes to keep their descendants in remembrance that they belonged to Israel. Crossing over he would come to the place where stones were set up at Bethel, and would remember how God had delivered Israel from the hand of their enemies. If any one should ask, "What mean ye by this heap, pillar, and stone?" as they answered they would be telling continually of God's dealings in blessing in the past, and his covenants of mercy for the future.

As the Christian travels through God's Word he comes upon similar marks; and as he looks at them he finds revelations of what God has done and what He will do as the covenant God of his own people. There are land-marks not only for the Church, but for each single believer. Sometimes there is something in addition—there is a sign-post that is specially worth looking into and asking about. Amongst others in these first six books of the Bible, there is the sign-post in this twelfth of Exodus that marks the starting-point of Israel's experience and service. The children of God's people were intended to say to their parents: "What mean ye by this service?"—by that ordinance, and so on. In every case God intended the service to be something of such a striking character, that generation after generation as they grew up, were bound to say to their parents: "This is something out of the common; it is not like the rest of your life, or like the rest of the people of the world." And God who bade them ask the question informed them beforehand of the answer to give. Taking these five occurrences one by one, you will see they point out what ought to be in our lives as Christians, significant marks intended of God to direct attention and provoke inquiry, and that God's own answer ready to hand be given when people ask you what you mean.

THE LORD'S PASSOVER.

Notice first, that the Passover, besides other purposes to serve for Israel, was intended to serve this purpose, that year by year when they kept the festival, their children should ask them in time to come, saying: "What mean ye by this service?" Once a year something happened in Israel's life that the rising generation should always be asking about, and Israel was to be ready to give an answer. Thus God prepared for them, in days when written Scriptures were few and far between, a method by which the first great principles of his salvation should be handed down from father to son. The fathers should tell their children, and they should tell their children, so that every generation of God's people might know the wondrous works of God.

Here is the first question. As they kept the passover year by year, their children said: "What mean ye by this service?" They were told to give the answer: "It is the sacrifice of the Lord's passover which passed over our houses when He smote the Egyptians and delivered our houses." That is, they were to be taught what is generally meant by salvation. Of course that very full and wide word has far more in it than the matter of the forgiveness of sins. Nevertheless, in this sense it is intended to be something that marks the Christian life and service. So when we go to the Table of the Lord and our children say, "What mean ye by this service?" we ought to be ready at once to give an answer, as Israel was to give an answer: "It is the sacrifice of the Lord's passover," they said. "It is the memorial of Christ's sacrifice," we say, "when He smote the Egyptians—judged the world—and delivered our houses."

It is beautiful to notice that this answer points the children's inquiry to God. It was the Lord's passover from beginning to end. He provided the Lamb to be slain. He taught them to sprinkle the blood. He delivered them from the destroying angel; and do not forget that it was He who did it once for all. So we notice that in this passover sacrifice we have a picture of the foundation on which we stand, and on which God means his people to grow and build. It is an accomplished redemption finished by Christ once for all; a personal salvation imparted once for all; the forgiveness of sins once for all to those who come to Christ. It was the Lord who gave the Lamb, who sprinkled the blood, who delivered our houses. As the Apostle says in 1 Thess. i. 10, "Who delivered us from the wrath to come."

It is important to remember this. Notice the way in which Israel gave the answer—without a moment's hesitation as to the fact and as to the certainty of the fact. They never said: "It is the Lord's passover, who passed over our houses, and we hope He delivered us." They knew for a certain fact the foundation on which they rested; they knew for their own souls' rest and blessing that their redemption was accomplished. And though we may know it, we should be ready, for the sake of those who ask, to say again that there is no other foundation, no other starting-point, no other place from which to grow in the knowledge of God and to build for his glory than the present possession of forgiveness and assurance that in Christ we are received once for all.

Turn now to Exodus xiii. 6:—

Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the Lord. Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters. And thou shalt show thy son in that day, saying, This is done because of that which the Lord did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt. And it shall be for a sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes, that the Lord's law may be in thy mouth: for with a strong hand hath the Lord brought thee out of Egypt. Thou shalt therefore keep this ordinance in his season from year to year.

Here we have something bound up intimately, and according to God's will inseparably, with the lesson of the Passover—the lesson of the feast of unleavened bread. It was simply, and from beginning to end

THE LESSON OF SEPARATION.

In chapter xii. 15, you read, "Even the first day you shall put away leaven out of your houses"; verse 19, "There shall be no leaven found in your houses"; chapter xiii. 3, "There shall no leavened bread be eaten"; verse 7, "There shall no leavened bread be seen with thee." Here is thoroughgoing separation from beginning to end; first, leavened bread not to be eaten; then not to be found in their quarters nor to be seen: to be totally put away. We grasp but one-half of the first aspect of salvation if we do not see that after coming to Christ to be forgiven and cleansed from the past, there is an instant call from that moment of separation from whatever is meant by the word "leaven." We have to turn to the New Testament to know what it is. In Luke xii. 1, we read that Christ "began to say unto his disciples first of all, "Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy." Again in 1 Cor. v. 7, "Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast, not with the old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." Hypocrisy, malice, and wickedness are here given as things to be totally separated from the moment that we receive Christ as our salvation, and accept Him as our Paschal Lamb. Malice, the inward thought of evil; wickedness, the outward practice of evil.

When the Israelite started forth year by year for this feast—and to-day the natural Israel obey this command—we are told that, first of all, he had to cast out of his house all the leaven that he knew about. Then he went to the kneading trough, scraped and washed it in all parts, and if he found any leaven there he had to cast that out. Then he searched any place where leaven might be found; he lit a candle, and examined out-of-the-way corners. Then he lifted up his hands to God and said, "O God, I have cast out all leaven from my house; and if there is any left I do not know of, with all my heart I cast it out too." That is the separation to which God calls his redeemed and saved people.

And notice that it was as definite an act of Israel as the Passover Supper was. It is a strange thing that some people, who see no difficulty in instant and even sudden conversion, when it comes to separation and cleansing, think it must be spread over many years. Hypocrisy, malice, wickedness, must be cast out by degrees, though Israel cast them out in a moment at the command of God.

Let us make no mistake. There are plenty of other things for which we will need to come to God and ask forgiveness day by day. We who are teaching you here believe that there never comes a time in the Christian life when we do not need to say the Lord's Prayer from beginning to end, including the phrase, "Forgive us our trespasses." We need daily forgiveness as much as daily bread. But all hidden purposes of evil and their outward manifestation, the believer is called upon to separate himself from once for all.

And it was to be so striking a separation that the Israelitish children should say to their parents,

"WHAT MEAN YE BY THIS SERVICE?"

"Oh that the children of God's Israel to-day should be struck continually by the disappearance from their parents' lives of the things from which God has called them to be separate, and constrained to ask, "What mean ye by this service? Why don't you do those things that other people do?" We will not try to explain what things they are; they are things which other people allow themselves in, but which God's people are not to allow themselves in for a moment. They are to be ready with the answer at once, and say: "These things are done and those other things are not done because of that which the Lord did for us." So, you see,

THEY MUST BE QUITE CERTAIN

the Lord has done it, or they could not talk like that. Do not let us pretend any more. If we mean to serve God with all our hearts, and if we want to be what God would have us to be, let there be honesty in our own hearts before God. If any soul of us here is conscious of hypocrisy—unknown to our nearest friends, perhaps, but known to us—let God cast it out now before we get any further, with all our hearts trusting to God not only to cast it out, but to keep it out for ever.

In the same chapter we come to another point. After the Lord had commanded Moses as to the duty of dedication or sanctification of the firstborn to God, we read (Ex. xiii. 14): "It shall come to pass when thy son asketh thee in time to come, saying, What is this? that thou shalt say to him, By strength of hand the Lord brought us out from Egypt from the house of bondage." The same thing is brought up for the third time. First of all, it was a reason given for the Passover Supper as a remembrance of God's finished work; then the reason for the feast of unleavened bread as calling for separation from all conscious evil. Now they were called upon to give a reason for this sanctification. Notice that the Lord said, in the first place, "Sanctify unto me all the firstborn"; "Set apart all the firstborn"; "Sacrifice to the Lord all the firstborn"—sanctification, setting apart, and sacrifice; three different phrases for the same thing. Of course, you remember, when Israel was in Egypt and the judging hand of God was going through the land, the firstborn was representative of all Israel. In the firstborn God executed the judgment deserved by all Egypt. In the firstborn of Egypt God averted the judgment deserved by all Israel. They recognised the firstborn as representative of all their houses. Now, says God, accept my claim by sanctifying them, setting them apart, sacrificing them to God.

THESE FIRSTBORN BELONG TO ME;

That is where sanctification comes in—a deliberate handing over to God of the firstborn, to be his for ever. By-and-by, you know, God took, in place of this, man for man, the tribe of Levi. For every single firstborn of Israel had to be represented by a Levite. Not one single family was left out when God was taking the Levites instead of the firstborn. They were taken deliberately; hands were laid upon them, and they were waved as a wave-offering to God, and given over to Him for ever. God took them and used them.

Th t is what Go calls on his people to do—those whom He has redeemed from the destroying angel. Notice what happened here. They were called to sanctify, set apart, sacrifice to God—whichever phrase you like, or all three—the firstborn. In the New Testament He calls upon us to present and yield over our bodies a living sacrifice to God. You are to do exactly with your bodies, you who are members of the Church of the Firstborn, what Israel was told to do with their firstborn; they were to sanctify and set them apart deliberately to God once for all. Once for all. I know quite well that some people do not like that. Nevertheless, God says it. Remember this, consecrated Christians—When the Levites took the place of the firstborn, no Levite could be admitted to the full service of the sanctuary until he was definitely consecrated to God. There was to be the initial act before there came to be the practical life of consecration.

I do not say—I do not believe any of our brethren would say—for a moment that there must be in your lives one conscious moment when this sanctification took place, but I plead with you earnestly to be honest enough to say that there may be a conscious moment. We do not say you must all have a conscious moment when you are converted, but you ought to know you are converted. So, though there may not be in your lives a conscious moment when you were consecrated to God, you must admit that there may be that moment; and whether you know it or not, this is certain, if you are Christians, redeemed by his blood and separated from conscious evil, you ought to know that you are sanctified to God and belong to Him and are yielded to Him, body, soul, and spirit, for ever.

Then when your children see that mark in you and say, "What mean ye by this service?" or when younger Christians speak to you because of something in your lives by which you are manifesting a walk with God, and say, "Why are you not like other people? Why do you not do this or that that other people do, and other Christians too?" you will be able to reply that it is because of what has happened in your life. You will not take pride in saying you are sanctified, but you will rejoice to say that the Lord hath delivered your house; the Lord hath cleansed your soul; the Lord hath separated you from evil.

SANCTIFIED UNTO OBEDIENCE.

Turn now to Deut. vi. 20, where we read: "When thy son asketh thee in time to come, saying, what mean the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments which our Lord hath commanded you? Then thou shalt say unto thy son: We were Pharaoh's bondsmen in Egypt, and the Lord brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand"—always going back to "The Lord redeemed us"—one answer to a hundred questions—"the Lord commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the Lord our God, for our good always." And so, when the soul has obeyed the Lord's call, to be separated and sanctified, then comes in the question that puzzles so many nowadays, "What isobedience?" Here are the statutes and commandments and judgments of God, commanded of God for our good always.

In Psalm cv. you will see this is the great purpose of God. The story of God's marvellous works is there told that they might "observe his statutes and keep his laws." Do not think that this is merely Old Testament teaching. In 1 Peter i. 2 we see how the purpose of God is the same in the New as in the Old: "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience." "Oh," says some one, "you are going back to legalism." Well, it is the legalism of the Lord Jesus Christ who said, "I delight to do thy will." "Thy law is within my heart,"—a very happy legalism. "I will put my laws in their minds, and write them on their hearts," so that they cannot help doing them. So when your children ask, "What mean ye by this?" you can say, "The Lord Jesus brought me up through the wilderness into the land, that I might keep his statutes and observe his laws." How far are we to do that? Look in Deut. vi. 5: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might. And these words which I command thee this day shall be in thine heart." That is the first place. "Thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children." Here is the next place. Why, they are the principles of education. It would be a new set of principles in many schools to-day. But if you are redeemed and sanctified Christians, you will have to bring God's holy Word to bear on the education of your children. And have you any right to complain or any reason to wonder that your children who are not taught these words, and taught them diligently (or as the margin says, "whetted and sharpened" by them), do not grow up to love and serve the Lord Jesus? Has not the wise man said: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it"?

Look on further and see: "Thou shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." Everywhere, not at Keswick only, talk of them, more than about the people who do talk about them. If they are in your heart

THEY MUST COME OUT OF YOUR MOUTH.

Then when your children inquire of you, they will be always hearing them. Are there some of you here, children of God's people, who are not yet like your God-fearing parents? Oh that those of you who have been hearing God s Word from your parents from youth upwards may by God's grace be able to go back to them, and tell them, "Father, mother, I have learned what you have shown me; now we will walk together in the ways of God." Give them a chance of saying to God that those whom He gave them once He has given to them again in conversion and whole-hearted consecration to God.

Further than that: "Thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand." "The work of our hands prosper thou it." When God's Word is upon your hand He will prosper your work. Then God's word must regulate the conduct of your business. Do not keep it merely in your homes; let it go outside; that is wholehearted consecration. Do not put your hand to anything which God's Word does not permit, and upon which He cannot bring a blessing.

"They shall be as frontlets between thine eyes." Your eyes make plans and purposes for time to come. Do not make any plans that you do not see to be in accordance with God's Word. Study that Word, and you will see clearly the plans and ways in which God would have you to walk.

"Write them upon the posts of thy house and on thy gates." Let them be the rules by which your household is governed. What a heart-searching and wondrous profession the Christian profession is, and what mighty provision God has made that we may live it out to his praise and glory.

THE FINAL PURPOSE.

One step more. Turn to Joshua iv. 21: "When your children shall ask their fathers in time to come, saying:

WHAT MEAN THESE STONES?"

Here we see that the redemption comes in again; everything is bound up with that. Why all this? Notice the last verse: "That all the people on earth might know the hand of the Lord that it is mighty." Now we have got to the end of it all. Why do we want to be separated from evil; to be sanctified to God? Why do we want a life of obedience? To make us happy? It will make you happy as nothing else will. To make God rest in his people? It will do that. But is that all? No, no. The Church of Jesus Christ has not been shut in all round. We are to think of the people outside, That all the people on earth may know that the hand of the Lord is mighty. That is what whole-hearted obedience and practical sanctification must come to. That is what the Church of Christ is working for, and what the Lord God in heaven is waiting for, and what the poor, weary earth is waiting for. And there is no other way by which it can come than by the Church of Christ. The blessed story of what God is, to save, to guide, to keep to the uttermost—that the Lord God is mighty—out of the Church that message must flow. You and I, as members of the Church, are responsible for our share in it.

What are we doing for that end? If you curtail your obedience you cannot be, and will not be, full-grown Christians. You will, like Israel, be keeping the blessing for yourselves, and will be of no use to God or man. "In the name of our God we will set up our banners" (Ps. xx. 5). Banners belong to soldiers and armies. But armies are not intended always to spend their time at home in barracks, though the barracks may be more comfortable than the field or the camp; soldiers are made for their king's warfare wherever he wants them to go. And there are arrows for the hearts of the king's enemies.

A TWOFOLD WITNESS.

As Christians and servants of our King, we are to witness to two things. First, what God hath done. Unless we know what He has done, we will never know what He can do. Unless we are standing on this certainty of salvation in Jesus, and on his purposes of separation, sanctification and obedience, we shall never be able to send out this message to the ends of the world. Let us remember that the Gilgal heap of stones told to the world as far as they could what the Lord had done and what He was going to do. It told the heathen nations that God was going to humble them all before the Ark of the Covenant. They stood there because, in the name of God, his people triumphed. That is the reason why God gives victory to his people. In 1 Samuel xvii. 46, we are told why David expected the wonderful victory over Goliath. "This day will the Lord deliver thee into my hand, and I will give the carcases of the host of the Philistines to the fowls and the beasts; that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel." 2 Kings xix. 19, "Now, therefore, O Lord our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that Thou art the Lord God, and Thou only.' This is the final purpose for which God saves his people; hears and answers them; delivers them; sanctifies and keeps them. Lift up your eyes, brethren, beyond yourselves, your own blessings, your own families and churches. Let them rest on these harvest fields to which God is pointing you, and of which He has told you. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest to thrust out labourers," so that from your testimony, your pillar of Gilgal, you may roll away the reproach of leaning upon the arm of flesh: "That all the people of the earth may know that our God is mighty."

SOME RESULTS OF THE SPIRIT'S FILLING.

By REV. C. A. FOX.

I WOULD speak for a few minutes on one branch of this great subject: What is the use of being filled with the Holy Ghost? We have had it put before us by Dr. Cumming; let me put it before you again in a somewhat various view. As we have been told, it is a command of God: "Be ye filled with the Holy Ghost." It is not to be an exceptional or an occasional thing; it is for us all and for all the time. Such is the command of God. Now, all God's commands are enablings, and when He commands us to be filled He enables us to be filled, if we yield to his blessed command. All his commands are covenanted possibilities of power.

The first blessed use of being filled with the Holy Ghost is, as we find in the history of our Lord Jesus Christ, that we are able

TO OVERCOME THE DEVIL IN SECRET.

We read in Luke iv. how our Lord Jesus Christ, being filled with the Holy Ghost, was driven by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil. You will always observe that when a man is filled with the Holy Ghost conflict immediately follows the filling. Our Lord there in the solitude overcomes the devil. Being filled with the Spirit, He is at once confronted with the power of evil in secret, and overcomes it. This is the secret of all spiritual power—to overcome the devil in the privacy of our own room. Any form of evil and unbelief must be overcome in secret; then we are able to go forth and minister to the Lord.

But observe this, that though our blessed Master had just been filled with the Spirit; though the heavens had been opened and the voice of God had been heard declaring that He was the very Son of God, with the seal of the Spirit put upon Him, there is no allusion to this, as far as is recorded, in his conflict with the Spirit of evil. The one single instrument and weapon of war with which He overcomes the evil one is the Scripture of the living God. Do you know what it is after being filled with the Spirit of God to have this power of the Word of God which is able to overcome the devil in secret? A single verse of the Scripture will do it. "It is written." I think some Christians heap verse on verse until they have nearly lost all belief in the Scripture. Why not hold on to one clear verse of God's Holy Word? Let the others confirm it if you please, but let one verse be your verse; and in the power of that assurance of God go forth. Our Lord Jesus had such trust in his Father that He only quoted one verse at the time of each temptation. And have you noticed that our Lord does not go rambling over the whole Bible, but only quotes from one book, Deuteronomy; a book which very few Christians, as a rule, quote from. In the assurance of this single Sword of the Spirit our Lord overcomes the devil in secret.

Perhaps you say you have used the Word of God, and have striven to overcome the evil one thus, but you have not been successful. Did you forget that it was the Sword of the Spirit that you had to wield? You must first be filled with the Holy Ghost, for you cannot maintain the conflict with the prince of evil, even with the sword of the Spirit, unless the sword is wielded by the Spirit Himself. Therefore it is for you to be filled with the Spirit; when you are thus filled you will have conflict with the evil one, and by the Word of God, in the power of the Holy Ghost, you shall overcome.

If our blessed Lord needed that filling and anointing of the Holy Ghost, though He was born of the Holy Ghost, though He was the very holiness of God Himself—if He needed that baptism of the Spirit for his glorious work and service, what shall be said as to our need?

I pass from that to the next point. You find in Acts ii. at Pentecost "they, being filled with the Spirit, began to speak." As soon as you have conquered the devil in secret you are able in public. There are a great many people who affirm that they cannot speak for the Master. But when you are filled with the Spirit of the Master you cannot be silent then. There is a spontaneousness about the speech of the Holy Ghost. There is a blessed freedom in it; a blessed power of subjugation in it; a blessed joy and exhilaration in it. You inbreathe the breath of God, and it invigorates you as you bear witness to the glorious power and the glorious person of our blessed Lord Jesus. Be ye, therefore, filled with the Spirit, and you shall begin to find that God uses you in speech. You will speak to your friend humbly, and out of a broken heart, but there is no word that goes so far as a word from a broken heart. It goes far beyond all eloquence and beyond all argument. How it went to the father's heart when the prodigal came home. He said: "I will go to my father and will say" so and so. When he got to his father, his father could not bear to hear it. It was the word from a broken heart that broke his father's heart. And it is a word from a broken heart that will break other people's hearts. If any have done any great work for the Master, it has all been in the simplicity of faith in the power of the Holy Ghost, out of a broken heart.

We go on to observe again—When you are filled with the Holy Ghost

YOU BEGIN TO SERVE.

The Lord began his list of workers with "a crowned man," Stephen; for that is his name. We read in Acts vi. 3, that the apostles were so busy with the work that they were obliged to separate the secular work from the spiritual, so to speak: "Look ye out seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and of wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." You have surely observed that the first great martyr witness for the Lord was a man of business. Business men! it is you who are are to be the martyrs, the witnesses; not the apostles only. The Stephens must come forward. Business men who will give themselves to secular work, filled with the Holy Ghost—that is what we want. What a Church it would be if every one going out to do business in India, in Africa, in China, and so forth, should be filled with the Holy Ghost, and do their business thus, and become witnesses for the Lord in all those parts of the world. That is God's intention.

Then we notice that to be filled with the Holy Ghost carries with it another great blessing. In Acts vii. 55, you read of the same holy servant of God, Stephen, that he, "being filled with the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God." Being filled with the Holy Ghost

YOU HAVE VISIONS OF GOD.

You can see the opened heavens, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, ready to help you and deliver you; in the act, it may be, of receiving you into glory through the gates o death. Believers, there are visions of God that you are neglecting and I am neglecting—visions of God which every true child of God may have. "Woe is me, for I am undone. Mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts." There is nothing that brings a man to his proper place like a vision of the Eternal. Being filled with the Holy Ghost, and even under a shower of stones, this was the vision that that servant of God, Stephen, had. He could see his Lord in the glory; and so can we if we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and are filled with the Holy Ghost, and going about doing our work, whatever it is.

We pass from that to one more instance. In Acts xi. you read that, being filled with the Holy Ghost, you not only can speak and serve and see visions of God, but you can SEE THE GRACE OF GOD ON EARTH.

"Barnabas who, when he came had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord" (ver. 23). You can see the grace of God everywhere and anywhere when you are filled with the Spirit of God. Wherever you go among Christian people, you simple, plain believers can see whether the grace of God is there or not. You can recognise it in very extraordinary places and under very peculiar circumstances. But your eyes must be opened by the Holy Ghost to see it. This is what we want also in the Church of Christ, and this is what we come here for—that we may all recognise in one another the grace of God. With what wrangling very often we regard our fellow-Christians! with what controversy! with what unkind suspicious one toward another! how cold or how hot against one another! If we have the filling of the Holy Ghost, we shall see the grace of God in the soul, and men will listen to us because we shall speak out of a broken heart.

We go one step further, and come to a wonderful expression in Gal. v., where we find that brought before us, the fruits of the Spirit—"love, joy, peace," and so on. What is first? You say, understanding. Nay, it is love. Love is the first fruit; it is the fulness of all things. It is what God is, and God gives Himself. And the fruit is just that—his own image. "Love, joy, peace." Joy is sandwiched between love and peace. That is why we find it so often missing, when people are not maintaining love and peace. They are not living a self-abnegating life and a self-annihilating life, and their joy becomes intermittent. They are not able to rejoice everywhere and always, as God commands. Now, brethren, what is the end of our being filled with the Spirit? If you will go with people to their own homes you will soon see the end of it. The family shall know it. The fragrance of the fruit of Eshcol can always be perceived at once in the home life; the tenderness, the love, the joy, the peace—all these will be visible. The children will know it; the husband will know it; the wife will know it; the whole family will know it. These fruits of the Spirit are ripe in every season. You can always have fresh fruit on your table. May God so fill us with the Holy Ghost that we may thus be sweetened through and through. We can all be exceedingly sweet when everything goes well. But when there is some trial or trouble upon us, when there is a difficulty with brethren, how easy it is then to lose the sweetness. It is just at such a time that God commands us to be filled with the Holy Ghost; to be full of love, joy, and peace.

I close with one further text—the text we have been quoting all through—"Be not drunk with wine, but filled with the Spirit; speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your hearts to the Lord" (Ephes. iii. 18-20). The man who is filled with the Holy Ghost not only overcomes, speaks, serves, sees, is sweetened, but he sings; he is able to enjoy God so that others are confounded by his joy in the Lord. They think it out of place and outrageous, that the believer should find pleasure in the things of God, so far surpassing anything they have in the world.

HIS HEART SINGS;

These few passages from Holy Scripture as to the effects of being filled with the Holy Ghost may help us to desire the blessed fulness more and more. And as our brother (Dr. Cumming) has been putting it before us, the only way is to be very low before God, and to claim it as his own gift; that it belongs to you because he has already given it to you. If as a child you come to God for this gift, He shall suddenly come to his house, and shall fill you, and you shall be able not only to be glad within, but to rejoice without, to fill your home with joy, your church with joy, and your people with joy. You shall be one of those whose faces shine for the Lord. If you speak for Him you shall be able so to enlighten others, and so to kindle other lips, that you shall see God has fulfilled his word to you, and that you are indeed one whom He has filled with the Holy Ghost.

GOD'S WORK IN THE BELIEVER.

By REV. F. B. MEYER.

There is a sense—a very deep and blessed one—in which it may be said that all who believe in Jesus Christ are saved. We have that set forth in Titus iii. 5: "When the kindness of God our Saviour, and his love toward man appeared, not by works done in righteousness, which we did ourselves, but according to his mercy, He saved us." By the one unapproachable act of substitution, wrought by the Son of God in our nature on the cross, those who believe in Him are once and for ever saved from condemnation and from the penalty due to sin. But there is another sense in which salvation may be spoken of as a process. In 1 Corinthians i. 18, we learn that "the word of the cross is to them that are perishing foolishness; but unto us which are being saved it is the power of God." Salvation is not only a finished work, but also a process, our deliverance from the power of sin being progressive.

In consecration we take up the true attitude towards God, in which He is able most easily to effect our salvation; but from that moment and onward there is a continual deepening and widening of the range of God's salvation in our characters and lives. So that a higher law is constantly being put before us, indicating the higher ideal to which we are called. As we see the higher law, God is prepared to effect the realisation of the ideal in our characters and lives. So the Christian life becomes a series of ascents, the ideals continually rising, and we, by his grace, being raised to them—although in this life there must always be a disparity between our highest and God's.

In this progressive work there is a

CO-OPERATION BETWEEN GOD AND MAN.

In Colossians i. 29, the Apostle refers to the co-operation in pastoral work, "striving according to his working." In Ephesians iii. 20, we find co-operation in prayer—we pray and God answers "according to the power that worketh in us." But I desire more especially to speak of the co-operation which you will find mentioned in Philippians ii. 12: "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to work, for his good pleasure" (R.V.). Now there is not a single Christian here who does not desire to please God always. If that blessed purpose of your secret heart is to be fulfilled, you must understand the conditions of the co-operation of the eternal God with you.

This co-operation between God and man is one of God's foundation principles. You find it in nature, for not an ounce of gold, or a lump of coal, or an ear of corn is brought into our industries or homes, which is not the result of this co-working between creature and Creator. You find it in revelation, for there is the blessed Spirit of God, the fountain of all inspiration, and the human agent borne along by his Divine power. In the miracles also it is set forth, for whilst Jesus Christ alone could give life, He called upon others to loose the raised Lazarus; and whilst He could multiply the bread and the fish, He used his disciples in distributing the portions to the crowds. And here, evidently, in respect to your salvation, your deliverance from the power of sin, the love of sin, and the inclination to sin, there must be co-operation between the eternal God on the one hand, and yourself on the other hand.

And do you wonder that the Apostle says that the man who is conscious of this "works out his salvation with fear and trembling"? Supposing one day there should go into the studio of a young artist one of the great leaders in art, who should say, "Young man, I intend to spend to-morrow with you, and to give you all the assistance in my power in accomplishing the design upon which you are now engaged." Do you not think that when the morrow dawned that young student would be nervously apprehensive lest, by inattention or mistake on his part, he should not profit to the full by the assistance of the master hand? Would he not have all his tools in order, and guard against any possible interruption? So when the soul becomes conscious that He who of old made creation his workshop, has now taken a workshop in his heart and soul, will there not be earnest concern lest it should grieve the Spirit of God, and will he not be deeply anxious with fear and trembling to WORK OUT WHAT GOD WORKS IN?

It becomes necessary, therefore, that we should understand just what we may expect on God's side. If God works in us, as He undoubtedly works in nature, we may be quite sure that He will Himself initiate and superintend each operation. Supposing, for instance, into some school there came a precocious child, who, being put in the infants' class, was unwilling to learn the lessons imposed, although it was quite evident that it needed them; but, on the contrary, was always fretting and chafing to reach a superior class. Would it not be right to repress that child, and if it were to say that it desired to make quicker progress, should not the teacher reply: "It is my province to promote you when the time comes. All I ask of you is to learn the lessons I set you day by day, and then you may properly be pushed forward." So when the Christian soul so frets and chafes over the elementary lessons that God sets it, yearning to know and learn more, is it not likely that the Spirit of God says: "Learn carefully and well the lesson of each day—it may be of patient suffering; or of standing at your post during difficulty and hardship; or of plodding alone at some commonplace daily task. Work at these for the present, and it will be for me to lead you on to further lessons when the lower ones have been perfectly acquired."

Again, in nature we observe how often God is working most when there is least appearance. Are there not long winter and autumn months during which nature seems to be asleep, in which no progress is apparently being made towards the advent of spring and summer with foliage and fruit? If you were to go through the woods where the leaves have shrivelled beneath your feet, and the trees stand gaunt against the sky, and the snow lies thick on hill and dale, you might fairly say that God had become an absentee, and ceased to do anything in his world. But beneath the sod, and within the roots of yonder trees, as well as under the surface of all those fields and uplands, the Creator is at work, preparing day by day for the coming burst of life. Spring and summer would be impossible but for the dreary and dark days. There are souls who, during such seasons as the present convention, make rapid progress; but they must go forth again into the cold and opposition. As in nature, so with us. God is sometimes working most earnestly when there is least manifestation; and the outburst of a single day at Keswick may be the result of months of quiet, patient toil.

Further, when you mark God's work in nature, you know that He never misses a stage. He moves on a regular routine, after a certain definite order, from strength to strength. So with ourselves. How eagerly some of us try to secure

THE FILLING OF THE HOLY GHOST.

We pray for it, and claim it, but do not get it. Why? Because we want to miss one link in the chain, namely, the cleansed heart, which must precede it. Unless we are prepared to go through the various stages, we cannot expect the manifestation of full-orbed Christian experience. There must be a sowing and a winter, the blade as well as the corn in the ear, and everything step by step.

Another thing I want to say. When God works in nature, He always breaks the mould in which He has fashioned anything. He never repeats Himself. No two faces are alike, no two roses, no two leaves. The infinite mind of God is so prolific that He can afford to vary his workmanship. What a mistake, then, to take any one man as a model, so as to become like him! Be yourself, man! God has a distinct thought about you; you were meant to incarnate a distinct idea and intention of the Divine mind, and if you repeat some one else, not only will you be a bad imitation, but the world and the Church will miss one of God's original specimens.

The Eternal Trinity is as eager to save each Christian here from sin as if that person were the only one in existence. Sit down and quietly think this over—that God Himself, the whole force and energy of God, are concentrated and fixed upon you to make you a saintly soul. See how He does it. First, He touches the will, working in us "to will." Now, we do not teach here that the will becomes extinguished. We do not teach that the will is lost in God as a drop is lost in the ocean. But, rather, we hold that the will is constantly exercised throughout the whole life of the believer in saying "Yes" to the will of God. You are not what you think or feel, but what you will. If a man would learn that lesson, he would be more likely to lead an even life than by gauging his spiritual state by his emotions. Because our emotions are variable, being affected by a hundred influences, they are not a true gauge of what we are. The will of God does not extinguish man's but threads it, and there comes into man an impulse which emanates from God. This is tested, first by the Word of God, and then by the trend of circumstances. The longer I live, the more sure I am that to the devout soul by the little incidents of daily life. Such a man will have that experience corroborated by the Word of God on the one hand, and sympathetic circumstances on the other. And though everybody says the man is acting in a suicidal manner, the man himself is convinced by ways he cannot define that he has learnt the will of God.

GOD IS CONSTANTLY SPEAKING

It may be that this relates to the giving up of a habit, taking a certain course, or stepping out in some untrodden path; but the man knows that he knows the will of God. If, however, you do not know, do not act. If I had a little child who could not tell what I wanted, but who, at the same time needed to know my will, I would explain even to the adoption of the simplest speech and the shortest words. So we must trust God to make known his will to us.

God also works in a man "to do." When you know what God wills, you know that you have sufficient power to do what He purposes. You must not wait to feel it. Believe it is there. Elijah tells Elisha the condition on which he may receive a double portion of his spirit. Elisha starts for the Jordan, but is not conscious of any increase of power. But when he gets there he knows he must cross, and that he has the power to make the water part. He "acts faith" and the water divides. There may be people here conscious of the rising-up of a great purpose. They ought to surrender a certain habit, tear themselves from a certain sin, or resign some object of affection. But they may have been saying, "I never can." I ask you another question, "Has God wrought in you to will it?" You reply, "Certainly." Then dare to act as if you had the power, and when you "act faith" you will find that the power to do is yours.

HOW WONDERFUL!

It seems as if nothing can be impossible again, nothing difficult, no mountain without its tunnel, no Red Sea without its passage, no Jordan without its ford, because when a man has learned what God has worked in him to will, he knows that the mysterious power of the Holy Ghost has entered into him so that he is able to act.

I heard of a famous artist, whose aged father lived with him. The old man, whose pride it was in earlier years to model in clay, works day by day at his old occupation, although he has no need. His great fear is that age will deprive his fingers of their delicate touch. At night he leaves his work with a consciousness of failure, and retires to his couch. While the father is asleep, the son visits the deserted studio, and taking up the clay, with his own deft touch wipes out the failure, corrects the mistakes, and makes all look fair. When, the next morning, the old man again enters the studio, he rubs his hands at the thought that his fears of failure are without foundation, and that his hand is still dexterous as formerly.

So, we are but unprofitable servants at the best—our best is so tainted. It seems as if the infinite Lord not only forgives our mistakes and defects by his precious blood, but by his own power makes good the failure and deformity of our work, and uses it for his own glory.

LOOKING UNTO THE LORD.

By REV. H. C. G. MOULE.

I desire to speak upon two short sentences from the Word of God—Psalm xxv. 15: "Mine eyes are ever toward the Lord" (Jon. ii. 4): "Yet I will look again." I am never permitted the blessed privilege of standing here without the question coming to me, "What are we here for?" I think we all know and feel that if there is such a thing as a Christian assembly which must either be worse than useless or intensely for a purpose, it is a gathering like this. Some one has said of the Convention, that we meet here, first, midst, and last, for spiritual "business;" not to spend a pleasant time, not to have a sort of spiritual picnic, but for business with our Lord. And what is the issue and outcome of it, if it has been business indeed? I think if we are true to the watchwords that gather us together for this solemn meeting before God about the life of faith, the reason why we are here is that we desire to be more useful for the Lord that has bought us and wrought us.

And what a magnificent thought to look round this tent and realise that here we are, by the grace and mercy of God, men and women who have arrived—we take that for granted—at a humble certainty before Him about some GREAT FOUNDATION PREMISSES.

We do believe that Jesus Christ our Lord is a fact; we do believe that his precious blood, shed for us and for our sins, is a fact; and we do believe that the promises of the Word of God are fact. What we want is, so to act upon the facts that, by his mercy, we may be facts ourselves—that we may be vessels meet and also ready for the Master's use—the Master choosing the use, the place, and the work.

We have been reminded from day to day of the enormous need which, from man's point of view, there is for vessels meet and ready for the Master's use. The allusions to missionary work in this tent from day to day have come home with extraordinary power to hearts and souls; and I suppose there is no human doubt—rather there is no doubt in faith—that out of this gathering there will go forth a little army of missionaries to the ends of the earth. God grant they may all go out as vessels meet for the Master's use, or they had better not go! If a missionary does not go out very close to the Lord Jesus Christ, and keep close to Him there, and very low at his feet, and distrustful of self, he had immensely better not go out.

With a heart that glows with love to missionary work, and as one who has had the joy of bidding farewell to more than one brother in the flesh and many brethren in the Lord, bound for the mission-field, may I say, "Do not choose even the mission-field as of necessity your place of service, even although no other opening presents itself." Experience tells us that it is rather optimism than fact which says that the gaps are always made up at home. They are not always made up. There hardly passes a day of my life but the post brings me a letter from some servant of God in our own land literally wearing his life out over a vast decivilised population for whom Christ died, and saying, "Can you send me man to help me?" To nine out of ten such a have to reply: "I cannot tell you of a suitable man—a man who knows the Lord, whose heart is in the Lord's hands, his will in his will—a man with a spiritual history, and who will be something better than an ecclesiastical official, an automaton of the Church."

I want far more men to go out; and is not this tentful proof that there is an enormous amount of material behind to fill the gap, and more than fill the gap caused by every consecrated man and woman that goes out to Africa, India, and China? There may be gaps in the East of London, the depths of Liverpool, or the Black Country, or in some far scattered country side, where I sometimes think and the sacrifices for Christ may be quite as real, if it is the Lord's will that his servant should be there, as even in Uganda itself. So I ask for more missionaries, supported and backed by the great army of those who remember that the Lord's will cannot be to feed souls there at the cost of the starvation, despite all our theories, of souls near at home.

I want now to speak of Him. "She spake of Him to all them that waited for salvation," is the word written in Luke ii. of a saint who has a very short biography, though she had a very long life. May I "speak of Him"? Who is sufficient to name the name of Jesus Christ? I certainly am not, whoever is. But our sufficiency is of God. What shall I say of Him? The blessed above spend eternity in saying, in the language of the life of heaven: "Worthy is the Lamb"; and the blessed on earth know no greater blessedness than praising Jesus Christ with the language of the life of faith. But that is not his highest praise. The praise above all praise comes to Him, not from earth but from the heaven of heavens. We are going to speak of the Person whom the Eternal Father, of whom He is the express image, declared "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." "Thou art the King of Glory, O Christ. Thou art the everlasting Son of the Father." "Govern us, and lift us up for ever."

"Keep us this day without sin." It is the Lord Jesus Christ who must do this.

"MINE EYES ARE EVER TOWARD THE LORD." That is the Psalmist's text, and the whole light of the Gospel shines upon it, as upon all the Psalms, and interprets it of Christ—"looking unto Jesus."

What I lay upon my own heart and yours to-night is that across all the mysteries and glories, victories and triumphs, of the life of faith—whatever our spiritual advancement or proficiency—we will write these words, "Mine eyes are ever toward the Lord."

It may be that there are those here who have not come to the foot of the cross and to the arms of Jesus Christ in the first and simplest way. I say to such, "Let your eyes be now unto the Lord." All through the story, from its beginning to the final blessedness, it is not so much the faith that is the problem as it is the sight. Look up from despondent contemplation of yourself. Weary soul, wanting to know what it is to be converted, look unto the Lord; conversion is when a man's eyes are toward the Lord, and his back toward every other hope and every other trust.

Then I may be speaking to some who know in whom they have believed, but think there is much more to follow. It is possible that from some misinterpretation of terms and experience, some who have what they want require that their eyes should be opened to see it. Look toward the Lord. Is not your difficulty an insufficient sight of his ability? You want to find God, as some of the old mystics used to say, in the depths of yourself. Look out in the glorious open air to the Lord Jesus Christ, and find in Him what you actually have in Him—an all-sufficiency for all things, and the will of God for you not to-morrow but to-night. Look unto the Lord. Experience is diverse, but the Lord Jesus Christ is able to be to you God's and readiness for his service.

To you whose shoes I am not worthy to bear, I say, "Let your eyes be ever toward the Lord." The man who is closest to the Lord Jesus Christ in this town to-night, is the very last who would say, "I have attained or am perfected." His boast is in the perfectness of Jesus Christ for him and in him, and he only longs to see more of Him whom he has seen, and to look more closely at Him so as to behold the bright crystal of the unfathomable depth of Jesus Christ.

I give you a few simple hints about definite objects wherewith we may have our eyes ever toward the Lord. First, that we may drink into us more and more his personal glory. Do not forget the Giver in the gifts; or, rather, never mistake the supreme gift for anything but the Giver. Therefore, "consider Him." I think it is often the case with many Christians that they do not enough simply "consider Him." Do they use the Word of God diligently enough, and see what the Spirit says about Jesus Christ? The Blessed One, the Beloved of the Father, the Eternal Son, the Son of Man, the Christ, "who, for us men and our salvation, came down from heaven." There was a good man long ago, at Cambridge, a professor of Greek, and in the church where he ministered, though a man of cold presence and great constitutional reserve, he could never get through the Nicene Creed without a perceptible shake in his voice: "Christ for us men and our salvation came down from heaven. Our eyes should "ever be toward the Lord," that we may learn the habit of holy reverence. Men and women, young Christian men and women, for the life of your faith and your holiness, be reverent souls. Let your eyes be ever toward the Lord. You will get to understand that there is nothing too little or too great to talk to Him about. And yet you will not forget that the Friend, that the Brother who sticks so close, is the King of glory.

If our eyes are ever toward Him, what a hold the fact will have upon us in our praises and our prayers! We shall not, while singing a hymn, look round to see who is coming into the assembly, nor shall we utter a prayer as if talking to some one who is not also the King of glory. Moreover, we shall be natural: spirituality coming out in perfectly natural human conditions. Also we shall be chastened with the consciousness that we are in sight of the King. Another reason is for the unbroken foundation on which our peace is established, the Lord's sacrifice being our righteousness and peace.

Then that our standard may be kept up. I do not think any other direction of looking will keep up our standard. We cannot look at even the holiest man. What is he beside the King? Dust and ashes, blank unworthiness, an unprofitable servant; as yet an unfinished work of the grace of God. Keep your eyes toward the Lord.

Other reasons why we should ever be looking in this direction are: As to a personal friend to whom we can go with everything, and who can perform all things for us. To tell Him of every temptation, to be so in converse with Him that the unlooked-for thing round the corner of life shall meet us in his company. To take to Him every little care, every tiny inconvenience that crosses our path, as well as the great problems of duty, and the tremendous questions of consecration and surrender. We shall know the secret of mighty grace if our eyes are toward the Lord, and we realise that we are dealing with infinity of love and skill and power all concentrated in a person, and that person the Lord Jesus Christ.

I know a man in Christ who, when a young man in business in the City, was fond of this world's pleasures. At some meetings in connection with the Children's Special Service Mission he took a part which his musical skill allowed, and Christ found him, and to purpose indeed. "I was converted," he said, "and very happy in the Lord. But one day I was making for the train home when it flashed across my mind that the Lord Jesus Christ was a friend for all my troubles. I walked to the station as though

WALKING ON THE AIR."

I do not know if there was much more in kind, if in degree, for him to learn. All the needs of his guilt met, and all the needs of his life to be met. I believe in that life. The eyes are "ever toward the Lord," and it makes such a consistency,—a walking so humbled, so unaffected, so chastened, so ready to own fault and failure where it exists. Oh for the consistency which is sometimes called in the New Testament "perfection," the all-round life of the Christian that walks circumspectly—that is, looking around him to see what the will of the Lord is in the little things of daily duty!

There are other things to look to the Lord for. Are any of us in a struggle about consecration to the Lord? There is something which God's daylight has found out in you and me, something which we discover we have not given up, something which, in the words of another, is not worthy of the Son of God; and we look at it, "How can I give it up?" As we look at it the yielding becomes harder. Shall we direct our eyes to the Lord? Perhaps you see his hand waiting for the thing, and that hand looks cold and stern. Will you look at the face? The hand belongs to the heart that speaks through the face, and it asks for that thing. Supposing it to be a thing which, in the daylight of conscience and the Word, and not in the morbid troubles of a soul that is morbid because not looking out straight to the Lord, is injurious to your life and testimony. Supposing it to be a habit or an indulgence which you have proved weakens your influence for Him—a loose use of your tongue about other people, which you know would be an awful offence if you heard it committed by some one else against yourself. Somehow you feel that you cannot. You look at the thing and the hand. Let your eyes be toward the Lord; consecration becomes possible only when we look up and not down, when we look at the heart of the Lord, and take into account his just claims.

Then there are Jonah's words, "Yet I will look again." Are there some here who have too sorrowful a remembrance of what it was when they saw the King? When Jonah said this the monster had entombed him, although the time of his deliverance was near. He spoke to the Eternal God, and said, "Though I am cast out of thy sight,

YET WILL I LOOK AGAIN."

There is nothing else to do. To whom else will you go? Do not go to Christian friends if you are not first going to Him. Do not go to conventions as if they could profit or deliver. "Look again." He is very willing. He tells us to be quite ready for other people to look at us again, after having grieved us and turned away from us—those who, perhaps, have had material gifts out of us and have repaid us by looking somewhere else. But He asks us to look with an honest look of sorrow and renewed trust, and He is more ready than we shall ever be. It may be like looking at the bottom of a ladder, but the ladder reaches to heaven, as none other does; and blessed are those whose feet are on even the lowest round. Look unto Jesus—the name that is above every name. He is the Giver of the Holy Ghost, and the work of the Holy Ghost is to manifest Him. As to all the precious problems of the gift of the Spirit, let them be studied with your eyes ever toward the Lord Jesus Christ.

At the last, when our heart and flesh, and perhaps our intellect, fails, we shall look unto Him. I remember two stories of looking unto Him with a confiding, dying sight, that were blessed instances of victory and peace. One was the case of a little Indian boy; the "Lord Jesus Christ" was his theology, his peace, his holiness, and his readiness. The other was an old man, a professor in a German University. When his mind began to break up he forgot everything except One, and he used to go about the streets, and on meeting little children he would repeat two Greek words that remained of all his dictionary knowledge—Iesous Christos. May He be our all! The present-day life, the workful life, the life of Christ, the life of truth, the life of faith, the life of patience, the life of humility, ought to be surrounded with the word "Jesus Christ," and then the life will end in a death in which it will be overflowingly enough for us to know one thing, and that is Jesus Christ.

CHRIST FIRST AND LAST.

BY REV. G. C. GRUBB.

In Revelation i. 17 we read: "And when I saw Him I fell at his feet as one dead. And He laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not, I am the first and the last, and the Living One." (R.V.) I want to tell you how two old friends met after a separation of some sixty years. You know it often happens that two young men begin life together in the same town, go to the same school, have the same companions, and so forth; but one has greater capacity than the other, and rises up the rungs of the ladder of social fame—sometimes in the military world, at other times in the Church-world: for there is such a thing as the Church-world. At last he gets a title to his name, and becomes, perhaps, Lord So-and-So. The other young man remains in his old position, doing his daily work, grinding away. At last this latter hears that his old friend is going to pay a visit to his native town, and that preparations are in progress for a public celebration of the event. The stay-at-home man feels afraid to go up to his former acquaintance and speak to him. Position in the world often changes the position of the heart, and many a man who has grown in worldly honours refuses to recognise his undistinguished friends of years gone by. Few do as the London sweep, who, coming to fame, put his broom in a glass case that all his friends might know what he had been! In the passage before us meet. There had been a time when Jesus and John had been apparently almost on an equality. They were both about the same age, when Jesus, one afternoon, going along the shore on the Lake of Galilee, called John, who followed Him. What walks they had! And often when Jesus was very tired, He used to lean his head upon the strong breast and arm of his disciple. Now, being very old, John realised that it was time for him to lean his head upon the Master's arm. Jesus had gone back to glory, and for sixty years John had not seen Him. Jesus was now King of kings and Lord of lords, and all power in heaven and on earth was his; and John was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard a voice behind him saying, "I am the first and the last." He turned and saw One before whom he fell as dead. Jesus then did to him just as we do to an old friend whom we meet suddenly. Laying our hand upon his shoulder, we put him under arrest, and say "Is this you? I am very glad to see you." Jesus "laid his right hand" upon John, and said "Fear not"—do not be afraid; I am still the same Jesus, with the same human heart, and the same human-Divine love that I had sixty years ago when last you saw me. I am coming to put strength into your old wasted body, and to make you prophesy again before kings and peoples; and the glory of the book that you shall write shall last on to the consummation of all things." I am so glad that my Lord Jesus changeth not.

TWO OLD ACQUAINTANCES

Now Jesus wants to give you here present a mighty blessing. Yea, He has given one already to hundreds at this Convention. If, when you go home again, you are asked what sort of thing the blessing is, just reply, "It is that Christ is

For the Young.

THE SUN.

BY REV. JOHN MITCHELL, EDINBURGH.

The sun is growing pretty old now; he is more than six thousand years of age. And yet he looks as young and fresh as ever! What a blessing it is that the sun never dies! Were he to leave our world, we should be left in darkness, and we could not live long after him.

The sun has always been held in high esteem. Many nations have worshipped him, and even now the Parsees in India honour him as their God. Once in Britain, before we received the Gospel, the sun was worshipped because of his brightness, his greatness, and his usefulness. But how foolish to worship the sun, who is unconscious of all the homage paid to him, and who can do nothing for us of himself at all!

God made the sun, and it is He who causes it to shine upon us and to give us light and life. Then it is God we have to thank for all the blessings we receive by the sun. And it is God we ought to worship, for He is the only living and true God.

His only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, is called the Sun of Righteousness, because He was sent into this world to chase away the darkness of sin, and to fill the earth with the light of holiness and love. And you will remember what took place when Jesus was taken by wicked men and crucified: "And it was about the sixth hour, and there was darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour. And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst."

When our friends die, we draw down the window blinds to darken the house; but when Jesus died God closed in the curtains of the heavens, and darkened the world. And "when the centurion saw what was done he glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts and returned."

Now let us look at a few simple thoughts about the sun.

1. The Sun is Round. It has neither beginning nor end. Look at your indiarubber ball, and you will notice that it is the same whichever way you hold it or look on it. The sun is a great big ball of fire, which is set in the heavens for our special benefit.

Jesus says of Himself, "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." Alpha is the name of the first letter of the Greek *alpha*bet, and Omega is the last letter of it. There was never a time when Jesus did not live, and there shall never be a time when there will be no Jesus. We need, then, have no fear in trusting ourselves to Jesus, for He will keep us safely for ever if we do so. And all who become one with Him shall live with Him in endless joy and happiness.

2. The Sun is Bright. We cannot look upon it, for the brightness dazzles our eyes and almost blinds us. If we want to look on him we must use a darkened glass.

It is written of Jesus that He is "the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person." If Christ had come into the world just as He was in heaven, men could not have looked upon Him, for his glory would have blinded them as it blinded Saul when he had a vision of Jesus in glory. And so Jesus kindly became like us that we might know more of Him than ever had been known before.

Many a home and many a heart Jesus brightened. When He went to feasts, He brightened them with his smiles; and when He came upon the sick, He restored them to health, and when children came to Him, He laid his hands upon them and blessed them. And He was the friend of sinners, for He came to take away sin and so to remove what is the cause of so much sorrow and sadness.

The Thracians likened the power of God to the sun with three beams. One beam shone upon a sea of ice and melted it; another beam shone on a rock and dissolved it; and the third beam shone on a dead man and gave him life.

That was just like what Jesus did. There was sea of ice in the hearts of men who hated one another as well as God. But when Jesus shone in their hearts, they found their hatred gone, and that love had taken its place.

There were many hearts as hard as a rock, but when the love of Christ entered into them, the stony heart became soft and teachable.

Then all men were in a state of spiritual death, for they had none of the life of Christ in them; but when they came to Him for salvation, He gave them everlasting life.

And the light will shine higher still, and usher in a glorious day when "the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

3. The Sun is hot. If the sun only gave us light but left us in the cold, we could not long enjoy the light, for we would perish with the cold. It is by the light and heat of the sun that the fruits of the earth, which nourish us, grow and ripen. Christ shining into our hearts with the warmth of his love makes us fruitful in every good work; and we grow in grace and ripen for glory.

Then we learn that heat expands bodies. So our hearts are enlarged by the love of Christ, and we are not so selfish as we once were. Our souls increase in knowledge and in all heavenly wisdom. We are able to receive more grace and to live holier lives.

It is in the summer that we enjoy the heat of the sun; and it is summer in our souls when we have Jesus, the Divine Sun, shining in our hearts. The winter of storms and darkness has passed away and we have peace in our hearts and light to lead us on the paths of righteousness.

4. The Sun is an Artist. You look at a beautiful picture of a landscape sometimes, and you say that the artist must be very clever and talented. Who was his master? Whose workmanship did he take for a model? It was the sun, who is the greatest artist in the world. He it is who paints the flowers and gives them all sorts of lovely tints. And the beauty we see around us is the work of this well-known artist.

But he is not only a landscape painter; he paints animals as well. And he puts colour on the pale cheeks of boys and girls and makes them look pretty and healthy.

When you want to send your likeness to a friend, you go to a photographer and tell him what you want. He then takes you into a glass room and makes you sit or stand before a little box called a camera, into which he has placed a plate, upon which the sun is to impress your image. In a second or two it is done, for the sun works quickly, and does not keep you waiting long.

And Jesus works quickly too. When we come to Him for pardon and new hearts, He at once takes away the old heart of sin and gives us new hearts of holiness. Then He impresses our likeness on his own heart, and stamps our hearts with his likeness.

5. The Sun is a Minister. A minister is one who does the will of God. The sun is a faithful minister who never rests, but who day after day, and year after year, proclaims the goodness of God in all lands. His language is easily learned, and, although there are no words in it, yet it is clear and plain, and may be read by people of every tribe and tongue.

And the sun is a kind and unselfish minister. He cannot give us silver and gold, for He has none of that; but he gives us what is of far more value—namely, light and heat. We, like the sun, should be always giving something that may do good in the world. We may not have any gold to give, but there are golden words and actions that may enrich the world and do much good.

Jesus is always giving us his bounty and daily loading us with his benefits. How grateful we ought to be to Him!

The sun has a great congregation, some of whom are very attentive. How earnestly many people—and especially the sick who cannot sleep—long for the appearance of the sun! See how some of the flowers keep their faces towards the sun, and follow him on his course round the world! Take out a lighted lamp, but the flowers will not pay any attention to that; they want the sun. The Lord Jesus has a great congregation also, but while some of them are very attentive and follow Him, there are others who are careless and who follow Satan, and by him are led on to ruin. Satan uses other lights to allure and deceive them, that they may not seek the true light. Then be like the little flowers, and refuse to follow any other light than Jesus, who is the light of the world. And, like the sun, be an obedient minister, doing the will of God, and having no will of your own, and this will make your life peaceful, bright, and happy.

A CHILD'S SONG

COMPOSED ON AWAKING IN THE MIDDLE OF THE NIGHT.

PSALM XXVII. 1.

Deep in the hush of night,
Why should I fear?
Jesus Himself my Light,
Jesus is here.

Boldly I'll on Him call,
Who from the sky
Marks well a sparrow's fall,
Though He's so high.

Then on poor little me,
Sure will He look;
Promises now I see
Clear in his Book.

Hush me again to sleep,
Safely I lie,
Jesus his watch will keep,
Jesus is nigh.

THE ZANZIBAR REST.

We are favoured with an interesting letter from Miss Granger, in the course of which she says:—The work here is opening out, the sailors are coming in and receiving blessing. One dear lad was in, the beginning of last week, and decided for Jesus; since then he has been in nearly every night, and we have had the great joy of watching his growth in grace; it would do you good to see how his face lights up when we are talking of Jesus and of the coming glory, and now he tries to bring other shipmates in.

It has been such a cheer to come across several sailors who have been to our "Shadwell Rest." One man from a sailing vessel told me he was rather the worse for drink and was just going into the "Crooked Billet" when some gentleman who was standing outside the "Rest" ran over and fetched him in; from that time it seems he has lived a steady life; and last Sunday I trust he quite decided for Christ. Last Sunday four men came in almost directly after breakfast and spent the day with us. We left them to write letters while we went to speak to the natives, then we talked with them and had singing before dinner, and some more sailors soon came in after, so we were able to have a meeting before and after tea; it was such a happy, busy day that by the time we had had some supper we were quite ready for bed. One backslider, too, I trust, was restored; six years before he had joined the church, but evidently for some time had lived a very careless life; he was very pleased to receive a Bible.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., Aug. 14, Luke xx. 19-36; Mon., Aug. 15, xx. 37-47; Tues., Aug. 16, xxi. 1-13; Wed., Aug. 17, xxi. 14-24; Thurs., Aug. 18, xxi. 25-38; Fri., Aug. 19, xxii. 1-13; Sat., Aug. 20, xxii. 14-23.

ST. GILES CHRISTIAN MISSION.—On Tuesday week the annual excursion of the children attending the various Sunday-schools of this Mission took place. About twelve hundred scholars, accompanied by their teachers, enjoyed a long and happy day at Court Farm, Upper Warlingham, one of the loveliest spots near London.

THE PRINCE OF PREACHERS.*

Mr. SPURGEON'S FIRST SERMON.

Removing shortly after his baptism to Cambridge, to fill the post of usher in a school conducted by his old schoolmaster, Mr. H. Leeding, of Colchester, he now joins the Baptist church in St. Andrew's-street, formerly ministered to by the illustrious Robert Robinson and Robert Hall. Connected with this church was a "Lay Preachers' Association," and to this the young usher is admitted a member. Not that his idea as yet is to address an adult congregation; he is anxious rather to keep company with those that do, and that he may learn how to do it. Howbeit, in the vernacular of Burns—

"The best laid schemes o' mice an' men Gang aft agley."

At the head of the association in question was a Mr. James Vinter, familiarly known among the lay helpers as Bishop Vintner, a man of expedients, who not only preached himself, but knew how to trap recruits to keep up the number of the preaching host. Upon this unsuspecting youth the versatile bishop brought his astute tactics to bear. Mr. Spurgeon admired exceedingly, when the event had opened his eyes, the neatness of the stratagem by which he himself was caught. The wording of the subtle sentence, which sounded so innocent, would have done credit to the sagacity of the Delphic oracle. It was to this effect—that he, Bishop Vinter, would like him, the school usher, to go over to Faversham next Sunday evening, for a young man was to preach there who was not much used to services, and very likely would be glad of company. To this request the young usher gave, without hesitation, an affirmative reply. It was not till the following day when, Sunday-school being over, and conversation with his friend whom he was accompanying to the village had taken an unexpected turn, he awoke to the consciousness of the occult meaning in the words which had so readily drawn from him the promise given. The usher's companion was a Christian gentleman several years his senior. For a time they walk pleasantly together, talking of the things that concerned their estate in common, as children of the Heavenly King. At last the usher ejaculates the hope that his companion might have a good time while preaching. Astonishment on the part of the friend is followed by an instant disclaimer of any intention or ability to preach. "I am looking to you to do that." It was now the usher's turn to urge his own unfitness and lack of preparation; but meeting a more emphatic negative still from his friend, and the assurance that unless he preached there would be no sermon at all, he was obliged to give way.

Necessity is the mother of invention. Praying for Divine help, the words were given "Unto you that believe He is precious"; and quickly the youth, during the remainder of their walk to the place of meeting, got together the materials of his first sermon. As himself confesses, it seemed a great risk; but might he not hope in dependence on the Holy Ghost to tell the story of the Cross, so that the villagers might not return to their homes without a word?

The place of meeting was a thatched cottage with a low-pitched roof; and the audience, a gathering, for the most part, of farm labourers and their wives. We are not surprised that the preacher's record of the service is, that it was more formidable in prospect than in actual experience. Without breaking down, or stopping mid-way, or running short of ideas, the boy-preacher was enabled to enlarge on the preciousness of Christ, until he could espy the haven ahead, and saw his course clear to dropping anchor there and coming to a respectable finish. The finish was made, but before he had time to announce the last hymn, an aged voice cried out, "Bless your dear heart, how old are you?" Waving the interruption aside as unseasonable, the last hymn was proceeded with and the service duly closed. But the fire of interrogation was re-opened. Curiosity on the subject of his age was general. "I am under sixty," he said. "Yes, and under sixteen," was rejoined. "Never mind my age," was his reply, "think of my theme." He was not let go, however, till he had promised to come again, if the gentleman at Cambridge was agreeable.

Thus the preacher's harness was put on, which he was destined never to take off while life's vital spark endured. Along with the duties of usher at school were combined the labours of an itinerant preacher. It was happy work to make known to others the precious Saviour he had found. The joy of the Lord was his strength. Nor could he be satisfied, though only a boy-preacher, with the accumulating proofs of acceptance which cheered him on every hand. He panted for souls. He wanted substantial and God-giving evidence of his commission as a preacher. He could not feed on popularity; to see conversions was the fruit for which he hungered, and great was his joy when, after many inquiries, he heard of one woman who had been saved under his word. So eager was he and delighted with the news that, brooking no delay, he drove over at once to see the woman in her cottage home, and to hear from her own lips of the grace she had received. God had given a spiritual child at last to one who was destined soon to have his quiver full of them, and, Abraham-like, to be a father of multitudes.

REV. JOHN McNEILL IN NAIRN.

Nairn has just been favoured with a visit of this well-known evangelist. The mission was for four days, July 27 to 31. Unfortunately for Nairn, a more unsuitable week could not be taken. The great cattle show being in Inverness this week, and a holiday in Nairn on Friday, rendered it almost impossible for many to be at the meetings; and yet the meetings were largely attended, considering these circumstances, and if not so crowded as Mr. McNeill is accustomed to, the profit of the meetings, we believe, were none the less, but possibly more so, as one heard with some measure of ease and comfort, and met in a church. To the preacher it seemed a relief, the want of crushing, and did not affect his intense zeal, eloquence, and simplicity in his memorable addresses.

The services were held in the Free Church, as the largest building in the town, and the ministers of United Presbyterian and Congregational churches united and took part in the various meetings on Sabbath afternoon. There was a very large meeting in the open-air in Links, and the mission was closed with a very impressive service in the Free Church on Sabbath evening every seat being occupied.

Mr. McNeill and his addresses have created "no small stir" among the folks in Nairn, and various opinions are freely expressed about both. But we feel bound to say that rarely have the realities of vital Christianity been brought so forcibly, clearly, and faithfully before the people; and if in doing so Mr. McNeill's wit, scorn, and contempt may be too plainly expressed, on consideration these will be found to be effectual in getting access to men and women in a way that smooth speech would not. We believe his visit has helped many young men and women to a brighter reception of the "truth as it is in Jesus," and a higher view of the glory of being his and following Him.

Mr. McNeill left on Monday for a month's rest at Braemar, beginning work again at Elgin early in September.

J. T. Melven.

CAV. LUIGI CAPELLINI, writing to a friend in Ireland, says he, is working in Messina, Sicily, with his colporteur, preaching and tract distributing. He intends returning through Calabria to Rome, to work among the sixty thousand soldiers at the great military manœuvres between Perugia and Ancona. Communications should be addressed 14, Pozzo delle Cornacchie, Rome.

CONGREGATIONAL MINISTER, LIVERPOOL.

DEATH has recently taken away many men who were regarded as pillars of the Church. The "grim Angel," robbed of its terrors, closed a remarkably busy and inspiring career on Thursday, July 14, when Dr. John Thomas, the beloved pastor of the Netherfield-road Welsh Congregational Tabernacle, Liverpool, passed peacefully away, "full of years and honours." In January last, on the eve of his ministerial jubilee, he was stricken down by illness, and since then the months of enforced inactivity have been passed in calmly waiting upon God, until death should be swallowed up in victory.

Dr. Thomas was a many-sided man. He gained a distinct and honourable reputation in many walks of public life. He was rightly called "The Prince of Welsh Nonconformist preachers." Out of the pulpit he was a force for righteousness. His journalistic contributions have had more than a passing interest and importance. His advocacy of social reforms came straight from a fervent heart.

John Thomas was born at Holyhead in 1821, and owed much to godly parents. When he was six years of age his parents removed to Bangor, where, amid scenes of great natural beauty, he spent the most impressionable years of his life. The charms which surrounded the home of his boyhood bound him closely to his native land, the love of which became one of the inspiring forces of his life. At a very early age God touched his heart. He thought a great deal about the theological controversies which were waged during his boyhood. The result was that when he was seventeen years of age he severed himself from the Church of his fathers, the Calvinistic Methodists, and attached himself to the Congregational Church. Soon after this he felt called to ministerial work, and commenced preaching in connection with the Independent Church at Bangor, then presided over by Rev. Arthur Jones. The young lay preacher was undoubtedly in earnest, and his success was sufficient to induce him to prepare for a pastoral career.

He commenced his studies at Marton School, and afterwards went to the seminary at Trwdyval. When twenty-one years of age (in 1842) he was ordained at Bwlchnewydd, in Carmarthenshire. There he laboured with conspicuous zeal and success for eight years. Even in those early days he was powerful in the pulpit and on the platform. His heart was in the right place, and his labours were correspondingly acceptable, not only to his own people, but also to many other congregations in the Principality. After only three years' work he was appointed Association Preacher, an honour which never before and never since has been conferred upon so young a preacher. Soon his name became a household word, and his earnest voice was heard preaching righteousness and temperance in nearly all the towns and villages of his native land. He signed the total abstinence pledge at the first temperance meeting held in the country, and from that time to his death he was an active apostle of this great reform. No man has rendered such service to the temperance cause in Wales.

For four years, from 1850 to 1854, he laboured at Glynnedd, in Glamorganshire. Then came the turning-point in his life. His fame as an earnest and successful preacher had spread to England, and he received an unanimous call to the Welsh Tabernacle, Liverpool. This church has for many years been regarded as one of the foremost in the denomination. The vigour and eloquence of the pastor contributed to the building up of a strong church. For over thirty-eight years he laboured in this Tabernacle with increasing success. He was dearly beloved by his people, to whom he was a father indeed. He spent the best years of his life in their service, and when the shadows of evening began to gather around his venerated head, his friends showed their gratitude in a loving manner. In May last the jubilee of his ministry was celebrated. A large meeting was held in the Tabernacle, and a national testimonial, consisting of an illuminated address from the various denominations of the Welsh people and a cheque for £1000, were presented to him. There was also an illuminated address from the members of the church in which he ministered for so many years. Both addresses spoke in endearing terms of the connection which had subsisted between church and pastor, and also of the valuable service which Dr. Thomas had given to every good cause both in England and Wales. Dr. Thomas was present at this memorable gathering, but his medical advisers would not allow him to speak. His message of thanks was read by his son, Rev. Owen Thomas, M.A., of London. The long ministry of the late pastor has been in every way a blessing and success. Notwithstanding the fact that several other Welsh churches have been erected in the neighbourhood, the membership steadily increased. All the organisations were in excellent order when the pastor was laid aside. Those who regularly listened to his preaching had many opportunities of treasuring up for future comfort and consolation beautiful thoughts and noble sentiments.

He was, however, far from being a preacher of thought and sentiment. He was primarily a practical preacher of a practical Gospel—a Gospel which is capable of giving comfort to the distressed and courage to the discomfited. His teaching had but one end—to fill the hearts of his hearers with a deeper reverence and a more profound love of God. Beyond this no preacher can go. To this point the deceased and beloved pastor did go, and he had the gratification of seeing many noble characters built upon the precepts which God gave him for the enlightenment of his people.

This sketch would be incomplete without some reference, however brief, to Dr. Thomas's arduous labours as a lecturer, journalist, and author. It has been authoritatively stated that he preached or lectured in almost every Congregational pulpit in Wales. He contributed to many of the Welsh papers and magazines, and since 1867 his weekly contributions to the Tyst a'r Dydd, which he edited, have been eagerly read by all sections of the people of Wales. Amongst the many books which he published may be mentioned two volumes of sermons, "The History of Independent Churches in Wales," in five exhaustive volumes; several biographies; "The History of the Temperance Movement in Wales," with a large number of important pamphlets.

During a visit to America, in 1876, the University of Middlebury conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. In 1878 he was elected Chairman of the Welsh Congregational Union, and in 1885 the Congregational Union of England and Wales elected him to a similar honour. In these capacities he showed himself to be an admirable business man.

Though a strong man and addicted to the occasional use of strong language, Dr. Thomas never made an enemy and never lost a friend. Within his own church there was always peace—always a reverential respect for the old man who had spent his days and nights in their service. There was many an aching heart amongst his congregation when the news of his decease reached Liverpool from Colwyn Bay, where he had gone for change; and there were few dry eyes amongst the congregation when the funeral sermon was preached by Dr. Herber Evans, one of his oldest and dearest friends. God's servants fall, but his work goes on. The last words of the late pastor's address of thanks to his congregation struck a noble key-note:—

I am still in the scales. I am only recovering strength very slowly; and more than likely I shall be compelled to take complete rest for the greater portion of this year. If it is the Lord's will, I should like to live a few more years, if I can do a little more work for Him. But I am not content to live in "the corner." I want to live to work. But if, after fair trial, I find that I have not sufficient strength to stand before the Ark of the Lord, and to lead his people, I shall retire quietly, leaving the work to someone else, whom God has ready to undertake it. "Finally, brethren, farewell! Be perfect; be of good comfort; be of one mind; live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you."

In this precious legacy the church to whom he ministered so long may well rejoice. They could not have a better guide along the pathway of life which yet remains to be travelled.

MR. INGLIS IN MILE END.

AT THE GREAT ASSEMBLY HALL.

Another month's mission in the Great Assembly Hall by Mr. Charles Inglis has resulted in much blessing. In March last this evangelist held a very successful four weeks' services in the same hall, where his yearly visits have been so regular and so largely blessed by the Lord, during his eighteen years' connection with the Tower Hamlets Mission, that he has won many hearts; and there are those to-day who greet him on his periodical returns who were brought to the Lord through his preaching as far back as the old tent meetings at the corner of White Horse-lane, and the East End Conference Hall, Carlton-square; spots endeared to hundreds in East London, as memory travels back to the blessed times of soul-saving in both these places, when many evangelists, whose voices are now silent, preached with power the Gospel of the Grace of God. The power manifested in the preaching of our brother Inglis will best be illustrated by giving two or three instances of the penetrating way in which the truth of God finds its way to the hearts of the most unlikely. One night a gentleman from a large town in Warwickshire sauntered into the hall. In a fit of temper he had some words with his wife, left home at a moment's notice, and came to London. Still suffering from the sting of wrath, he walked about until he found himself in the East-end. Passing the Hall, he came in. The word went home to his heart, he entered the inquiry room, gave himself to the Lord, and that night took train home again, a new man in Christ Jesus.

Another, occupying a high position in the City, separated from his wife through drink, had lost everything, and was on his way to drown himself in Regent's Canal. He was invited by a worker to come in, and that night was born again, and has since nightly attended the hall, his face beaming with fresh light and life.

The next is culled from a letter received by Mr. Inglis: "I have been manager of music-halls and public-houses. I never had twenty-four hours' perfect happiness while in the line till I signed the pledge at the Great Assembly Hall, and I have now made up my mind never to go into the music-hall line again. I have attended the Hall to hear you preach, and mean to do all in my power to follow your advice; and, with God's help, if I live to the time you return, I shall be a wiser and better Christian. I am sure I am on the right road now, as I am always longing for the time to come for the hall to open, so that I may come and hear the Word of God. God bless Mr. Charrington's good work, and with God's blessing, may you, Mr. Inglis, live long to preach the Gospel." K.

NORTH AMERICAN INDIANS.—Rev. G. Cook, of Staggville Mission, Kinosota, is carrying on an earnest and useful work among the Indians, who are very poor, and live in the winter on the fish caught in the holes made in the ice of the lake. Poor as these are they have been giving and labouring towards the necessary repairs of the Mission Church, most of the materials having to be fetched sixty miles over very bad roads. Mr. Cook requires £15 to complete. Miss S. A. Carpenter, auxiliary helper, would be glad to answer inquiries or receive help. She may be addressed, Compton Bishop, Axbridge, Somerset.

THE NORTH AFRICA MISSION.

THE SECRETARY'S RECENT TOUR.

Before arranging for work in Egypt it seemed desirable to see the missionaries in Syria, Palestine, and Upper Egypt, and hear from them of their work. Accompanied by Mr. W. Summers, of the North Africa Mission, I therefore went to Beyrout and Damascus, and thence through Palestine to Tiberias, Nazareth, Nablous, Ramallah, Jerusalem, and Jaffa, and later on we visited Cairo. At all these places we were most kindly received by the various missionaries, who gave us much useful information as to the work being done, most of which could only be appreciated by those engaged in a similar field.

Our object was to compare the conditions of work in the lands named with those in North Africa, and to discover, if possible, whether some of the methods might be adopted by the North Africa Mission; but we were at once struck with the fact that though in some respects similar, the conditions of work in these lands differ widely from those in North Africa. In Syria and Palestine we have Moslems living among native nominal Christians. This seems to have had the effect of taking the edge off their fanaticism, while on the other hand increasing their class hatred. The Moslems are greatly prejudiced against the Christians, and not without cause; and even where the latter are converted, they are unwelcome on account of the old feud. On the other hand, were all the Moslems converted at once, they would still be treated with distrust and dislike. The Christians know that Moslem habits have entered into the social life, and would not think of consenting to their daughters being married even to converted Moslems, so there is some reason for their prejudice.

The great factor, however, in Christian work in these lands is that they are under the Turkish rule, and from political rather than religious reasons, these rulers are opposed to all Christian work. The Moslems of Syria would probably give little opposition were they their own masters. These, then, seem to be the special features of work: Turkish Government opposition, hatred of various sections of the community for one another, and a moderate amount of fanatical opposition from Moslems locally, as well as from Romanists, Greeks, &c. The Jews seem especially difficult to reach in Palestine.

The ideas of some, that the people are anxious to hear the Gospel, are a delusion. Nowhere, at home or abroad, do we find men naturally seeking God, but loving darkness more than light. The first great difficulty, therefore, even when the language is acquired, is to get an audience; all are satisfied fairly well with their own religion, and while friends at home are asking how many converts there are, the missionary is casting about him to know how to get any one to listen to him. There have been, generally speaking, three great agencies used, viz.:—Preaching, literature, and educational work. Latterly medical missions have been recognised as a first-class instrumentality to bring people under the influence of the Gospel.

In Syria and Palestine education has been the main instrumentality used, and a large number of schools have been opened, and thousands of children educated and taught the truths of the Bible. A number of these have been converted, especially from the nominal Christians, and a few from among Moslems. The literary work of the American Press is well known. The splendid Arabic translation of the Bible by the now venerable Dr. Van Dyke has been, and will be, an untold blessing to the Arabic-speaking world. There are also a large number of other works in Arabic, and might be more if there were more liberty to circulate them.

There seems to be a danger lest education, which is only a means, should so occupy attention that the end, the leading of the educated to Christ, is not attained. We heard so often the statement that the rising generation is the great hope, that it seemed almost as though the present generation was abandoned as beyond the reach of the Holy Ghost. Education is a most useful agency to bring the young within the influence of their teachers, but unless those teachers are spiritually-minded Christians, seeking the conversion of their scholars, the results will be small indeed.

We saw a fine mission school, from an educational point of view, in one part of our travels, where the under teachers were some of them Roman Catholic, and some Moslem, &c. It seemed to us it would be wonderful if those children were converted. Medical missions are useful, but unless the Gospel is brought to bear upon the patients, the healing of their bodies will end in philanthropy, and not their salvation from sin. Wherever we found the Gospel preached in power to the people, there were encouraging, even if not large, results. Medical missions are frequently insufficiently supplied with workers. One doctor will generally make work for half-a-dozen other helpers if the cases are properly followed up. Medical missions should be properly supplied with lady helpers, &c., or they will soon become only agencies for bodily healing.

In Palestine the work seems hindered by the deadness of Protestantism. In one place where the men are Protestants from political reasons, their wives remain in the Greek Church, saying, "We will not become Protestants unless Protestantism makes more alteration in your lives than it has done." The work seemed considerably more difficult than in North Africa, specially in view of Turkish rule, and to call for special sympathy.

The Missions among Jews are a separate feature. The Israelites may be divided into two classes—natives, and those who have lately entered the country. Probably in no part of the world are they more difficult to reach than in Palestine. Large numbers have lately joined colonies, of which there are said to be twenty-two, smaller or larger, in the country. In Jerusalem the Jews are double all the other population put together, but at present they are blinded by unbelief. The most encouragement seems among the immigrants.

In Egypt we saw some of the C.M.S. workers, but all the older missionaries were absent. The American Presbyterians are doing a very good work, mainly among the Copts. The Lord has blessed and is blessing their labours, and the converts are steadily increasing. The number of Moslems baptized is encouraging, though not very great; but we believe this mission has reaping work in store for it. There remains an immense population still untouched, especially in the Delta of the Nile. Here the North Africa Mission proposes to attempt work, making Alexandria its base of operations. Mr. and Mrs. Summers, and three other workers, are now there, and for them, as well as for the numerous labourers in Syria, Palestine, and Egypt, we would ask sympathy and prayer.

SEAMEN'S CHRISTIAN FRIEND SOCIETY.—Special services were held on Bank Holiday at the Seamen's Chapel, Well-street, adjacent to the Sailors' Home. A well-attended open-air meeting was followed by a service in the chapel, the congregation consisting mostly of seamen, amongst them being quite a number of Naval Reserve men. Addresses were given by Mrs. Hill, Miss Messer, and others. As a result ten signed the temperance pledge, and a number remained for conversation, being anxious about spiritual things.

THE "CHRISTIAN LIFEBOAT CREW."—"For me to live is Christ" was the text given to the members of the "Christian Lifeboat Crew," who held a successful muster in the forecastle of the Welcome Home on Tuesday week. Miss Child gave some encouraging accounts, which had been received from Hull and Grimsby and other ports in different parts of the world. The work at the "Welcome Home" is being uninterruptedly carried on with manifest tokens of God's favour. One sailor testified that he was brought to Christ while sitting in the same seat a week ago. Among those who took part, in addition to the seafarers, were Mrs. Constantine, from Smyrna, and Mr. William Luff ow first and last to me." Notice that, before eclaring this, Jesus said, "Fear not." If there one thing that Satan does to those who have ot a blessing, it is to make them think of the ture—and nearly all our fears arise from what he future will bring. You may say, I will have o leave Keswick to-morrow, and hen he knows that I have determined to go to o more balls, and not to play whist any more? nd what about that clergyman who will not moke any more?—and there have been some mokers about; I have noticed a great deal of dour that is not the odour of sanctity. There Mr. So-and-so, all of whose sermons are preared in clouds of smoke—no wonder they were ry! The answer to all inquirers will be, "Christ as become first and last to me. I do not raise y spirits by pouring spirits down; nor do I ake my mind clearer by the diffusion of smoke. esus supplies all I need."

I think it is Mr. Spurgeon who said that "Fear ot" is a plant that grows very plentifully in od's garden. There is not a fear that will reach our soul of which you will not find the antidote God's garden. "Fear not, little flock." "It I; be not afraid." "This poor man cried, and e Lord heard him, and delivered him out of all is fears." Can I truthfully say that I have got he same deliverance that David had? Am I elivered from the fear of the "Church"? Very w are delivered from the fear of Church authoities. Are you delivered from the fear of losing our reputation? When you go home, you will e most persecuted by those who know the letter f their Bible most. Nearly all the

the days of his flesh proceeded from those who ew their Bibles. The education of the Pharisee as not finished until he could say his Hebrew ible off by heart. But when he saw Jesus, who lfilled every word of Scripture, he led Him out Calvary and crucified Him! That is what the tter men did—the men who had only a critical nowledge. And our Lord Jesus is being put on e cross and tortured to death again in most of r Divinity schools to-day by the critical letternowledge of our blind leaders of the blind. All ought of Christ is being left out of our ivinity teaching. There is nothing I tremble more than that all the love and brightness ould be crushed out of the young men in our ivinity schools. If you put Christ first you ed not fear; you will come out of the furnace for it is a furnace—brighter than before. "Be ou faithful unto death, and thou shalt receive crown of life."

Notice, it says, "Fear not, for I am the first d the last." The Lord Jesus shows us that He the compendium of all history. He existed fore history began, and He will exist when the story of sin shall come to an end. Therefore e is before sin, and will be after sin is put own, for "He must reign until He hath put all emies under his feet;" and then Christ in God d God in Christ shall be "all in all." We are the winning side; the Lord Jesus Christ is the inner, and I side with Him. At the present time, hen Satan is marshalling his hosts for Armaeddon, and the evil angels are coming down in e mysteries of spiritualism to this world, side ith Christ.

I have never a fear; Jesus has planned the hole history of our life. At a railway station Australia a working man said to us, "Christ is rst, and Christ is last, and I am shut in in the iddle. Hallelujah, Amen." The train moved f. I thank God I can say the same. If you et as far as that man, then, indeed, you will be ept safe, and He will burn up your enemies on very side.

But to make Christ first and last implies a eat deal. You will never know what it is to be y cold or boiling hot (as the Greek is, Rev. iii. 5) until Christ is first and last. Give us a on that falls upon us, we shall start. But it e lukewarm that we like, for it is pleasant. o should be boiling over, so as to scald every e we meet. You have not got to that yet, I ak; although you may have got to seethe a le. When there is a fire within you, it imes plenty of opposition and cold water. If you are boiling hot, look out for the cold water douche, for it is sure to come!

"I am the Living One." O Lord, that lifts our heart up to Thee at once. We are dealing with the living and the loving Christ, as we have dealt with the dying and the dead one. No more shadow of death, or bitter despair, will come near Thee. For even in the sunlight of thy Father's presence Thou art the living One, and I am there with Thee. Let thy resurrection life flow into our hearts here, that we may be raised out of ourselves and exalted in experience into the heavenly places in Christ Jesus! The Lord adds: "I have the keys of hell and of death." I turn round upon any unconverted soul, and say: The living Jesus, the compassionate Jesus, that wept tears of Divine despair over lost Jerusalem—that loving Jesus who died for you, has the keys of hell and of death. If you reject Him, the time must come when He will turn the keys of hell and of death, and you will be locked within those gloomy portals for ever, for ever, for ever! If Christ shuts the door, who will force it open again?

MY HEART GOES OUT

to thee, poor soul. Come and receive the love of the Living One, and then He will shut the door, and you will be shut out from it. Who will allow Christ to shut himself from death into heaven this day? He says, "Behold, I am alive for ever more." Let us have heaven upon earth.

Heaven above is softer blue,
Earth around is sweeter green,
Something lives in every hue
Christless eyes have never seen;
Birds with gladder songs o'erflow,
Flowers with deeper beauty shine,
Since I knew as now I know,
I am his, and He is mine.

Things that once were wild alarms
Cannot now disturb my rest;
Closed in everlasting arms,
Pillowed on the loving breast.
Oh to lie for ever here,
Doubt and care and self resign,
While He whispers in my ear,
I am his and He is mine.

His for ever, only his;
Who the Lord and me shall part?
Ah, with what a rest of bliss
Christ can fill the loving heart!
Heaven and earth may fade and flee,
Firstborn light in gloom decline,
But, while God and I shall be,
I am his, and He is mine.

COUNTERFEIT CONSECRATION.

By REV. C. INWOOD.

In the opening chapter of the Book of Job we read that there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them. He does so still. The wolf knows the quiet haunts of the sheep; and where the sheep gather the wolf is very likely to appear. It comes to this: Satan is present in every revival of religion, and in every holiness convention. He is there to tease and tempt, to criticise and to discredit, and to hinder what God by his mighty Spirit is doing in the hearts of his children. One of the most effective ways in which he hinders the work of grace in the hearts of God's children, is by putting before them what I may venture to call a counterfeit consecration. Almost everything that God does amongst us, the devil tries to imitate and counterfeit; and I think that there never was a time when the evil one was so successfully imitating what God is doing as in this nineteenth century. So we have counterfeit miracles, and prophecies, and religions, and gospels, and Bibles, and ministries; and there is also such a thing as counterfeit consecration.

We must all feel that, on this great subject, it is of the utmost possible importance that we should discern between the false and the true. If our conceptions of consecration are faulty and unscriptural, depend upon it our experience will be the same, and we shall bring discredit and dishonour upon the Lord Jesus and the power of his precious blood and his almighty Spirit. A false ideal of consecration cannot produce a truly consecrated life. It will be very sad if, after having taken part in conventions like this, when we come by-and-by to stand before the judgment seat of Christ, we discover that our very consecration is only something which God, in his infinite mercy to us, is compelled utterly to consume.

How are we to find out what is true? "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God." If we want to be true here, we have to go simply and prayerfully to God's Word. The Word of God, applied by the Holy Spirit, is the only infallible test upon this matter of consecration. Mark you, even the possession of the inspired Word itself does not make us in the least independent of the inspiring Spirit. We are as utterly dependent upon the Spirit of God for the right application of the Word of God as we were in the first instance for the revelation of the truth itself to us. And if we are going to face this question, we must be prepared to be loyal and submissive to the Word of God and the Spirit of God. May the Spirit of burning make the Word a searching, burning, purging, God-honouring word in all our hearts to-night.

Let us look at Judges xvii. and xviii., taking verse 3 of the former chapter as the key of the whole. They present to us a very singular, and shall I add a very admonitory illustration of what may be called perverted consecration. In the verse specified the mother of Micah, the Ephraimite, says, "I had wholly dedicated the silver unto the Lord, to make a graven image and a molten image." The act here referred to was a very religious act, done in the most religious manner, and with due regard for the proprieties and conventionalities of religion. This was a religious woman, and there was even an air of self-sacrifice about her act. She was a widow, and in all probability these eleven hundred shekels were all the money that was left to her; and she dedicates them to what we call religious uses. If a poor widow to-day were known to give her little all to religious uses there is not a religious newspaper in the kingdom, if it heard the fact, that would not report it as a noble illustration of consecration. But this act, that had a religious and self-sacrificing look about it, was tainted and spurious, and something with which God could not possibly be satisfied.

There are two features in this act of consecration that will warrant us in this statement. First of all, notice that, so far as we can see, there was no such thing on the woman's part as a personal consecration of herself to God. She gave her silver, but she did not give herself; and the absence of personal surrender vitiated the whole act, no matter how self-sacrificing it might look. I venture to think that this is to-day, now that consecration is upon the lips of tens of thousands of Christian people. We make the mistake in one of two ways. It may be, like this woman, we give up time or talents or wealth. We make what we call a sacrifice for religious uses, and we call that consecration. We give something we possess, and we call that consecration. Now, of course, it is perfectly right for us to place all we have in God's hands. That is one aspect of consecration. But you must not give your substance to God in lieu of the surrender of yourself. If you imagine that any gift from yourself can be accepted as a substitute for, or as an equivalent for, personal consecration, you are making one of the most solemn mistakes possible. You have God's idea in 2 Corinthians viii. 5, where we learn that the saints of Macedonia "first gave their own selves to the Lord." You say, "I have given this or that to God;" or you say, "I have been to this or that Convention for years, and my Christian life has been a series of dedications to God," or, "I have given something that I never gave before." But have you first of all given yourself—spirit, soul, and body—to God? Has there been a total, absolute, unconditional surrender of your whole blood-bought nature back to God? If not, though you give your body to be burned, and tens of thousands of pounds sterling to missionary objects, you have not yet learned the first elementary lesson on this tremendously important subject.

Some one may say, "I have not made that mistake. I do not confound the consecration of anything I possess with personal consecration." You say, "I have given myself, and not my substance merely." You say you have consecrated yourself, but—consecrated to what? I tell you there are many Christian people to-day whose consecration is of this kind; they have consecrated themselves to their church, to Christian work, to some particular form or sphere of work—perhaps to some very self-denying form of work. Perhaps they have given themselves up to the propagation of some unpopular truth, or to some great social and philanthropic movement. I hear people say, I have given myself to mission work, to slum work, to temperance work. That is all right in its place, but let me remind you that thousands of people are consecrating themselves to some part of God's work who have never taken the step of consecrating themselves to the Lord. What is the result? There is a wrong order which inverts all the rest, and it comes to this, that thousands who are talking of being consecrated and their self-elected service first; and that cannot pass muster with God, although it may with any church or organisation.

Personal consecration to God is his first demand of you. That demand must be met fully, must be met first. If I am addressing any Christian worker who has not yielded his or her whole self to the Lord, I say yours is a perverted consecration. First, you must give your own selves to the Lord.

There was a second feature in this case that made it even still more perverted. It is this. This woman gave her silver, she said, to God. But for what? She gave it "to make a graven image and a molten image." To make an idol! Not an obscene and heathen idol,—she was a religious woman; but a religious idol. I venture to think that a religious idol is the most fascinating, and the most popular, and the most perilous of all idols that you can know anything about. The record reads almost like a travesty; at least it struck me so when I studied it the other day. Such a travesty, and yet, as I thought about it, and prayed over it, I could not help seeing that the same mistake is being made by many Christian people to-day. It is a case of self lying at back of our consecration, trying to use God's patronage as a tool to work out its own self-will. We think God's patronage will take the harm out of our idolatry, make it more respectable, more seemly, more prosperous; by a sort of testimonial from God we hope to secure a good position in the eyes of the world or the Church.

We give our time, talents, wealth, or scholarship to God, or we give our ecclesiastical position, and we call it consecration. I want to know what is the object we have in view. Is it that we may be used, or flung aside contemptuously? That we may be exalted or trampled in the dust? No; in hundreds of cases it is to make something that will make us compare favourably with other Christians, that will minister to our vanity or self-importance. Something which we can worship in secret, of which we can be proud without losing caste among Christian people. It is simply the old self with the new religious reputation; another garment in the newest religious fashion. For I tell you that religious fashions change just as frequently as Paris fashions, and thousands of Christian people are slaves to the one who had been delivered from slavery to the other.

When consecration, in a word, becomes a popular thing, that moment it may become an idol. Yes, a reputation for success in Christian work, a reputation for evangelistic zeal, or personal sanctity; a reputation as a teacher of holiness truth on platforms such as this: it is possible for any of these things to become idols, and sometimes some of us feel that so keenly, that it is almost impossible for us to make up our minds to stand on such a platform again. The religious idols inside the Church are, I believe, bringing more discredit and pain to Jesus Christ to-night than all the idols found outside the Church. "Given to God to make a new religious idol." God save us from any such idolatry as that!

See, then, how angry the woman got (verse 2). It was not so much anger over the loss of the money as that now she could not get her darling idol. There is such a thing as this. I have discovered it myself to the sorrow of my own heart. We consecrate ourselves to God, and some opportunity for a piece of Christian work is suddenly closed upon us. We fret about it, and chafe under it, and fume away, not because the work is not done, but, as God who sees the heart knows, because we have not got the opportunity of showing off ourselves—we have not got the opportunity of bowing down before that darling religious idol. A great deal of anger and cursing springs from that awful root.

Notice what comes of this perverted consecration. The first thing is that this woman's son's home was cursed by it. Ah, if the damage of perverted consecration could be limited to ourselves, it would not be so bad. But a low spiritual tone in the parent is likely to produce a similarly low spiritual tone in the child. I have come to feel that the first fruits of a parent's idolatry are never visible until the child of that parent has a home of its own. Your wealth, luxury, pride, or desire to keep up position, or to get into society, will not only do you harm, but will become a great snare to your children. This woman gave her child a religious name, "Micah," which means "who is like unto Jehovah." The idol did far more harm than the name did good when she gave it to him. In subtle forms like this you are making idols to pollute and darken the homes of the poor children to whom you give Christian names.

Further, notice how rapidly Micah goes down. First, his mother purchases the idol; then the son becomes an idol-worshipper; and then, worse still, the grandson actually becomes a priest in the idol temple. If that is not a down-grade movement, I have yet to learn what is. And it is taking place under our very eyes, and we seem to have but little power to arrest it. We read that the son consecrated his own son to become his priest. That solemn fact suggests to my mind this fact, that perverted consecration, perhaps more than anything else, leads up to and necessitates and man-made ordinations. It seems to bring the human into undue prominence almost everywhere, and God is put on the retired list, with lots of honours and lots of compliments, but with no actual command in the personal work. Man made the idol; and so you have a man-made priest, exercising man-made ministry, before the man-made idol.

Then comes another step down. He has consecrated his son to the priesthood, but that is not enough, for he is but a "layman." If he could get somebody a little more ecclesiastical, it would suit him better! Then a Levite came by; he was not exactly the right thing, not being in the priestly order; but he was nearer to it than his own son. With the Levite he drives a hard bargain, that he should become his priest. The man was to have only twenty-five shillings a year, his food, and a suit of clothes—and I do not know of anything so low as that in England and Wales. There was but one redeeming feature; true, the man was not a priest, but he was from the family of Moses, and, as we say, he "came of a good family." That was much for one whose thought was centred in a man-made ministry and a man-made ordination.

The man said, "I am his priest"—not God's priest; and he was contented with the arrangement. There was most complete satisfaction on the part of Micah. "Now," he says, "I know that the Lord will do me good, because I have a Levite for a priest. I have been and have the right man as priest. I have my own idol and my own priest—glory be to myself!" That was what it meant. The only time he mentions God was when he said in effect, "The Lord will be pleased—will be proud; and, I am sure, will give me prosperity now that I have an idol temple and an idol priest."

This satisfaction, however, came to an end very rudely. One day there came a wandering band of Danites—men out on a marauding expedition, and they heard of this priest and idol, and went, six hundred in number, with their weapons of war, and captured the gods and the priest, and they were all lost. Poor Micah had put all his eggs into one basket, and that basket was not in God's hands. The last view you get of Micah is a very humbling one—that of a man who seemed like a child crying over lost toys. I find no record of repentance. He had lost his religious all and he does not seem to have realised that gods that can be stolen were not worth keeping in his house. Would to God a band of Danite marauders would do something similar with us! If some came and swept away all such idols, it would be the beginning of Pentecostal times in your lives and homes.

Why did these people do this? The reason is given in ver. 6: "In those days there was no king in Israel." Ah! idolatry is only possible when the centre throne of one's being is unfilled by the Lord Jesus Christ Himself. And as we read there was no king in the land, we find, later on, that there was no magistrate there. Every lesser or subsidiary moral authority in a man's soul is weakened, upset, and destroyed when the Lord Jesus Christ is dethroned in that man's heart and life. You cannot have true order and life unless Jesus Christ reigns in all your being,

"LORD OF EVERY MOTION THERE."

I do not see, for a moment, why this service should not be a glorious coronation service of Jesus Christ the King. There is not one who has not sung the hymn, "Crown Him Lord of all." You have asked the angels and saints, prophets and martyrs, Jews, and Gentile sinners, to do it. That is all very well and beautiful, but do you not think it will please the Lord Jesus better if you will crown Him King in your own hearts now? That is what He desires, and what we desire. We want Jesus Christ to be King in a cleansed heart, King through the indwelling of his own Spirit. The King is outside much of your life, and there is all manner of confusion and rebellion and unrest. He is close at the door, and He says, "Lift up your heads, and be ye lift up ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in." Fling open the gates; hail the King, and tell Him you are ashamed you have not known Him as King before, but henceforth spirit, soul, and body are to be his, and Jesus is to be King, Lord, Supreme in your whole heart and life.

After these searching words Mr. Inwood gave utterance in prayer to the desires of those who wished to surrender entirely to God. He said: "Lord Jesus, I yield all; I believe thou dost accept all. I believe thou dost cleanse and fill me. Henceforth thou art mine. Other lords have had dominion over me, and have cursed my life as a Christian and a worker; but henceforth Thou art King. I 'bring forth the royal diadem and crown Thee Lord of all,' and call Thee—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit—to witness that I am thy surrendered property, and Thou art King eternal, immortal, invisible, in this yielded heart of mine." Many followed this prayer with hearts overflowing with holy resolution.

SCOTCH STUDENTS IN CAMP.

A large party of students from Edinburgh, some of them medicals, but mostly divinity students, were encamped in tents at the back of the Convention tent. They were in charge of Professor Laidlaw. A larger tent provided a dining-room, and here, during the week, brief addresses were given to the students by Mr. Meyer, Mr. Grubb, Mr. Macgregor, and Mr. Moule; we append the delightful little bit of personal testimony that constituted Mr. Moule's remarks on the Friday morning. The previous evening there had been a testimony meeting, when about thirty of the young fellows bore witness to the reception of definite blessing. On Friday a number of them drove to Grasmere, where an open-air meeting was held.

About twenty students from Glasgow also attended the Convention, being chaperoned by Rev. Wm. Ross, of Cowcaddens.

MR. MOULE'S TESTIMONY.

What shall I say in these few minutes? I can only say what a special interest it is to me on an occasion like this to meet friends from Scotland, and to look them in the face, as we meet together here before our Lord, asking Him to show us more and more of what He can be to us in life. As I look back over my own short history in connection with such a movement as this, I feel how immensely much I owe to blessings received in Scotland. Eight years ago, I was in a very different attitude toward this work to what I am now. I was looking with a great deal of misgiving upon much that I thought was connected with it. In the autumn of 1884 I was with my wife and child staying with some relatives near Linlithgow, and sorely against my will I was persuaded to attend a meeting at a sort of minor Keswick that my wife's cousins had, for a good many years, held there. I tried to find every decent and courteous excuse for being away. I thought I ought to go and see Stirling; that I ought to do this and that; but nothing would quite honestly serve as a bar to the barn at Polmont.

So I went to the first meeting. I did not get much good then; but it stirred up a tremendous conflict in my soul. I went again in the evening, and heard two addresses, one by my now honoured friend, the elder Mr. Sloan, of Glasgow. It was on the sin of Christians in Christian work—the self that enters into Christian work. It was the most tremendous message of conviction after the conviction on my first coming to Christ years before which I had ever had. The next address was given by my dear friend, as he now is (I had only recently been engaged in friendly controversy with him in words), Mr. Evan Hopkins. The message he then gave from the Word of God as to the power of our Lord Jesus Christ to deal with the power of sin in his people, was made a message from heaven to me. At the after-meeting, after great conflict about it, I found yself standing up to confess how much I wanted is blessing of consecration from the Lord.

I shall date from September, 1884, an era in ie little history of my soul, and of what the ord in any way has had for me to do, which has een marked with a mark of blessed difference what went before. The rest and liberty of a rrender, definite, articulate, distinct, and as r as I know, unreserved (but God always knows etter than we know ourselves, and we shall ever get to the end of "Search me, O God"), ut a surrender as far as I know to the will of ur Lord Jesus Christ, and to his power to save e from the tyranny of myself, and to give me ie liberty of his dominion. It was fter a few weeks I had to return to Cambridge r the October term. It was one that brought ith it not only heavy work, but some extra-rdinarily complicated difficulties, both in eligious work and in other ways. May I say hat I never spent a happier or a more peaceful rm than that. The difficulties came, but the ord had come first, and the rest of meeting lem all in Him, with Him, by Him, as He is our rm every morning—not only his arm to lean on, ut our arm—was what I cannot describe. I aresay many of you know what it is.

From that time I have felt a deepening con-raint to thank and bless God for the movement which this place has in his mercy contributed o much. The Lord keep it as He keeps us. The ork keep his people from spiritual illusions. he Lord keep his people above all things from piritual boasting. The Lord keep us ever more astened, more humble, more reverent, more orshipping, and more intensely convinced that ly perfectness is in Christ Jesus our Lord lone, in whom the Father rests with infinite good easure. The Lord fill the movement, as we look Him to fill us, and make it to be not a wave ut a tide, always flowing; that it shall be a prac-ally unknown thing to find a man who knows hrist and does not know Christ's power in life, heart, for work, for sacrifice, for suffering; ho is not in the Lord's hand as well as in the rd's keeping

And now I look around this tent on you young en. "Ye are strong; the word of God dwelleth you, and ye have overcome the wicked one." s that a description of you? Do not forget any its parts. "The word of God dwelleth in u." "Ye have overcome the wicked one." ou will overcome by his mercy through a patient ily use, in watching and prayer, of the discovered cret of the Lord Jesus by the Holy Ghost welling in the heart by faith, wielding the an for himself, giving him the rest and joy knowing henceforth "Not unto us, but unto im who died for us and rose again. To Him, by , through us, and in us, be glory this day and ways."

At the close of last week about £1250 had been ntributed to the Keswick Convention for cious purposes, exclusive of jewellery; and re contributions are coming in.

AMONG THE ROMAN POOR.

Mrs. Wall writes: During the past weeks we ve frequently had nearly six hundred weekly tendances at our Medical Mission. This work one, leaving out the large meetings for the or and the mothers' meetings, gives opportuni-es of visting hundreds of families and talking the people of Jesus. My two Biblewomen do l they can. Frequently when visiting one poor ck woman in one of these immense houses they ve opportunities of conversing with ten or elve more; in this way they have formed tle social gatherings where these women will me, say every fortnight, to ask questions and nverse about Jesus. They will remain an hour l more and not feel tired. They have estab-shed their little gatherings outside nearly all e gates of the city. The poor are obliged to ve out there on account of the rents being uch lower, so you can imagine the thousands of ople who, although not often healthy, are liged on account of the great poverty to live ere. What we need is more workers. We uld receive in our "Home for Workers" four nglish ladies. The expense of living would not great—one pound a week. There are at esent two Italian workers in the Home, which les the facility for learning the language very t. During the past winter we have fre-ntly had nearly six hundred attendances at ir Medical Missions during the week.

MRS. BAEYERTZ AT NOTTING-HILL.

The special message which Mrs. Baeyertz seems, in coming to this land, to have laid upon her heart is twofold—holiness of life and the return of the Lord Jesus Christ. At all events these have been the points which have impressed themselves most deeply on the minds of some who, day by day, have listened to our sister's Bible readings and Gospel addresses in the West London Tabernacle, Notting-hill, where she has been holding a ten days' mission.

Each afternoon from Monday to Friday in last week, and from Monday to Wednesday in this, a Bible-reading has been given. These have been much enjoyed, and many have felt that on the subjects treated the Word of God has been opened up in a very fresh and practical manner. The themes have included The Blessed Life, The Clean Heart, The Second Coming of the Lord, and The Great White Throne. The following brief summary of one afternoon's talk will interest many as illustrating Mrs. Baeyertz's style of teaching:—

"Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right (or constant) spirit within me" (Psa. li. 10). This prayer of the Psalmist contains our subject for this afternoon. Notice that the word "clean," as used in the Old Testament, has in the New Testament its equivalent in the word "pure," so that our prayer in New Testament language ought to be, "Create in me a pure heart," and you remember Jesus Christ says, "Blessed are the pure in heart." How are our hearts to be pure? Only by constant cleansing. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." So long as we are in the flesh sin in some form will be found in us, and we will be subject to temptation. I am not claiming perfection or sinlessness. But I do say that Scripture teaches that it is the right and privilege of every child of God to have a new heart, a pure heart, a clean heart; to have the motives, from which actions spring, purified; to be so yielded up, given over to Christ as King that He may reign in us, and work in us and by us his good pleasure. We must seek to let God have his own way in us; where He comes, He reigns; where He reigns there is power over sin and for service.

Now turn to that wonderful saying of Zacharias in Luke i. 68-79. The coming of Jesus Christ was in order that "we should be saved from our enemies," "that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve Him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before Him, all the days of our life." These enemies are bad temper, pride, worldliness, want of love, and similar hindrances to a life of communion. From such the Lord Jesus gives deliverance, if we but trust Him. And this deliverance is in order that we may serve before Him (not before men merely) in holiness and righteousness. Holiness is the beautiful life which Jesus Christ puts into us, lived out by the energy of the Holy Spirit

Now, turning to the Old Testament, we find in Ezek. xxxvi. 25, 26, the promise "I will cleanse you; a new heart also will I give you." This is a Millennial passage, I know; but its blessings are for us now. What, then, are the conditions? First, we must ask that we may receive. "For this will I be inquired of." Then we must make full surrender of our will, yielding up every doubtful thing, remembering that "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." And, moreover, we must trust Him fully and wholly, that our life may be one of absolute confidence in Him who is "able to keep us from falling, and to present us faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy." The Bible-reading was followed by a season of heart-searching before God.

The evening addresses have been of a thoroughly evangelistic character, the Gospel being set forth in a clear and persuasive style. The most marked feature in the speaker is undoubtedly her simple and childlike confidence in God, that He has sent her on his business, that He is with her, that He hears prayer, that He is ready to bless his own word, and receive and pardon all who come to Him as sinners seeking mercy. Open-air work has been carried on at convenient points before each evening service, and this has been the means of attracting not a few who seldom enter a place of worship.

Much solemnity has marked these meetings—very specially that of Sunday evening—and the inquiry-room has seen many anxious souls. It is not for man to number, that is known only to the searcher of hearts; but we may note that close upon a hundred have given in their names as professing to have found peace in believing.

Mr. Moody's Missions.

PRESTON.

Mr. Moody held meetings in Preston during the early part of last week. Large audiences of from four to five thousand people assembled in the public-hall on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, excursion trains being run for the convenience of residents in the surrounding district who were desirous of attending. The word was with power, and Mr. Moody and his helpers were kept very busy with inquirers at the after-meetings.

A local newspaper says:—"Perhaps the most striking fact about the gatherings has been the large number of men of all positions in life—but more especially working men—who have attended, and whom it was easy to perceive are not in the habit of attending religious services. Another significant fact has been the large number of Churchpeople who have been in attendance, the members of the adult Bible-classes at the various Church Sunday-schools being present in hundreds. Mr. Moody was very anxious that men should attend the meetings, and he attained his wish, for never before have so many men been seen at a religious service in Preston."

In the course of his preaching, Mr. Moody exposed the prevailing indifference to the claims of God, and denounced the formalism which is the religious all of so many nominal Christians. Opening up some of the fundamental truths of the Gospel, he strongly appealed to his hearers to make Christ their trust, and to find in Him an end of all their fears and a satisfaction of all their desires. The newspaper already quoted from says: "A very large proportion of the population of Preston do not attend any place of worship, and thousands of this class have been prevailed upon to hear Mr. Moody." Better news still is that many were enlightened in spiritual things, and some confessed the name of Christ, and took upon themselves the obligation of being his servants. The workers rejoice in these evidences of the regenerating work of the Holy Spirit.

CARLISLE.

No words can possibly convey fully the amount of blessing God has graciously bestowed upon our city and neighbourhood through his honoured servant. Eternity alone will reveal that. The campaign was opened on Friday afternoon, last week, by a most powerful address by Mr. Moody on Tit. ii. 11 to a very large audience. The evening address, on the text Gal. vi. 7, 8, was considered the most searching word spoken here. The drink traffic got a fearful blow, and, if faces are to be taken as the expression of hearts, there were many whose consciences must have been very sore and torn. Christians and non-Christians received a very direct message.

The most helpful service, giving as it did encouragement to many a down-hearted Christian, was that of Sunday morning. Many are now praising God for the very blessed message delivered on "the outpouring of the Holy Spirit for service" which followed most suitably the address of Saturday night on "The Filling of the Spirit." The Sunday afternoon meeting, announced to commence at three, was the largest of all the series. The Drill Hall, which holds about fifteen hundred people, was packed by 2.15, and an adjournment was made to the racecourse. There two permanent stands were used for the evangelist and the choir. By three o'clock between four and five thousand people assembled to hear the glad tidings of salvation. At an after-meeting in the Drill Hall, about one thousand were present, and many, in response to the call from Mr. Moody, stood up to be prayed for.

The last meeting was held on Sunday night, when the Drill Hall was again filled to its utmost capacity long before the time, an overflow meeting being held in the Theatre, close by. Mr. Burke did much by his solo singing, which was clear and sweet. The prayers of God's children follow these brethren, that He may richly bless them in all their work. C. I. C.

Mr. Moody's arrangements are as follow: Since closing at Carlisle he has been in Scotland for a few days' rest. This day (Thursday) he starts a four days' mission in Newcastle, in the Circus, and, it is hoped, the Tyne Theatre. On Monday he will be at Chillingham Castle (the seat of Earl Tankerville), holding meetings on the lawn. On Tuesday and Wednesday he goes to Sunderland for services in Victoria Hall.

OUR ENGLISH SOLDIERS IN INDIA.

Those who have lately been in India can fully endorse Lord Radstock's appeal for more workers in the mission field. The open doors and readiness to receive the missionary's teaching is truly surprising. The people are hungering for the Word, which has to be withheld because the messengers are so few. After being some time in the country the conviction is forced upon one that we owe to India a double debt—not only because God has given it to us, but because we have given to it such a false representation of Christianity.

Besides the work among the natives, there are the crying needs of the English-speaking population (often as untaught and ignorant as heathen) and our 60,000 British soldiers who are stationed all over the country. Through God's blessing on the prayers and labours of a retired officer (Mr. H. B. Harington, Murree, Punjab) there is now in almost every barrack a prayer-room where soldiers of all denominations may meet for Bible study, and find that quiet hour for prayer which is excluded from the soldier's ordinary life; but as at home—even more so in India—how often we found a kind word, or little book given with the invitation to "come," has brought the weary wanderer in to hear, and often receive the message of salvation, and in many cases to become a missionary to the heathen in whose land his lot is cast.

The following extract from a letter of one who had but recently yielded his heart to the Master, and who every Sunday gathered seven or eight native Babus to listen to the story of the Cross, is but one of many such:—"It seems that we can never do enough for all the blessing that we have had at his hands. How I would like to be able to talk to the natives of this country, although all of us soldiers could be missionaries by treating the natives better than we do. I was speaking to some last week—as I could just say a few words to them—when one turned round and told me that if we come to make them Christians, why did we not act as such; he then pointed to three soldiers who were drunk, and beating some natives. I do think that if some workers were to come from home, and work amongst the soldiers out here, we should then be able to do a better work among the natives."

The striking way in which God Himself has blessed this work, by again and again bringing sinners to his feet, proves that those few engaged in this work are sent of Him; but what are they among so many? Are there not some labouring at home whose hearts begin to realise how the "dark places of the earth" have been neglected, and who feel the difficulty of a foreign language? In this "English work in India" they would find a ready welcome, and a true auxiliary to the work carried on by our missionaries, who, overworked though they are, often themselves try in some measure to grapple with this great need.

As to expense, let me say that living as a missionary, with every needful comfort, the yearly expenditure for two or three boarding together is far less than at home. The openings are great in the hill stations among the camps during the hot season. Any particulars further needed will gladly be given by the Hon. Secretary of the "Soldiers' Christian Association" in India, mentioned above, or myself.

RHENISH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Nearly a hundred evangelists, connected with this Society, recently assembled at Barmen, receiving daily five hours teaching from Mr. Schrenk. From July 7 to 14 the "Wupperfelder Fest Woche" were held. These annual meetings are conducted by the united Evangelical Churches of Barmen and Elberfeld and by the committee of the Rhenish Missionary Society. The largest churches and halls are crowded. The Bible, Tract, Young Men's Christian Association, Jews', Foreign, and Home Missions, all have their anniversaries. Missionaries are publicly ordained and sent forth. A general conference for all believers, on some subject of present importance and presided over by an experienced, godly minister is held in the largest church, while a pastoral conference is also held. This year the theme for discussion has been, "What gain does the work for Foreign Missions bring to churches and pastors?"

These meetings commence early each morning and continue till late in the evening, with short intervals for meals. Brethren come from long distances in Germany and from various parts of Holland, to have fellowship with the believers of the Wupper Valley, to join in their annual meetings, and to be refreshed in their souls, while rejoicing at the wonderful works of God declared at these gatherings.

CHINESE MISSION IN LONDON.

An interesting meeting has just been held at the Y.M.C.A. Birmingham on behalf of this Mission. The Bishop of Coventry presided, and urged the importance of this work and its claims upon the Christian public.

Mrs. Piercy addressed the meeting, showing our obvious duty to the two thousand Chinese who annually visit our shores. She certainly treated the subject in a novel light; the more we think on the matter the better pleased we are with the ideas suggested in her address, that these heathen men, returning as they do to China, giving a report of what Christianity does for England should be true supporters of our mission work abroad, because of a deep conviction that Christ's religion makes a country better. This is to be done by showing the Chinese kindness, giving them assistance in their difficulties, and teaching them the truths of the New Testament. No one, we think, is so well qualified for this work, by his knowledge of the language and sympathy with this people with whom he lived for more than thirty years, than Rev. George Piercy, assisted by his indefatigable wife, who is also acquainted with their language and habits. We wish these earnest workers success in their uphill struggle against almost untold difficulties. The address of the Mission is 256, Burdett road, London, E.

CONVERTS IN THE MADURA MISSION.

These converts number 13,607 men, women, and children, with 3707 communicants among them. Of these 508 are mission agents, and a few are servants employed in various capacities; but more than three thousand communicants and 13,000 adherents are now dependent on the mission for support. They are scattered about in 410 villages and have come from more than twenty different castes. What do they do for a living?

In Madura several are clerks in Government offices, a number are bookbinders, some climb palmyra trees and collect the sap, others do coolie work, and several are pensioned servants of Government. One man with the name of Gabriel buys the ashes of the gold beaters and sifts from them enough gold dust to make a comfortable and independent livelihood.

But around in the district the majority of the Christians are small farmers or day labourers. One flourishing congregation is made up of men who carry on a large trade in raw cotton. Many work on plantations on the mountains in the Western part of the district; many are at present working on the Briar Project, where three thousand labourers are employed on the work for turning a Travancore river from the western mountains to the eastern plains of Madura.

One congregation of women have shown such fidelity in their daily work that they have a good name in all the regions round about, and Hindus like to get them to reap their fields because they say they do not need to be watched.

Seven poor men from four different congregations, all related to one another, united with their pastor in spending eight days together in a retreat in order to study the Bible and fit themselves for telling their people. And all the expenses of this retreat were borne by themselves.

One schoolgirl, whose mother was dead, but whose father and brother were heathen, refused their repeated offers to get her well married, and joined the Christian Church; and in vacation, in order to keep away from the evil influence of her family, she stayed with some orphan girls in one of the mission stations. There the Lord called her, and took her to Himself.

Our Christians show their sincerity by enduring persecution for Christ's sake. They apprehend Christian truth enough to teach it to their Hindu neighbours. Their development seems slow to our minds, but it is faster than the development of anything else in this heathen land, so that all they need is time, and they will attain to a more perfect manhood in Christ.

Y.W.C.A. PARIS HOME.

Some of your readers may know that in April 1891, the continental division of the Y.W.C.A. opened a small home in the very centre of Paris, 10, Rue de la Paix, utilising the furniture bought for the Exhibition Home in 1889. The need for this is great amongst our many English sisters employed or seeking work in Paris houses of business. Many have been thankful for this pretty restful place, and for the loving welcome received. Having myself spent a week there in September, 1891, I can testify to its cheeriness and comfort; to the earnest prayer and sympathy with which it is surrounded; to wise words spoken in season, as well as to the economy practised, wherever economy does not mean discomfort. How gladly, how thankfully, had I a daughter of my own, exposed to Paris life in its most dangerous forms, should I praise God for such a sheltered haven of rest and for such motherly kindness as is shown by our valued Hon. Superintendent, Miss Temple, and her helpers! Shall we not seek to care for the many daughters of many anxious mothers who cannot help themselves? Alas! the question now is—can we continue? God only knows. The expenses in that part of Paris where alone we can reach just the girls who need this shelter, added to our quite insufficient income, have led me to bring this matter forward. Unless we have further help for this special branch of our work to the amount of about £150 a-year, we fear we must close the Home, for debt can never be God-honouring, or according to his will. Any help should be sent to Miss C. Manning, Hon. Sec. 316, Regent-street, W.

EVANGELISATION IN GLASGOW.

Mr W.W. Dunn has been preaching the Gospel during the month of July in a large wooden tent, under the auspices of the United Evangelistic Association. Night after night large numbers came together, and many precious souls have been brought into the light of the Gospel. The heart-searching addresses on the Tuesday evenings to Christians, from the Song of Solomon, have been richly blessed.

One of the special features of the work in July has been a very remarkable movement among the Jews. It began through the visit of Mr. and Mrs. Feingold, who labour amongst the Jews in Paris. Being on a visit to the city of Glasgow they found their way to the wooden tent and brought with them a number of their Jewish brethren who had been interested in their meetings. Mr. Dunn took for his subject "What Jehovah has promised to do for his people Israel."

The address was very clearly and tenderly put, and moved the hearts of many of the Jews. And night after night they continued to come in great numbers.

Mr. and Mrs. Feingold were most helpful, and in the after-meetings addressed their dear Hebrew brethren in their own language. The presence of so many Jews, and the presentation of the truth as especially applicable to them made the meetings, which were very largely attended, most solemn. Will the saints of God give special praise to Him for such a manifestation of his presence and power through the simple preaching of his precious Word, and plead for still greater things?

REST.

HEBREWS iv. 9, 10.

"In his will is our peace."

Hush! There was "sorrow on the sea,"
High-rolling waves, a surging tide.
A Voice swept o'er it unto me,
And whispered: "Jesus will provide."

The night was round me, near and far,
I could not see my homeward way,
Till in the East there shone a star—
It was the lovely star of day.

Clouds hid it from my wond'ring sight,
The lullèd winds once more arose;
A Presence made the darkness light—
Jesus, my Saviour, feels and knows.

He doth my trembling spirit lead
Into the shelter of his breast;
Jesus supplies my every need,
And in his perfect love is rest.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

BY REV. F. B. MEYER.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 14.—LEVITICUS XXVII.

These thoughts are always inseparable, redemption by price, and sanctification. What has been set apart for God must first have been redeemed, and what has been redeemed should be set apart. This redemption and separation should involve all our lives; every thing that a redeemed soul has should be possessed with this supreme thought ever in his heart, that it is held by him in trust for his Master, Christ, and should be devoted or separated to Him. Only he has not to discover the price which he must pay—it has already been estimated, and paid, not by corruptible things as silver or gold, but by the precious blood of Christ. In this case it was, indeed, according to the ability of Him that vowed. As it was God who entered into the market to bid for our souls, the price was assessed at an infinite amount, which He could only pay with drops of blood forced from his temples. What a searching word is that with which the chapter closes! No devoted thing could be sold or redeemed; each, when once offered or presented to God, was deemed to be exclusively his, and man had no further rights over it. So with our act of consecration. When once done deliberately and thoughtfully, it is accepted, and it is sacrilege to draw back. And on his part, God will be very jealous if we infringe his holy rights. But when once we are his, how carefully and eagerly will He defend his own.

MONDAY, AUGUST 15.—NUMBERS I.

God numbers up his jewels. He keeps an inventory of his people; not one of them is omitted, however weak and unworthy, and He will raise them up at the last. It is desirable that we should be able to tell our pedigrees, to trace our lineage up to the Divine parentage. Only so shall we be able to resist the power of the devil on the one hand, or to do good work in the campaign against evil on the other. The secret of failure with so many of God's children lies just here, and all their resolutions and struggles are doomed to disappointment, till they can get their feet firmly planted on the granite of assurance with respect to their pedigree. We can learn it only in two ways: by the assurance of the Word of God, that all who believe are children, and by the assurance of the Holy Ghost witnessing with our spirits that we have been born from above. The Levites were a kind of bodyguard to the Tabernacle; they were ever employed in its service, and stood in a unique position to it, and therefore to God, who made their lot his own charge. When men seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, all things else are added. Care for God's work supremely, and He will care for you.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 16.—NUMBERS II.

The Tabernacle was the centre of the host, as it lay at rest under the floating cloud of the Divine presence. The innermost circle of tents was that of the Levites and the sons of Aaron. Outside these were the tribes, three towards each point of the compass. God is the Author of Order. When the Master broke the bread for the multitudes, they sat down in order on the green grass. And there should be order in the discipline and aggressive efforts of the Christian Church. Well would it be if, instead of running over each other's work, we were to apportion amongst various bodies of Christians the neglected parts of our great cities and of the world. Each man must pitch under his own standard, but all were part of the one great host; so the various branches of the Church to which we belong as individuals, are, nevertheless, parts of one whole. It was the first concern of each Israelite that he was such; it was a secondary consideration that he was a member of any particular tribe. We must not always be pitched in camp and at rest, the trumpets are constantly giving the signal that we should set forward. We must leave the things behind, and reach forward to those before, and press on. And from all parts of the host, there should ascend the incessant prayer that He who leads his people, as a shepherd his flock, should stir up his might, and come to save.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 17.—NUMBERS III.

Men wholly given to God, as the Levites to Aaron! What a glorious calling is here! In the margin of R.V. the word given is repeated, as if to accentuate and emphasize it. And the history of this dedication of the Levites is very interesting; it originated in the great night of the Passover, when for the sake of the blood, the Lord spared the eldest born of Israel. From that moment these were regarded as being, in an especial sense, God's; but afterwards the Levites took their place, and it mattered not to a true-hearted Levite whether he carried the boards, the cords, or the vessels, all was alike for God, and all that was required of any one was to be faithful to his charge. If that were secured, there was nothing else to be desired, and the maintenance of each was secured by the provision of the sanctuary. As the eldest sons of the various families looked at the Levites, each could see his representative, with the exception of those who composed the overplus over and above the number of the Levites, and these only lived because their redemption money had been paid. So our lives are all required by God for Himself. We have no right to ourselves, we are God's, we must live to Him. And is there not a sense in which all who are compelled to keep to ordinary employments should have representatives in Home or Foreign Mission work?

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18.—NUMBERS IV.

"Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." Such is the Divine injunction to us all, because there is a deep sense in which our bodies and our influence in the world are vessels for the use of God. How awful was the holiness of God, that the vessels of his service must be kept covered from the eyes even of the Kohathites. Only the sons of Aaron, that represented the most sacred separation of Israel, could behold them. Only the eyes of God's most separated and holy children may gaze on the deepest mysteries of the Kingdom of God. Each Levite had his own burden and his own duty (49), so that no one had any need to envy another. So long as each did the work to which he was called, it was enough. No one was expected to do the work of another; if he did he would overtax his strength, and injury would be done to them both. The work was precisely apportioned to the time and energy of each of those employed, and each was responsible to the Lord for his own share. Would that each of these principles were observed in our Christian work! How much friction and jealousy, heartburning and overstrain, would be avoided!

FRIDAY, AUGUST 19.—NUMBERS V.

There must be discipline in the host of God. We must put away from us them that do iniquity and work abomination, in order that the holy God may not be offended by wilful sin. But where there is sin, there are means by which it may be put away from conscience, heart, and life. There must be confession, both to God and to man. We are too remiss in this. We often leave our confession to God too long after the sin has been committed, and in doing so, allow it to eat too deeply into us. There is no secret of the divine life more precious than this, that the daily, hourly sin should be momentarily confessed on our part, and it will be instantly put away on Christ's. But we should also confess to our brethren, and make restitution, not waiting for them to come to us, but making a point of going to them, and asking their forgiveness. This seems hard, but He gives us grace enough to perform every duty to which He calls us. How significant it is that God describes Himself as a jealous God. Ah, my God, how often have we given Thee just cause for jealousy, because we have gone after other lovers. Would that we were all taken up by a pure love of Thee, such as would make it impossible to go from thy love. Seal us for thyself. Fix us as a signet on Thy hand.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 20.—NUMBERS VI.

The Nazarite was a type of the truly consecrated child of God: separated from all the intoxicant excesses of the world; his locks unshorn by Delilah's scissors; his life untainted by death; his natural instincts subordinated to the one great purpose of doing the Father's business. On such an one the words are written with letters of fire, Holiness to the Lord. Our blessed Lord was the true Nazarite. He would not drink of the juice of the wine until his vow was fulfilled, and He had brought back to God a recreant race. Our separation often breaks down, but even then we are encouraged to seek forgiveness, and restoration, and start again, though we can never be quite as we might have been. The former days are void, they cease to count, because our separation was defiled. When the days of the vow were fulfilled, the Nazarite had to offer sacrifices for sin, because there are flaws and imperfections in our holiest service, which need ever the precious blood of Jesus. How sweet the blessing of Aaron! How well it befits the lips of Him who was parted from his disciples in the act of blessing them, and who will shortly come forth to bless those that wait for Him!

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 21.

THE APOSTLES PERSECUTED.

Acts v. 25-42.

GOLDEN TEXT: Verse 29.

THE apostles again before the Council! How came they there? Tell the whole story—the rapid growth of the Church of Christ and its widening influence (16); the indignation and envy of the high priest (17); the imprisonment of the apostles, and their release by the intervention of God's angel (18-20); the meeting of the Sanhedrim, and their discomfiture and dismay (22-24); and the discovery that the men whom they had imprisoned the night before were preaching in the temple early the following morning. Again we are reminded how futile is every attempt to oppose the will of God. Christ, to whom "all power" had been given, did not fail to exercise it on behalf of his faithful witnesses.

25. We do not know who the informant was. The defeat of the Sanhedrim was evidently well known. However much they might affect to despise the followers of Jesus of Nazareth, it was manifest that they could do nothing successfully against them. 26. There was evidently a popular feeling in favour of the apostles, so that their enemies fear the people. What cowards men become when they cease to fear God! 28. The high priest's address to the apostles is a strange utterance. We. If he put emphasis upon the word, how ludicrous it would sound in view of what had occurred. Their threatenings had no terror for the apostles. Filled Jerusalem. It was a striking testimony to the impotence of the Sanhedrim, and to the power of the Gospel. How different the result would have been if the high priest and his companions had bowed to the authority of God which opposed and defeated them! This man's blood. Are they beginning to fear the accomplishment of their own word (Matt. xxvii. 25)? If they fear it, why do they not cease their opposition? It is easier to begin an evil course than to stop when once it has begun.

Peter's boldness (29-33). This was the feature which he had formerly so conspicuously lacked, but which is so prominent in him now. In this case all the "other apostles" share it with him. The point of Peter's reply is that the command of God opposes that of the high priest, and that they cannot hesitate as to which must be obeyed (29); that the work of God is opposed to that of the Council, for whom they slew He exalted to his own right hand (30-31); that this exaltation of Jesus was not only for their discomfiture, but, if they would receive it aright, for their salvation, for He would give not only the remission of their sins, but even the repentance without which remission was impossible; and that they were not the only witnesses of these things (32). The address was remarkable, not only for its fearlessness, but for its freedom from all resentment, for the instruction it contained, and for the offer of grace and mercy it made. Note its effect (33) cut—literally, they were sawed through. It exasperated them. It might have been to them a savour of life unto life; their reception of it made it a savour of death unto death (2 Cor. ii. 16). Learn (1) that the path of the faithful witness is beset with difficulty; (2) that for the greatest dangers God provides all-sufficient grace; and (3) that the enemies of the truth, by their attempt to suppress its witnesses, become unwilling witnesses to its power.

Gamaliel's Counsel (34-40). Jewish history speaks of two Gamaliels, both of them learned men, and members of the Sanhedrim. The second of these did not flourish until 80 A.D. The first lived during the reigns of Tiberius, Caligula, and Claudius, and is identified with the person mentioned here. He was a scribe, at whose feet Paul had sat (xxii. 3). There is not sufficient reason for believing him to have been a secret disciple. He acts with great caution, and avoids committing himself to anything. His suggestion, based upon experience, is, Give this new thing time; its subsequent history will prove whether it is Divine. If it is what it claims, opposition will prove powerless; if it is an imposture, opposition is needless. According to Gamaliel's test, its Divine origin is unmistakably proved to-day. What but a Divine institution could have survived such experiences as the Church has had to endure?

Of the two men instanced by Gamaliel, Judas (37) is frequently mentioned by Josephus. He raised the rebellion by representing that the taxing was in order to put a further yoke upon the people. This took place during the reign of Augustus who died 14 A.D. Of a Theudas, who appeared before that date (36, 37), history says nothing. But "such impostors are too frequent for any one to be able to say that there was not one of this name at the time specified"—Alford.

The scourging of the apostles (40) was in order to save the Sanhedrim the discredit of seeming to institute proceedings without cause, and to further intimidate the apostles. Was it successful? See 41-42. What but the grace of God could find in such painful experiences any occasion for rejoicing? (See 1 Pet. iii. 13-17)

Missionary Notes.

The Western Christian Advocate laments that a certain church in Boston raises annually £1000 for pastoral services and only seven pounds for missions.

American women are arranging for a Congress of Christian Missions in connection with the World's Fair, in September, 1893. The theme will be woman's share in the world's evangelisation.

Dr. Schauffler calls attention to the fact that while the Congregationalists have many institutions for training men for foreign missions, they have not a single school for training women missionaries. This refers, of course, to theological and special training.

The Southern Methodist Church has missions in China and Mexico which contain twenty-two missionaries—twenty of them married, seventy-seven native preachers, and 4421 church members.

There are now eighteen missions of the American Missionary Association among the Chinese in California. Sixty-five joined the Church during the last year, and about three hundred Christians are connected with the missions.

The Foreign Secretary of the L.M.S. says:—"There seems still to be misunderstanding as to the special qualifications required in missionaries. The artisan missionary is not, in the Society's use of the term, a Christian artisan who is sent out to preach to the heathen, but one who is prepared to serve Christ in the mission-field by using his handicraft. In some fields there is need of men skilled in carpentering, brickmaking, building, and blacksmith's work, to erect the various buildings required for mission purposes, and to teach the natives these useful trades. Such men, if earnest Christians, will find abundant opportunity for exerting a spiritual influence; but the Society seeks for those who recognise that their calling of God is to glorify Him by means of their handicraft, and who are prepared for his sake to put their technical skill at the disposal of the mission."

Continuing, Mr. Wardlaw Thompson says:—"The lay evangelist scheme is not a device for enabling men to escape from the necessity for college training, but a means of introducing to mission work men of tried character and experience of the world who are too old to go to college. A raw youth, who has neither had a thorough education nor the discipline of business life and Christian work for a considerable time, is as unfit to be entrusted with responsibility in the mission-field as he would be at home. We do not say there is no work that such can do, but for this society to send them out would require a reversal of its settled policy, and a return to methods which have been already tried and deliberately given up."

THE DARK CONTINENT.

Mr. Howell, of the Congo-Balolo Mission, states that there are sixteen people waiting for baptism at Bonginda.

Of the four Moravian brethren despatched to established a mission on Lake Nyasa, one, G. Martin, has already been called home. The Unitas Fratrum is publishing very full and interesting journals and letters from the surviving brethren.

The Livingstonia Mission appears now, after seventeen years' labour, to be entering on a new period—that of the first-fruits of harvest. Let the Church—that is, every member of it—seek by prayer and sacrifice to prove worthy of the Master who leads, and, in their degree, of the servants whom He has sent, and enables us still to send, to the front of his army.

Recently at the opening of a chapel at Bakundu, when eleven men were baptized, a great commotion was caused among the crowd by the declaration of the chief that he intended to abandon fetish worship and become a Christian. The idols and fetish objects were to be removed from his house on that very day. They consisted of a number of carved figures, and all kinds of plaited work, used at dances, a number of sticks, and a sackful of animal and human skulls.

Mr. Ellery, Ikau (Balololand), has received a great spiritual blessing himself, and many of the people seem really anxious to turn to the Lord. Mr. Whytock writes:—"Since leaving Ikau I have been greatly cheered with letters received from Brother Ellery, telling how gloriously the work is going on there. Ere I left I had the joy of baptizing five lads, one the cook on the steamer, and four from Ikau itself." Mr. Ellery writes that the Lord has given him wonderful deliverance and peculiar enlargement. And the work goes on. Over eighteen boys have professed, he believes sincerely, to give their hearts to Jesus.

The Berlin East Africa missionaries record as follows their first baptism at the mission station of Tanga. Brother Krämer baptized the boy Koba. This lad was at the station last year, but had been sent for by his master, and would have been sold into slavery, had he not been ransomed. From the very first he has displayed great diligence, and when the other boys were asleep he asked for a light, and could be heard reading aloud. There was some intention of baptizing him at Christmas, but it was thought better to wait and see if he were really converted. At last there appeared no reason for further delay. On the day before the ceremony the missionary said to him: "What have you done to make yourself fit and worthy of baptism?" "I prayed God to give me his Holy Spirit to prepare me for it."

THE CHINESE EMPIRE.

Rev. G. H. Bondfield, as pastor of Union Church, Hong Kong, has been greatly encouraged by the measure of prosperity which God has granted his church during the past year.

Rev. W. E. McFarlane has joined Rev. J. Parker in Mongolia. Their postal address will in future be, "Mongolian Mission, care of Dr. Brander, Chin Chou, New Chuang, North China."

Dr. Griffith John records in the L. M. S. Chronicle the opening of two new chapels, one in the Chien village, Hian Kan, and the other in Hankow. These chapels have cost the Society nothing, being built and opened by the converts and missionaries.

Rev. Gilbert Reid, in an essay read before the Shantung Presbyterian Mission, urged the obligation of doing more than has hitherto been done by Protestant missionaries for the evangelisation of the upper classes of China. He suggested that the whole constitution of Chinese Society brings home the necessity of not neglecting them.

Rev. J. W. Wilson writes from Chung King:—"Dr. John baptized last year two Sz-Chuen men, who returned to their homes in Pa Cheo, a city distant from Chung King perhaps twelve days' tramp. One of them, a bright-looking fellow, has just turned up in my study, bringing with him a letter from thirty others in that neighbourhood, asking me to go up and prepare them for baptism. But I am tied to Chung King until help comes."

INDIAN MISSIONS.

Mr. J. N. Farquhar states that since December last there have been eleven baptisms from Hinduism and Mohammedanism in connection with two Bengali churches in the centre of Calcutta.

The abbot of the Hindu monastery of Gundicha, says the Juvenile Missionary Herald, a Brahmin, who has quite a passion for collecting Christian books, put them into the hands of two of his disciples. Naturally enough, but apparently without his expecting it, they both became Christians and very efficient ones.

A Scottish Universities Mission has been established in Sikkim with three missionaries. "Sikkim is a wedge driven up from India, splitting apart Nepaul toward the west and Bootan towards the east, and pointing to Lhassa, the holy city, the heart of Tibet. Sikkim lies on the threshold of Tibet. It is more, it is the door to Tibet."

The Gossner Mission among the Kols of the province of Chota Nagpur is manned by nineteen missionaries, seven of whom are married. There are also fifteen ordained native pastors and a large number of other preachers and workers. The Kols are among the aboriginal tribes of India, and are exceedingly degraded; nevertheless, the number of Christians among them amounts up to 37,000.

Hon. Justice Knox, according to the Indian Witness, is showing his interest in the Native Churches of North India by offering a prize of one hundred rupees for the best essay on Native Churches, the essay to be in either English or Urdu. The essay is to be specially directed to considering how there can be raised up a self-supporting Native Pastorate in the N.-W. P., and Oudh and in Central India.

"The day which I spent, in company with the native preacher Pakiam, in visiting Pariah villages, has appeared to me one of the most momentous of my life. I wished that many friends of missions could do what I did—creep around in the huts of these most wretched of all the wretched, and gain an insight not only into their outward misery, but into the utter ruinousness of their whole inner being. Such an experience might well rectify many a distorted apprehension and many an unwarranted expectation."—Dr. Grundemann, in Allgemeine Missions-Zeitschrift.

TIBET AND ARABIA.

"What a pathetic incident," says The Moravian Missionary Magazine, "was that of a blind man who walked all the way from Lhassa, at least a thousand miles, in the hope that the Doctor Sahib at Leh could remove the cataract and give him sight! Alas, when he arrived within a day or two of Leh he heard that our medical missionary was dead. Sorrowfully, he turned and travelled home again, all those thousand miles, over mountain passes and plateaux, averaging 15,000 feet above the sea. If he returns this year he will find a missionary doctor at Leh, and we trust no such interval will occur again.

Rev. S. M. Zwemer states that the new American mission now working at Aden, in Arabia, is likely to locate a station also at Muscat in the near future. This place, on the eastern coast of Arabia, is the main centre from which the Zanzibar Arabs have come, and it has often been a matter of earnest desire with the friends of African Missions that the Gospel should be carried to the original home of those who have done, and are still doing, such infinite damage in East Africa.

THE ISLES OF THE SEA.

From Kwato, New Guinea, we learn that the schooner chartered by the Wesleyan Missionary Society had arrived with three ladies, one to become the wife of a missionary, and the other two to work as sisters amongst girls and women at Dobu. This is certainly a bold step.

A week of special services of a most successful and delightful character, lately took place in the capital of Madagascar. They were held in three churches every day. "We had," says Rev. R. Baron, "for the most part, crowded congregations, averaging probably in all from two thousand five hundred to three thousand people daily. Quite free from any form of excitement, and conducted with the greatest possible decorum, the meetings were nevertheless of an exceptionally high-toned and soul-stirring character, and all felt the manifest presence of the Spirit of God.

Bristol Orphan Houses.

As we have now a great number of vacancies for girls in our five large Orphan Houses, erected to receive 2050 boys and girls who have lost both parents by death, I earnestly request Christian friends kindly to assist me in filling up these vacancies, by seeking out suitable cases for admission into our institution, by letting the relatives or friends of orphan girls know that they can be received at the Ashley Down Orphan Houses, and by advising them to write to me for their admission.

We receive both boys and girls from their earliest days, keep the boys until they are between fourteen and fifteen years of age, when they are apprenticed, and the girls till they are about seventeen years old, when both boys and girls are provided with an outfit, and with suitable situations also. Up to the time that our orphans are sent away from the institution, they are boarded, lodged, clothed, and educated entirely free of all expense to their relatives, and have a most comfortable and happy home.

When I began the orphan work, fifty-seven years ago, there was accommodation in this country for 3600 orphans only; but since that time, through the blessing of God, which has rested so abundantly upon my labours, such an impetus has been given to orphan work, that institutions have sprung up in various parts of Great Britain, by means of which more than 100,000 orphans can now be provided for; and for this reason it is that we have so many vacancies at the present time, and find it so difficult to fill them up.

I repeat, therefore, that I shall consider it an especial kindness if Christian friends will take the trouble to seek out destitute orphans, and advise the relatives of such to apply to me for their admission, as we have good and abundant accommodation for them, and a large number of efficient helpers.

The Clifton Conference.

Rev. J. Ormiston calls the thirtieth annual conference for October 4, 5, and 6, in the Victoria Rooms, the subject being "The Truth of God." In his letter of invitation he writes:—

No spiritually-minded observer of the condition of Christendom to-day can fail to deplore the decadence of clear dogmatic Bible teaching in the various churches. A Gospel of doubt is too generally preached instead of the glorious Gospel of the Truth of God, and the doctrines and commandments of men have largely supplanted the eternal verities of the Written Word. Romanism, Ritualism, Rationalism, Spiritualism, and Scepticism have combined their forces, in so far as attacking the Truth of God is concerned. It consequently behoves those whom the Truth has made free to witness it faithfully and to contend earnestly for it. We read of Satan that he "abode not in the Truth." "Transformed into an angel of light," that subtle foe aims in these last days so to seduce the Churches of Christ that of them also it may be said—"They abode not in the Truth." The inspiration of the Sacred Scriptures, the Personality of the Holy Spirit, the Divine perfections of the Son of God, the sinner's need of a vicarious atonement, justification by faith alone in a crucified and risen Christ, and the freeness and sovereignty of the Grace of God are truths, with many others, not only openly denied by professing ministers of Christ, but often spoken of in scorn and derision. In the words of Isaiah:—"Yea, Truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey [margin, is accounted mad]: and the Lord saw it, and it displeased Him that there was no judgment" (Isa. lix. 15). The Lord indeed sees it! "O, Lord, are not thine eyes upon the Truth?" (Jer. v. 3.) So precious in the sight of the Father is the Truth that He has enthroned it in the person of his beloved Son at the right hand of the Majesty on high. All the lines of God's Truth meet in the glorified One yonder, whom the Spirit delights to reveal to those whom He anoints and enlightens.

Obituary.

MR. W. J. TREBILCOOK.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. W. J. rebilcook, for some years a most acceptable local reacher in the Truro Wesleyan Circuit. Mr. Trebil-ok left his home some ten weeks ago to enter The oyful News Evangelist College at Rochdale, and hilst conducting an evangelistic mission at Burslem as seized with rheumatic fever and died.

MR. THOMAS HOWE.

We regret to hear of the death, a few days ago, of is faithful Ragged School worker, who for thirty-e years has laboured untiringly in connection ith Shap-street and Union-walk Mission Schools. lthough he had long been a great sufferer he reso-tely continued his Christian service to the very st. The memorial service conducted by Rev. W. iff was largely attended by those who loved Mr. owe for his work's sake, and by those who had been him won to the Saviour.

PASTEUR DUCROS, HERSIN-COUPIGNY, FRANCE.

M. Ducros, pastor of the Mission Church in the ining district of Hersin-Coupigny, Pas de Calais, as just died after a painful illness. He had an tack of influenza in January last, and before he d recovered he sought to engage in his much-ved work. Latterly, severe sciatica and a fever ore away his life; and he entered into rest on ly 4, aged 49 years.

Miss J. Bullock writes from Ingleside, Woking:—It was my sad, yet happy privilege to have many nversations with him before he died. The work of e Lord had prospered in his hands, but the burden unconverted souls pressed heavily on his heart. e was eminently a man of prayer, and his long alks to the distant members of his flock or to those cking for Christ, necessitated much solitude, and ever and again spent the night in prayer when ecial cases pressed heavily on him. His sufferings re so acute that he was never able during the last o months to obtain many consecutive minutes' ep, yet he refused opiates, always saying that he as watching for the Lord's coming, or his own call me, and he wished to be uncloaked when the ment should arrive. He retained his consciousness to the last.

"One day, when a little easier, he was lifted to s beloved harmonium—he was a good musician—d by the aid of his wife supporting one feeble arm d his son the other, he played, and with touching thos, sang—

Qu'il sera doux, un jour devant ton trône,
D'entonner tous le cantique nouveau;
Portant chacun l'immortelle couronne
Et rendant gloire éternelle à l'Agneau.

hen turning to me he said, 'These are my adieux.' hen some of his flock came to see him he bade em 'Sing unto God, sing now, and praise Him.' is faith and peace were unassailed; no cloud came tween him and his beloved Lord, who was, he knew, ing all things well. But once he spoke to me in a mbling and troubled voice of the struggle fully to ast for the future for his delicate wife, who would left unprovided for until their son should be able r his education to maintain her; but he was abled to trust Him who has said, 'Leave thy therless children, and let thy widows trust in Me.'

"The pasteur was of Huguenot descent. The n church in which he laboured is vested in the ciété Chrétienne du Nord, and a successor will in e time be appointed."

North-East London Gospel Mission.

A good number of the workers of this Mission ound it their joy to embrace the opportunity for stimony afforded by the finest Bank Holiday of e year amongst the crowds in Victoria-park. Here Monday week, for some hours consecutively, raise, prayer, and testimony found expression. any hundreds of Gospel booklets were distributed the workers in the park.

A well-attended tea-meeting followed at Earlham all, Kingsland, which again gave place to further stimony in the evening. The addresses of some—otably those of Mr. J. P. Giffens and Mr. William rant (formerly of Kilmarnock)—were marked with eat power and freshness, and caused a deep im-ession upon the hearts of many present.

The Bible van of the Mission is still working from llage to village in the Eastern Counties, and a rge number of Bibles and Testaments are sold very week. Mr. Richardson, of Hurley College, s lately joined the van, and proves a most accept-ble helper. WILLIAM CHORLEY.

Personalia.

Dr. P. B. Cousland hopes shortly to return to China and resume his Medical Mission work at Chao-Chow-fu.

Rev. R. W. Dale, D.D., is slowly recovering strength. Writing to his congregation he expresses himself most hopefully.

Rev. James and Mrs. Wall are now in Canton Berne, resting; Dr. Wall, after his long illness, feeling a change imperative.

Rev. G. C. Lorimer, D.D., of Tremont Temple, Boston, who has just reached this country, preached last Sunday in Cambridge.

Mr. Joseph Weatherley is, we are informed, just lying on the borderland, very suffering and weak, and longing to depart.

Rev. J. D. Kilburn, of Hamburg, has been invited to a conference of Christian workers, to be held in Finland in the early part of September.

Rev. W. P. Huddlestone, of Ely, has been elected president of the Conference of the Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion for the ensuing year.

Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Arnot, who are now in this country, are resting at the seaside. The medical report given in London on Mr. Arnot's health is favourable, but indicates the need of long rest and care.

Rev. Henry Simon, we regret to hear, has been for some time seriously ill, suffering from an affection of the throat. Lately, however, his health appears to be improving.

Canon Hurst, of St. Mark's, Tollington-park, and Secretary of the Colonial and Continental Church Society, has accepted the vicarage of St. Swithin's, Cannon-street.

Dr. Talmage has arranged to preach from Mr. Chas. Cook's platform in Hyde-park on Sunday evening, September 4. These services have now entered their twenty-first year.

Rev. W. Harries, the new President of the Welsh Baptist Union, has laboured thirty years at Aberdare where he has been much blessed. He is regarded as in the front rank of Welsh preachers.

Rev. W. Williams has just completed his fifteenth year of service at Upton Chapel, Lambeth-road. Although the duties have been difficult, each year has been signally marked with Divine blessing. A crowning blessing was vouchsafed on Wednesday last, when the pastor baptized his two daughters.

Rev. E. P. Thwing, M.D., of Brooklyn, an independent medical missionary, with his wife, daughter, son, and wife, expects to leave September 15 for China to found, with the veteran missionary J. G. Kerr, M.D., the first insane asylum in the empire. A fine site is purchased, two and a-half acres at Canton. The Viceroy expresses friendly interest.

Mr. C. T. Lipshytz, superintendent of the Barbican Mission to the Jews, left England on Wednesday last for an evangelistic tour in Austria and Germany. He hopes to accept many invitations to proclaim the Gospel to the Jews, and to interest Christians in the evangelisation of Israel. He has taken with him a large supply of tracts and scriptures for distribution.

Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D., has in the current number of Sword and Trowel a somewhat striking article on "The Complex Character of Mr. Spurgeon." He deals with "a peculiar aspect of Mr. Spurgeon's character," under four leading heads. These he denominates—first, his human-mindedness; second, his myriad-mindedness; third, his spiritual-mindedness; and fourth, his heavenly-mindedness.

KESWICK Y.M.C.A.—During the Convention week the rooms of this recently-opened Association at 18, Station-road, were open to all Y.M.C.A. members visiting Keswick. All young men will be welcome at the rooms during their visit to the lakes. Messrs. T. W. Townley and J. W. Lupton are the honorary secretaries. It is intended to hold a Bible-class for young men every Sunday afternoon in the rooms. The premises have been comfortably furnished, and the help of friends at a distance who are interested in the spread of the Lord's work is prayerfully invited. Communications may be addressed to Mr. T. W. Townley, Market-place, Keswick.

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION, BROMPTON.—The quarterly report states that the 321 beds in the two buildings remain fully occupied; and besides the treatment in the wards, 130 patients have been sent to the Seaside Convalescent Home at Sandgate, and maintained there at the entire expense of the hospital. In addition to the periodical distempering, cleaning, &c., required in the new building, or south wing, a large amount of internal painting is now needed, the building having been in continuous use for more than ten years. This would involve very considerable outlay; and the committee appealed to the public for the sustained support necessary to maintain in full efficiency the 321 beds in the two buildings.

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. George King has been holding services in Belmont Baptist Chapel, near Sutton, with many tokens of blessing.

Mr. William Forbes has been giving addresses in chapels and in the open air at Margate, Ramsgate, Birchington, and Herne Bay. He returns to London this week.

Whitstable-on-Sea.—Mr. W. Sampson, the Cornish evangelist, has been conducting special services here. As a result, several persons professed conversion.

The members of the Hastings and St. Leonards Y.M.C.A. have commenced a series of Wednesday evening trips to the country villages, where evangelistic services are conducted.

Aspley Guise, Beds.—A Tent Mission has been held by Mr. John Stanger. It has been a season of real blessing; the meetings each night and on Sundays being well attended by all classes.

Basingstoke.—Tent meetings are being held here by Mr. Wm. Brown, the superintendent of the Swindon branch of the Evangelistic Mission, in which much interest is shown. Prayer is desired that they may result in the conversion of many souls.

Mr. Somerset Gardner has been conducting a series of services at Little Heath Church, Potters Bar, Herts, which have been attended with encouraging results. Mr. Gardner is now open for engagements for missions in connection with the Church of England. His address is The Priory, Harlesden-road, London, N.W.

Margate.—Sunday evening services are being held in the large building known as Sanger's Hall-by-the-Sea. Mr. C. Russell Hurditch has been the preacher for two Sunday evenings. Many of the audience seemed to be deeply impressed, and some apparently decided for Christ before they left the after-meetings.

Mr. H. Murch, of the Evangelisation Society, has just concluded a fortnight's successful barn services in Whitsbury, Wilts. The meetings have been well attended nightly, and on Sundays the building was filled, some of the people walking miles to the services. The earnest Gospel addresses have been much enjoyed, believers have been quickened, and many of the unsaved awakened.

Forest Gate.—A six weeks' mission has been held in one of the marquees of the Evangelistic Mission, which has been placed on an excellent site on the principal thoroughfare of the Epping Forest Flats, Mr. Wm. Grove having been the preacher on most nights. A large number of souls have thus far testified to having found salvation, and the workers are looking for further evidences of Divine Grace.

The Wayside Bible Carriage is still at work in villages around Alcester, Warwickshire. Mrs. McAuliffe and two young colporteurs have been preaching and singing the Gospel night by night. As many as ten souls of an evening have been seeking the Way of Life, and blessing has been given wherever the carriage has staid. Mr. McAuliffe has now rejoined the workers, and is at work at Henley-in-Arden.

Mr. Newton Jones, S.S.U. evangelist, has, during the months of June and July, visited eighteen different villages in Oxon and Cambs, holding services nightly for young people, also adults. The attendances have been most encouraging, and the visits have aroused much interest. Many have been enabled to accept Christ to be their Saviour. Mr. Jones has now taken up his usual work on the sands at Redcar.

Redcar, Yorkshire.—Mr. A. Draper, Army Scripture Reader, has just closed a successful month's mission among the 4th Battalion D.L.I. Militia. Close upon one hundred men have signed the pledge to abstain from drink, gambling, swearing, and impurity. Evangelistic services were held nightly in the camp. The officer commanding placed a large marquee at his disposal. The men flocked round in crowds, and there were several very interesting cases of conversion to God. The whole mission has been visited with very great blessing.

PROPOSED WORLD'S SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.—The Council of the Sunday-School Union of England, acting in conjunction with the representatives of American Sunday-schools, are organising a "World's Sunday-School Convention" to be held at St. Louis, U.S.A., in the September of 1893; and, with a view to facilitating the attendance of English visitors, are arranging for excursion parties of Sunday-school workers and their friends, to leave England about August 19, 1893. Several alternative routes, including one by way of Canada, will be open, and arrangements will be made to enable visitors to prolong their stay (for instance, at Chicago and the World's Fair) as well as to vary their journey if they so desire. The whole journey will take about five weeks, and the cost, including second-class cabin passage, first-class railway in America, &c., and fourteen days' first-class hotel accommodation en route will be twenty-nine guineas. Full particulars can be had on application to Mr. Edward Towers, Sunday-School Union, 56, Old Bailey, E.C.

The Book World.

Christ and the Old Testament.

Doctor Doctorum: The Teacher and the Book. With some remarks on Old Testament criticism. By E. B. Girdlestone, M.A. (3s. 6d. Shaw.) This volume contains a series of valuable papers, contributed by the author to The Record. The aim is to set forth the bearing of the Incarnation on our Lord's authority as a Teacher. As Canon Girdlestone truthfully says, some points discussed by Old Testament critics, "seem to be closed by the decisive utterances of the Lord Jesus; consequently, it is of vital importance to weigh and estimate his authority."

This great task is admirably performed, and towards the conclusion, in declining to treat the Hebrew Scriptures after the manner of the literary analyst, the Canon remarks: "The books of the Old Testament are not only to be read in connection with one another, but are to be studied in the light of the New. The dispensations of which they speak are related. We might as well study the bones of the body without reference to the head, as study the Old Testament without reference to the New. Criticism without Christ is shifting sand. We have not enough materials to go upon without taking Him and his words into account. We must view the Old Testament from his point of view rather than from the German critical point of view. Germans may err, and have erred. Christ has not erred, and cannot err."

Sound in teaching and cogent in reasoning, this book is a valuable contribution to a great controversy. In addition to that, it presents with much force the truth concerning the Living Word and the Written Word; and such doctrine our times sadly demand.

"That I May Know Him": Noontide Thoughts for Busy Lives. By Leonard K. Shaw. (John F. Shaw and Co. 1s.) A series of helpful and stimulative meditations for the midday hour. Got up in compact parchment, the book may easily be carried in the pocket, and ought to prove a refreshment and strength to many.

Locke's Annual Register. Messrs. Charles Dickens and Evans, 12, St. Bride-street, E.C., have issued the first volume (10s.) of this work of reference. It seems to have been very carefully compiled from the notices of births and marriages which have appeared in the London and Provincial papers during 1891. There is a complete index to each part, marriages being doubly indexed, i.e., under the bride's maiden name as well as the bridegroom's. A second volume is to give the deaths of the year. The work would prove of special service to the legal profession.

Something About Jesus the Lord: Culled from Scripture by Lady Beaujolois Dent. Drummond's Tract Depôt. (1s. per doz.) Starting with the emphatic statement that what is taught in Scripture must be held "firmly as infallible and unerring truth," while whatsoever is not therein revealed must be rejected, the authoress proceeds to bring forth Bible teaching about "Immanuel; God with us," by putting Scripture to Scripture and making the Word its own interpreter. We believe the booklet is well calculated to be helpful to many groping it may be in darkness.

The Church: Invisible, Visible, Catholic, National. By Ven. Archdeacon W. M. Sinclair, D.D. (E. Stock.) This charge, when delivered, created no small stir, and now that it is issued in pamphlet form it will, we venture to think, be carefully conned by ministers and members of the various churches. On the first three heads the position maintained and defended by citations from Hooker, Schaff, Dean Field, and Bishop Pearson will be very generally accepted by all Evangelical Christians. Some little divergence might possibly arise under the fourth head, "National;" but certainly the terms in which the Archdeacon deplores the divisions amongst Christians in face of the overwhelming mass of heathenism and Moslemism will find a cordial response in many minds. While himself "a loyal Churchman" in the Anglican sense, the author claims vigorously that all who are in Christ are in the Church, and in token of his largeness of heart dedicates his book "to all those that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity."

A Stone of the Temple is the title of a charming allegory by Mary Lamplugh. It exhibits faith in conflict with temptation, having a triumphant issue. (6d. Lang, Neil, and Co.)

Gospel Leaves. By Cheyne Brady. (Drummond's Tract Depôt, Stirling. 6d. per 100.) Useful illustrated two-page tracts, likely to do good service in the open air or in general distribution.

Rev. C. W. Olver, reviewing Wesleyan Missions for the past year, says that the principal movement has been in South Africa in the establishment of Missions in Mashonaland. On the West Coast of Africa they were gradually withdrawing their missionaries, and carrying on their work by native agents. On the Continent their work was, on the whole, satisfactory. There were parts of the field, however, which, above all others, were pressing upon their attention on account of crying and increasing need. One of these was the Empire of China. In India the one great demand to-day arose from the wonderful openings there were in the midst of low-caste and non-caste population.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

A new mission church has been opened in the parish of Christ Church, Lancaster, with Rev. Walter F. Jameson as curate-in-charge.

The C.M.S. hope to arrange for a series of simultaneous missionary meetings in London next February on the same lines as the F.S.M. of 1887.

Rev. J. S. Hill has been appointed Director of the Niger Mission, and Dr. Battersby Acting Secretary. Messrs. Hill and Proctor will sail early in September.

Since the Vicar of the large parish of Langley (Rev. Michael Pryor) entered on his work there, nearly four years ago, two churches have been built.

A course of lectures on "Foundations and Illustrations of the Creed" is being delivered in St. Edmund the King, Lombard-street, on Tue-days, at a quarter-past one, by Rev. C. R. Lloyd Engstrom.

The Church of St. John's, Gannow, near Burnley, was re-opened last week after repairs. The preachers at the special services were the Bishop of Manchester, Dean Maclure, and the Archdeacon of Blackburn.

We regret to hear of the death of Dr. Sandreczski, who was for thirty-one years connected with the old Mediterranean Mission of the C.M.S. He also compiled an Arabic Dictionary. He retired from active work in 1872.

The Bishop of Manchester has intimated his intention of visiting next year each of the twenty-one rural deaneries in the diocese, with a view of delivering addresses on the present state of Church work in each deanery.

Rev. J. N. Carpenter, of St. John's College, Agra, writes in The Gleaner that, while many of the native youths do not rise to a high conception of a High and Supreme Being, yet a profound conviction is settling on their minds that in the name of Jesus is power.

The Bishop of Sierra Leone had an interview with the C.M.S. Committee on Tuesday, and gave an interesting account of the progress of missionary work in his diocese. The Committee also received Revs. J. B. Panes, of the Telugu Mission, and A. N. Wood, of the Eastern Equatorial African Mission.

In his third sermon, in St. Luke's, West Holloway, on the "Falsity of Ritualism to the Doctrines of the Church of England in regard to the Lord's Supper," Rev. Richard Glover supplemented his previous thesis that "there is no 'Priest' in the Church of England" with the further one that "there is no 'propitiatory sacrifice' in her Holy Communion," and based his remarks on Heb. x. 10-22, referring especially to the passage "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith."

CONGREGATIONAL.

A new Welsh cause has been started at Connah's Quay.

A new chapel is building at Kimberworth-road, Rotherham.

The Independent College, Taunton, reports a good and successful year.

Rev. G. Dawkins has been ordained at the new church in Cwmbath, near Morriston.

Re-opening services have been held at Trefil, Monmouthshire, after important alterations.

Revs. R. Rowlands and S. W. Hough preached at the jubilee services of Jerusalem Coed-duon.

Memorial-stones have been laid of a new chapel at New Tredegar, which will accommodate about 300 persons.

Rev. John Eames, of Sittingbourne, has accepted an invitation to the pastorate of Victoria-road Church, Cambridge.

The Norwich churches have just resolved to erect an iron building upon a site which was secured some time since in a populous city district.

Mr. John Jameson, Rev. Peter Thompson's colleague in the East-end Mission for the last seven years, has accepted a call to the pastorate of Arundel-square Chapel, Barnsbury.

Ebenezer Church, Cardiff, is in a most flourishing state under its new pastor, Rev. Cynwonfardd Edwards, D.D. An increase of 110 in the membership is reported at the close of the year.

The Union of the Western District of Glamorgan has decided to recommend to the choirs connected with the churches of the Association the desirability of establishing a choral union.

At the Quarterly Meetings of the East Glamorgan Association held recently, at Barry near Cardiff, a paper was read by Mr. Ernest Daniel, of Merthyr, on 'The Young People in Our Churches.' Rev. W. Clarkson, B.A., of Bristol, preached in the evening.

The Cleveland Independent gives an interesting account of the visitation of the weaker churches of the North Riding by Revs. J. R. Bailey and E. A. Lawrence. Mr. Bailey visited Lingdale, Loftus, Saltburn, Peak, and Kirby moorside; Mr. Lawrence Pickering, Saltburn, Great Ayton, Stokesley, South Eston, and Guisborough.

BAPTIST.

A new chapel is being erected at Ibstock, Ashby-de-la-Zouch.

Interesting services were held on Sunday week in Green-lane Chapel, Derby.

The Great Yarmouth congregation has called Rev. J. H. Jones, of Todmorden.

Kingsgate-street, W.C., is losing Rev. F. James, who goes to Lincoln.

Rev. J. Simmance, of Chiswick Baptist Chapel, has been compelled to resign his charge, owing to the loss of his voice.

Mr. S. Flemington, of Southampton, has accepted a call of the Poole Baptist Church to take the oversight of their branch church at Heatherlands.

At Mundesley, Norfolk, on 1st inst., Mr. Chapman, of Barnes, drowned while bathing, son of Rev. C. B. Chapman, formerly of the Baptist Missionary Society.

The students at Regent's-park College have, for some three and a-half years, been conducting services at Hawkhurst. These have prospered greatly, and now a new chapel is being built.

Meetings of the North Wales and Border Counties Prayer Union were held at Wem Baptist Chapel on Tuesday week. In the afternoon a devotional service was held, and in the evening a public meeting.

Clarence-road Baptist Chapel, Southend, celebrated on Sunday week the fourth anniversary of the pastor, Rev. F. A. Hogbin, when Rev. W. A. Phillips conducted the services, and in the evening five persons were baptised.

Many will be glad to hear of the safe return to England of Rev. H. White from Bopoto, and Mr. S. M. Field from Bolobo, Upper Congo River. Mr. Field has since left for the United States, where his wife and children reside, and where he will spend his furlough.

At the meetings of the Devon (North) Baptist Association, held lately at Hatherleigh, an interesting paper was read on the question, "Does God's Word warrant us in seeking blessings which should vie with those of Pentecost in extent and character?"

A mission band has been formed in connection with the Wynberg Church, South Africa, which holds open-air meetings on Sunday afternoons amongst the Kaffirs and the Malays. This band has secured a small building in the native quarter, which has been converted into a mission hall.

METHODIST.

Mr. W. Sampson, the Cornish evangelist, on Sunday conducted successful evangelistic services at Herne Bay.

The Wesleyan Conference has agreed that the district meetings should in future be called Synods; a change of name suggestive of enlarged powers.

Rev. E. Fairley sails in a few days to begin another period of missionary service in the African Island of Fernando Po.

At the annual Bible Christian Conference at Newport the Sunday-school report stated that during the year 103 scholars had professed conversion.

The remarkably successful work at Clapton, under the care of Rev. Thomas Jackson, has given such satisfaction that it is now decided to take the Hoxton Chapel, and place it under the same devoted minister.

One of the best known of the Primitive Methodist ministers in Australia has just passed away in Rev. I. Hartley, who laboured nearly half a century, and has reached his seventy-sixth year.

The Primitive Methodist Missionary Committee met for its quarterly meeting at Wakefield on Thursday week. Matters of great importance were discussed and decided. A new mission is to be opened at Opobo, on the West Coast of Africa. Unhappily, there is no more encouraging news from the mission party, who have penetrated to the Barotze country, in the valley of the Zambesi. The African king still refuses sanction for the party to settle in his dominions.

The South African Wesleyan Methodist Church was formally organised ten years ago and separated from the British Missionary Society. There are at present 4[illegible] churches, an increase of 60 per cent. on the ten years; 27 ministers and evangelists, increase 55 per cent.; 2057 local preachers, increase 57 per cent.; 33,523 church members, increase 61½ per cent.; on trial 12,231, increase 3[illegible] per cent.; 380 Sunday-schools, increase 50 per cent.; 24,9[illegible] Sunday scholars, increase 42 per cent.

PRESBYTERIAN.

A new church is about to be erected at Tooting for Dr. Anderson and his people.

Canonbie Free Church has resolved to call Rev. John Jamieson, M.A., of Firth, Orkney.

The work of the church at Branton is reported to be in a flourishing state and accompanied by good results.

Rev. Charles White, of Dundee, has received a unanimous call to Dunrossness Free Church, Shetland.

The Belgian Christian Missionary Church has just closed its Annual Synod, held at Lize-Seraing, Liege.

Says Dr. B. H. Landie: "My belief is that in all Europe there is no nobler, no more fruitful evangelistic work than that of the Missionary Church of Belgium."

Miss Ricketts adds to her labours among the Swatow women and girls the work of a translator. She has just finished the translation of the Pilgrim's Progress.

The Free Presbytery of Dornoch has inducted Rev. James Macdonald, M.A., late of Ardachy, Inverness, to the charge of Dornoch congregation as successor to the late Rev. Neil Taylor.

Rev. Hugh Black, of Paisley, who has lately been attracting so much attention, preached on Sunday week in Jersey. The sermon, founded on 1 Peter iii. 13, was a most impressive one, and was much appreciated.

St. Nicholas's Church at Shrewsbury has made good progress since the settlement of Rev. W. R. Thompson two years ago. At the flower service recently held in the church, the children of a neighbouring Baptist Sunday-school united with those of the Presbyterian Sunday-school.

Rev. T. Meyer made an interesting statement at the last meeting of the Jewish Committee regarding the present condition of work amongst the London Jews, who are greatly more open to the teaching of the Christian missionary than when Mr. Meyer began his London work twenty years ago.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Rev. John McMillan, M.A., of Dundalk, has been installed pastor of the new and important Cooke Centenary Church, Belfast.

The late Dowager Countess of Antrim has left £1000 to the parish of Glenarm, Co. Antrim, to augment the incumbent's income.

Revs. Geo. Magill and Wm. Park, of Belfast, have gone to America to attend the meeting of the Pan-Presbyterian Council, to be held next month in Toronto.

Mr. William Gillespie, M.A., of Newry, a distinguished graduate of the Royal University, has been accepted as missionary by the Board of Missions of the Presbyterian Church, and is about to proceed to China.

The case of Rev. Canon Smyth, of St. Bartholomew, Dublin, which came last week before the Judicial Committee of the Dublin Diocesan Synod, and in which Canon Smyth was charged with setting up a cross behind the communion table, contrary to the laws of the Church, has been decided in the defendant's favour.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

The directors of the Imperial British East Africa Company have received with deep regret a telegram from Zanzibar reporting the arrival there of letters from Captain Lugard, dated April 9, and advising that Mr. Walter Fenwick de Winton died from fever in Unyoro at the end of March. At Hassocks, on the 30th ult., Rev. J. Griffith, LL.D., aged seventy-four, beloved as vicar and as head-master of Brighton College.—At Sulham House, Reading, on 2[illegible] inst., Rev. John Wilder, aged ninety-one, rector of S[illegible] and vice-provost of Eton College.—At Condors, on 30th ult., Rev. R. C. Wanstall, aged forty-nine.—At Chappel, Rev. Thackery, for forty-five years vicar of Shoeland[illegible] Ormonde Terrace, Regent's Park, on 30th ult., Rev. C. W. Hodson, aged seventy-three, vicar of St. James's, Hampstead-road.—At Yalding, Kent, Rev. T. Miles, former vicar of St. Margaret's.—At Dublin, Rev. Henry Sheppherd, D.D., M.D., incumbent for some time of the Free Church, Dublin; at Gorey, Rev. Abel Woodroffe, aged sixty-seven years.—Rev. Thomas Adams, of New Zealand, formerly pastor of Lodge-street Church, Bristol; he died on June 1 at Lake Takapuna, Auckland, leaving a widow and several young children.—At Finsbury-park, Dr. Soutter, a devoted Protestant worker and lecturer.

MR. EDWARD LLOYD,

England's Greatest Tenor,

IN WRITING TO

MR. HARNESS, 4th July, 1892, says:—

"Will you send me another Electropathic Belt the same strength as before. Probably you would like to know my opinion and experience of your appliances. Under the advice of a friend who has a thorough knowledge of your invention, I ordered my first belt with very little faith, having previously tried the ordinary medical remedies without any result.

"I commenced to wear your belt prior to my visit to America, and felt better from the first day. All through my tour I was remarkably well, and I now feel that I have completely regained my health. I am convinced that this result was achieved by your belt alone.

"I wish the Electropathic Institution over which you preside every success, and can conscientiously recommend your appliances to my friends.

Yours faithfully
Edward Lloyd

Temperance Notes.

The Dominion W.C.T.U. has just held its annual convention in Ottawa, Ont.

A great Temperance Assembly was held last week in Lake City, Minn., by Mr. John G. Woolley.

Mr. Justice Mathew considers—and many will agree with him—that there is no worse bulwark of British Liberty than the public-house, and no institution more fatal to freedom.

The W. C. T. Union in Canada now number 362, the members 6982; 17,318 signatures have been secured to the pledge during the past year, and 9179 pages of literature distributed. A decrease in saloons is reported from British Columbia, Quebec, and Ontario.

Many will hear with regret that on the day after the adoption by the United States Senate of the motion of Senator Peffer, of Kansas, that the sale of intoxicating liquors in the World's Fair should be prohibited the motion was reconsidered and lost by a majority of eight.

On Bank Holiday an enthusiastic open-air meeting on behalf of the Temperance cause was held at Portrush. Mr. T. W. Russell, M.P., presided, and boldly demanded a Temperance Bill which would close all public-houses on the Lord's Day. Several other speakers also addressed the meeting.

It is proposed to lessen the number of licensed houses in Bedfordshire. At present there are 784 licensed houses, giving one for every 131 of the population; and the Quarter Sessions have decided that one licensed house for 360 of the population is sufficient for the reasonable requirements of the public.

The Total Abstinence Union of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland reports 117 societies with a total membership of 16,500. A beginning has been made with the work of visiting the Presbyteries of the Church, and of holding public meetings. The main effort of the executive has been to commend the Union to existing Societies, and to ministers, sessions, and temperance workers. The corresponding secretary is Rev. D. M. Forrester, Logiealmond, Perth.

The National Temperance League Committee are prepared to assist town societies and united committees in the metropolis and provinces in holding missions by sending their agents or supplying a complete programme of speakers upon every aspect of the total abstinence question. All applications should contain information as to the condition of the finances, as the committee of the League are anxious to meet the local requirements and circumstances as nearly as possible.

The Temperance Committee of the Wesleyan Conference have solved a very awkward and burning question by suggesting that, while retaining the dual basis wherever possible, the Conference should sanction the formation of Temperance Societies, upon a Total Abstinence basis, in places where this appears to be the most desirable method of working. It is evident that in many localities the dual basis does not work; and the earnest and most cautious evolution seems to be the permissive regulation suggested by the Committee and accepted without a division by the Conference.

The British Vice-Consul at Los Angeles, in Southern California, in his last report says that, although the State is a wine-producing one, there are several municipalities where the sale of liquor is prohibited by law. The city council of Pomona, a city of a few thousand inhabitants, about thirty miles east of Los Angeles, recently passed a most stringent anti-liquor ordinance. Permission is given to any policeman to enter places and make a search at any time for any liquor or vessels for holding the same. There is also a heavy penalty for persons who know where liquor is sold and do not inform the police.

Dr. Cushman, illustrating the power of the Gospel to save drunkards, tells the following: "God has forgiven my sins, and what is a'most as good, my wife has forgiven me too!" said a man in Bethesda Mission. Those who knew his history saw a rainbow in the tears of joy upon his cheeks. The first frost had touched his head and his face was furrowed, but beside the marks of dissipation there shone, like lights upon a picture, the expression of tenderness and good fellowship telling what had been his snare. For twenty-two years this man had been given to occasional sprees, which finally became continual, and he had wandered from home to Chicago, where, after six months of utter destitution and degradation, he strayed into the Mission. There the loving message awakened hope in his heart. He "signed the pledge and accepted Christ."

"A walking advertisement," so a redeemed man calls himself, "of the power of Christ to deliver." Fifteen years ago he was one of the very worst men of Philadelphia; manufacturing, selling, and drinking liquor until none were deeper in the mire. Then he was converted, and at once re-entered the saloons and dives he had formerly haunted, preaching salvation. His evenings for fifteen years have been given to rescue work, and street preaching. Part of the year he holds services on the wharves, where thousands attend. Like a wide-awake business man, during his daily toil he lies in wait for the chance to do the Master's work. His occupation throws him with seamen, and on all the seas it is said there are men brought to Christ through his efforts. His organised missions have been most successful. After abandoning rum-selling his family endured the extremities of poverty, but his present home testifies that those who wait on God shall want no good thing.

DONATIONS

RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, AUGUST 8, 1892.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O.Orders, not by stamps.

 Will donors oblige us by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the missions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders should be made payable to Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C., and crossed "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss.

Services in Theatres and Halls.—The Special Services Committee are anxious ere the holiday season to be in a position to engage the same number of halls for next winter as they had last year. Unless further funds come in the Queen's Theatre, Poplar, must be given up; yet it is in a splendid neighbourhood for reaching working men, and good work has been done in it. Communications should be addressed to Mr. C. M. Sawell, 3, Bridewell-place, E.C.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN,

GREAT ORMOND STREET, LONDON, W.C.

CONVALESCENT BRANCH:

CROMWELL HOUSE,

HIGHGATE.

PATRON: THE QUEEN.
PRESIDENT: THE DUKE OF FIFE, K.T.

During 1891, 1596 In-Patients and 20,112 new Out-Patients were treated.

A Deficit of £1160 is feared as the result of this financial year, which ends 31st December.

During this holiday season no contributions reach the Hospital, yet the wards are full as ever of sick children.

New Subscriptions and Donations are really immediately required to enable the wards to be kept full. The closing of even one ward will be disastrous for the sick children of this poor and populous neighbourhood.

ADRIAN HOPE, Secretary.

St. Giles' Christian Mission

CHILDREN'S HOLIDAY FUND.

The Holiday Season is close upon us, and the Children attending the Sunday School's of the St. Giles' Christian Mission are anxiously looking forward to their Annual Treat. Last year, in addition to giving a Day's Outing to

1500

Little Ones, drawn chiefly from the Courts and Alleys of St. Giles', we were enabled to send considerably over 200 for a fortnight in the country. We are anxious to do at least as much this year.

WILL YOU HELP?

Donations will be most thankfully acknowledged if sent to our Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard St., E.C., or to Mr. W. Wheatley, Superintendent St. Giles' Christian Mission, 4, Ampton St., Regent Sq., W.C.

Please notice exact title of Society.

THE MISSIONS TO SEAMEN.

PATRON: Admiral H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH, K.G.

LORD BRASSEY has, with great munificence, promised £5,000 towards the £30,000 needed for a carefully elaborated scheme to cope with the evils afflicting seamen in the Port of London; including a MISSIONS TO SEAMEN Church, Institute, Gymnasium, Officers' Rooms, Class Rooms, Adult Schools, and Coffee Bar, &c., in one block, with four smaller branch Seamen's Institutes, to be worked by two chaplains and five experienced readers. Besides the above £30,000, about £3,000 a year additional will be needed for maintenance of staff and buildings in East of London.

COMMANDER H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, R.N., K.G., is president of the London Funds Committee of the Missions to Seamen to raise the necessary moneys. It includes amongst others, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Mayor, the Prime Warden of the Fishmongers, the First Lord of the Admiralty, and many leading shipowners and merchants, &c., offertories and drawing-room meetings, &c., are solicited. Subscriptions and contributions for the General Fund, and for the Special "London Fund of the Missions to Seamen," should be sent to Messrs Barclay, Ransom, and Co., Bankers, 1, Pall Mall East, or 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or to the General Secretary, Commander William Dawson, R.N., the Missions to Seamen, 11, Buckingham-street, Strand, London, W.C.

STREET ARABS' SEASIDE HOLIDAY.

THE Waifs and Strays of our Homes are CAMPING OUT at Littlestone-on-Sea.

We are anxious to give them three weeks' change. Many of them are stunted and weakly, and we rely upon this annual outing to brace them up and start their growing. The result in many cases is simply magical.

We endeavour to make our sojourn, in a quiet, refreshing, country scene, a means of spiritual blessing, not only to the boys, but also to those living in the neighbouring villages, who are always attracted in great numbers to our Evangelistic Services by the novelty of the scene and the hearty singing of the boys.

£1 1s. covers an elder lad's railway fare and maintenance for three weeks; £5 pays the railway fare to and from of thirty-three tiny Waifs; £10 meets all the cost of travelling, and three weeks' support for twelve friendless orphan lads.

"Camping Out," a record of our Encampments from 1884-1891, may be had on application here.

Who will help in this loving service, for the Lord's sake, to "Nobody's Boys"? Would it not be an acceptable thankoffering from parents who are welcoming their own healthy, happy boys from school, to give a breath of fresh air and a glimpse of the sea to some fatherless, motherless, homeless little one? Even the smallest gift will be most gratefully acknowledged.

THE BOYS' HOME,
95, SOUTHWARK STREET, S.E.

The Music of the Dinner Bell.

But it is only music to him who enjoys his food. The appetite that vanishes and fades into discomfort with the taking of the first mouthful is not gladdened by the sound of the dinner bell.

Is it Music to You?

If not, Guy's Tonic will heal the frailty of your stomach, and make every meal an hour of pleasure, every chime of bells a reminder of the blessings which follow good digestion.

Of course you know of Guy's Tonic—every one has heard of it in the United Kingdom—but hearing of it, and knowing about it is not enough.

Every chemist has it—good reports come to us from all sides, sent voluntarily, by grateful friends who have proved its value.

When will you begin to let it help you?

Rev. Stephen Harper writes from Wesley Manse, St. Leonards-on-Sea:—"I hereby desire to express my extreme indebtedness to you for the speedy and great relief and benefit my wife has derived through taking Guy's Tonic; her sufferings from indigestion were very severe, and her loss of appetite protracted. For several months she could not take a meal without pain—in fact, she was very rarely free from pain during those months; but your first bottle restored her appetite, and greatly alleviated her sufferings, and she is fast regaining her wonted energy and brightness of spirit. She now takes her food with pleasure, and has no discomfort after."

Guy's Tonic can be obtained of all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors at 2s. 9d. per bottle, or it will be sent post free to any address on receipt of this amount (2s. 9d.) by Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate Circus, London, E.C.

FORTIETH SERIES OF CASES.
CASE FOR THE WEEK.
CHRONIC BRONCHITIS.—CASE AT PULTENEY TOWN, N.B.

In March of last year, MR. JAMES BRODIE, of 23, Huddart-street, Pulteney Town, Wick, applied to me, through reading in the Christian Herald an account of my treatment.

His illness had arisen from a severe cold six months before, which had brought on uneasiness in the windpipe, with sensation of choking; also a violent cough, which never ceased all night, and was attended with distressing sense of suffocation, for which he had obtained no relief.

In about a month he wrote me:—"I can truly say I am better in every respect by taking your medicine. My breathing is easier; my appetite increasing; I can sleep now for four or five hours. Your liniament, also, has relieved me much. I have been out for a short walk the last two days."

In three months he was able to leave off the medicine.

After a long interval I heard from him. Writing me in February last (while naming another ailment that was troubling him unconnected with his old complain), he says:—"I am glad to say, with entire satisfaction, that through your medicine I am thoroughly sound as regards the chest."

NOTE.—CONSULTATIONS FREE at Coombe Lodge, Peckham, on TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings only. No charge except the usual charge for three or six weeks' supply of medicine. All Patients should read the Book first.

THE LAW IN THE PROPHETS.

By PROFESSOR LEATHES, D.D.

THE VARIORUM BIBLE.

"The most marvellous production ever turned out of a printing office. It was a most critical examination of the original texts, and contained the translations of those texts from the pens of the greatest scholars who ever lived. Those translations—many of which could only be found in libraries—would be of the greatest service."—Extract from Speech at the World's Sunday School Convention.

8th THOUSAND.

Old Margaret; OR, A SAINT AT LAST.

With Striking Portrait. Tinted Covers, 6d. Cloth Boards, 1s.

By REV. J. ELDER CUMMING, D.D.

"A narrative taken from real life, and given to us in a very felicitous manner by the descriptive pen of Dr. Elder Cumming, of Glasgow. Dr. Cumming is well known to the religious puplic as one of the most attractive speakers at the Keswick Convention; and he uses the incidents, here so thrillingly sketched, of the experiences in the heart and life of a very remarkable woman to set before his readers the nature of sanctification and complete consecration. The whole picture is drawn by the hand of a master, and cannot fail in many ways to give great interest to the reader."—Dublin Evening Mail.

"Our readers will find her story a remarkably stimulating one, and they will have the advantage of learning, from one who is well known as a spiritual teacher, what this 'higher life' teaching of which we hear much nowadays really is."—Perthshire Advertiser.

THE CURE OF CONSUMPTION BRONCHITIS AND ASTHMA.

DR. ALABONE'S REMEDIES.

By the success of these remedies all barriers have been broken down, and it is now an acknowledged fact that CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, and ASTHMA are curable by this specific treatment, many thousands of cases having been abandoned as hopeless.

THE WHOLE OF THE REMEDIES ARE NOW, FOR THE FIRST TIME, AVAILABLE TO THE PUBLIC, and can be obtained from any chemist.

Agent: J. Howard, 21, Queenhithe, London, E.C.

Dr. CRONIN, M.D., writes:—"You have done wonders for my patient. I hardly thought he could have improved so much under the treatment."

Dr. FAIRBAIRN, M.D., L.R.C.S., writes:—"The success of your treatment of Consumption is simply marvellous. I have had no less than 60 CASES OF CURE."

"Your remedy for Consumption has PROVED A SUCCESS in my own case, after having been GIVEN UP BY SEVERAL EMINENT PHYSICIANS."—T. YOUNG, L.R.C.P., L.R.C.S., &c.

B. WATSON DAVIES, M.D., L.R.C.S., writes:—"I have great pleasure in stating that a near and dear relative of mine, who was in an ADVANCED STAGE OF CONSUMPTION when I commenced your treatment (several members of her family having died of that disease), is now wonderfully improved in all respects, and has entirely lost her cough."

Members of the medical and other professions are testifying to the extraordinary results obtained from the use of these remedies.

WORKS ON ROMANISM.

"Popery can find no favour where 'Foxe's Martyrs' is studied."—Christian Progress.

MORGAN & SCOTT'S EDITION.

FOXE'S BOOK OF MARTYRS:

A COMPLETE AND AUTHENTIC ACCOUNT OF

THE LIVES, SUFFERINGS, and TRIUMPHANT DEATHS of EARLY CHRISTIAN and PROTESTANT MARTYRS in ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

WITH TWELVE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Complete in One Handsome Volume, cloth, bevelled boards, 10s. 6d.
Presentation Edition, cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 12s. 6d.

"We are glad to see our old friend John Foxe in this new and handsome form. Of all the editions that we have seen, this of Messrs. Morgan and Scott's is decidedly the best. The additions of the Editor's, bringing the history down to recent date, help to show the unchanged nature of Romanism, and the need of watching its insidious incroachments. Rev. Ingram Cobbin's introductory essay on Popery is of a very vigorous and instructive character. The numerous engravings lend additional interest to the book, and its excellent 'get up' renders it an ornament worthy of any drawing-room"—Methodist Recorder.

"A new edition of this useful and standard work; and a most masterly exposure of what Romanism really is, and what it can do when it has the upper hand. The perusal of this book should form part of the education of our youth. Heads of families should purchase it for their children to read. Popery can find no favour where FOXE'S MARTYRS is studied."—Christian Progress.

THE CATACOMBS AT ROME:

Their Contents and Teachings.

A VINDICATION OF PURE AND PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY; AND AN EXPOSURE OF THE CORRUPTIONS OF ROMANISM; DERIVED FROM THE SEPULCHRAL REMAINS OF THE EARLY CHRISTIANS AT ROME.

By BENJAMIN SCOTT, F.R.A.S., Late Chamberlain of the City of London.

Fourth Edition. Revised and Improved.
With many Illustrations.
Tinted covers, 2s. Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Scott's volume possesses great antiquarian and historical interest."—Word and Work

"Most people have heard of these famous Catacombs; but nowhere have we met with a more graphic or instructive account of their contents than in this book. The many wood engravings help to make the whole thing quite plain. We advise our young ministers, or more educated Sunday school teachers, to study this volume."

THE VEIL LIFTED;

OR, THE ROMANCE AND REALITY OF CONVENT LIFE.

Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"A valuable little work. We wish we could place it in the hands of thousands and more, we wish we could induce that hapless multitude who are now given over to a blind infatuation of Romanism and Ritualism, under a glossed and gilded form, to 'read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest' what the author has here advanced upon this all-important subject."—The Gospel Magazine.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE OF ROMAN CATHOLICISM:

WITH INCIDENTS OF CONVENT LIFE

Tinted covers, 1s; cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

"Now, more than ever, ought books like this to be diligently circulated, for not only is Rome as busy with her wiles as heretofore; but in what was once a Protestant Church we have convents and the confessional too. As for the book of Miss Richardson, we can answer for the accuracy of many of its details."—Evangelical Christendom.

THE CONFESSIONAL:

A PERSONAL NARRATIVE.

Neatly Printed in Red and Black; suitable for enclosing in the modern square envelope.

1s. per Dozen; 7s. 6d. per 100.

"It was a dark page in my experience, when first I knelt at the feet of a mortal to confess what should have been poured into the ear of God alone. I cannot dwell upon this; but a brief time before it would have for ever put to rest my longings after Romanism. But the mantle of evening had already cast its shadowy folds around me, and they were fast enveloping me in darkness as of midnight."

"Each of the portraits is the result of perfectly independent and loving study; and the most accomplished scholar will pay tribute to the simplicity and good sense which are sure to captivate the least literary of readers."—Christian Leader.

WORKS BY REV. DR. CULROSS.

John, whom Jesus Loved.

A Sketch of the Character, Writings, Theology and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. By Rev. James Culross, M.A., D.D. With Eight Chromo-Lithographic Views. Tinted covers, 2s.; cloth boards 2s. 6d.; Presentation Edition, Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon wrote in The Sword and Trowel:—

"Preachers abound, but divines are few. The printing press pours forth a mass of matter, but a real book is a phenomenon. We count ourselves happy, for we have met with a divine in Dr. James Culross; and in his work entitled 'John, whom Jesus Loved,' we have found a book. Many writers are mere echoes of other men's voices—they imitate the good steward in bringing forth things old, but things new are quite out of their way. One of the excellences of Dr. Culross is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch; he is no withered bough of the autumn forest. His mind allows young flowers to break through its soil after their own fashion, and to blossom in their own sweet way.

"It is altogether without reserve that we recommend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."

"Behold I Stand at the Door and Knock."

Christ's Message to the Church at Laodicea. By Rev. James Culross, M.A., D.D. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Printed Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Another 'gem of purest ray serene' from the deep waters of our brother's teeming mind. He possesses a ripeness of thought and a beauty of expression which, in our judgment, are scarcely equalled, and in not one instance surpassed, by those of any other living teacher known to us."—The Sword and Trowel.

"Thy First Love":

Christ's Message to the Church of Ephesus. By Rev. James Culross, M.A., D.D. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Tinted covers, 1s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"We do not know higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly. We heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."
—The Sunday School Chronicle.

Pearls of Wisdom

From the Parables. By A.L.O.E., Author of "Rescued from Egypt," "Exiles of Babylon," etc. 256 Pages. Illustrated with twenty-four Full-page Original Drawings. Handsomely bound in cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d.; with gilt edges, 4s. Special cheap Edition: Tinted covers, 6d.; cloth, 1s.; cloth boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

"Never were the parables seen to better advantage, never did they seem so full of meaning, purpose, point, and never were their details made so winsome and stimulating. Religious teachers of all denominations will find the volume exceedingly suggestive and stimulating."
Oldham Chronicle.

Choice Sayings.

A Collection of over 800 Striking and Profitable Comments on almost every Subject Relating to Christian Faith and Practice. By Robert C. Chapman. Tinted Covers, 9d.; Cloth Limp, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d. Presentation Editions: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.; Morocco, 3s.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon wrote of Mr. Chapman's book:—"Here we have gold dust, 'and the gold of that land is good!' Some of these brief 'Sayings' contain whole sermons. Personally we expect to gather many discourses while studying this little book. A dew from heaven rests on Mr. Chapman's expositions."—The Sword and Trowel.

"There is both manna and old corn of the land here in rich variety."—Footsteps of Truth.

On the Tabernacle.

"The Illustrations in colour and gold are exceedingly beautiful."—Christian Age.

The Tabernacle, The Priesthood, and The Offerings.

With the Spiritual Lessons Derived from the Ritual and Ceremonies of the Old Dispensation. By Henry W. Soultau, Author of "The Holy Vessels of the Tabernacle," &c. With four beautiful Coloured Plates, and numerous smaller Engravings. Cloth Boards, 5s.; Library Binding, Gilt Edges, 6s.; Tinted Covers (without Coloured Plate), 3s.

"This is the best book on the subject we have seen. Concise, complete, and evangelical, it affords all readers of the Holy Bible the help which they need in appreciating the services and ritual of the wilderness worship."—Preachers' Analyst.

"We heartily commend this work to all students of the Bible, and especially to young Christians. Its teaching is calculated to root and ground them in the faith."—Footsteps of Truth."

The Gospel According to Moses.

As Seen in the Tabernacle, and its Various Services. By Rev. George Rodgers. With Frontispiece, and numerous smaller Illustrations. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 2s.

"No young Christian, and specially no preacher, should be ignorant of the truth which this small volume very simply but very forcibly enunciates."—The Christian.

"We cordially recommend the short and very suggestive treatise."—The Bulwark.

The Tabernacle and the Temple:

Their Symbolic Teaching and Spiritual Import By Arabella E. Webb. Tinted Covers, 6d. Cloth, 1s.

"Bible-class teachers and students will find this little catechism helpful and suggestive."—Word and Work.

"Intelligently and lucidly written; and manifests much careful study of the Scriptures."—The Irish Baptist Magazine.

The Gospel in Leviticus.

Types and Foreshadowings of the Great Redemption. By Rev. James Fleming, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Fitted to be eminently useful as a plain and faithful setting forth of the work of Christ as foreshadowed in the Mosaic types."—Baptist Magazine.

"This is not a book for scholarly critics, dealing with exegetical distinctions; but one intended for the common people, dealing with practical questions; and the spirit breathing through the book is that of one earnestly desiring the salvation of his readers."—The Primitive Methodist.

The Christian.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving portrait and sketch of the late Mr. John Macgregor, widely known as "Rob Roy."

Mr. Moody, having concluded last night his mission in Sunderland, commences this day in Southampton, where arrangements have been made for three days' meetings in the Skating Rink, estimated to hold over 4,000. A thoroughly representative committee has been heartily at work, the Secretary being Mr. E. Ashby. Mr. A. J. Mayers will sing. Mr. Moody's intention is to cross over to Belfast on Monday (22nd), and give at least a month in that country, Mr. Burke conducting the service of song.

The special work under the care of Mr. Charles Cook in Hyde Park, and in the winter in the Metropolitan Music Hall, of which some details appear on another page, is being pushed forward with vigour and accompanied with blessing. The Park services must shortly close, and the Music Hall ought to be opened; but ere doing so Mr. Cook is anxious to be enabled to pay off £200, and thus start the winter's campaign free of anxiety. Many doubtless will feel led to co-operate in this matter.

A conscientious scrutator, of whose anonymous faithfulness we desire to think respectfully and kindly, writes to a contemporary that "the editor of a well-known 'Christian weekly' (meaning ourselves) published side by side with an article on 'Inspiration,' in which they refer to what they justly call 'Mr. Horton's destructive criticisms on the Inspired Writings,' a letter addressed by the editor and proprietor of same paper, to this same 'destructive' critic of God's Word, beginning with 'My dear Mr. Horton,' and concluding 'With very kind Christian regards, etc.'"

Are we really prohibited from using courteous terms or speaking kindly to a brother who is, as we believe, in error? Are we called upon not only to "contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered to the saints," but to denounce persons who, though with much perversion of doctrine, confess Jesus as Lord, which can only be by the Holy Ghost? Does the Lord's precept then mean nothing, "Judge not, that ye be not judged"? or His question, "Who art thou that judgest the servant of another?" and that other, God?

Is no account to be taken of the influences by which men are moulded, and the schools in which they are trained? Would our scrutator be exactly what he is, for censorship on the one hand, or for censoriousness on the other, apart from his "environment"? After all, may there not be a lower criticism, as pretentious, as fallacious, and as offensive as the "Higher"? Jude begins his epistle by exhorting us to contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered to the saints, and closes it with "keep yourselves in the love of God, looking (yourselves) for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life: and of some have compassion, making a difference."

Within this century a great change has passed upon the method of interpreting Old Testament prophecy. It used to be all spiritualised and given to the Church; now it is all literalised and restored to the Jews. But our forefathers were not altogether wrong, nor are we altogether right. For all promises of spiritual blessings, and all other promises in their spiritual or antitypical meaning, belong to the Church of Christ in this present age. "For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, preached among us, was not yea and nay, but in Him was yea. For all the promises of God in Him are yea, and in Him amen, unto the glory of God by us."

Jehovah, their covenant God, promised Israel: "I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you." This will be verified to Israel nationally when He has brought them back to their own land. It is verified to us individually now, as we present ourselves as in Rom. xii. 1; we claim the promise by faith and accept its fulfilment. Have I any filthiness of flesh or spirit? Do I defile my mind or body by any indulgence out of harmony with God? Do I eat and drink not to his glory? Do I indulge self in any form? Truly, all lawful things are lawful to me, but am I brought under the power of any? My Father promises, "I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean!"

Have I any hobby, or pet, or habit, to which I am devoted, and which is an idol—a worldly or a religious idol, a physical, or mental, or spiritual idol? He gives me His good word of promise, "From all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you." "Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God" (2 Cor. vii. 1).

Again and again, at the recent convention at Keswick, our inherent sinfulness, which taints everything we do—the iniquity of our holy things—was recognised; and this may lead, we trust, in future years, to a fuller exposition, a larger opening up of the ministry of our Great Priest over the house of God. It is remarkable that while this is the specific ministry of our Lord during this dispensation, it has not been prominent in the teaching at the numerous assemblies "for the deepening of the spiritual life."

But the declared recognition that the obedience unto which are elect requires the sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ (1 Pet., i, 2), must necessarily be accompanied by constant reference to the ministry of our Melchizedek, who is first by interpretation King of Righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is King of Peace.

Some of the utterances at Keswick most likely to be questioned were made by Mr. Grubb, yet in him and his party centred the chief interest. All else was teaching, theirs was action; in them the faith inculcated by others was perfected by works. By the way, have any of our readers a pamphlet, published many years ago, entitled, "The Everlasting Circles," by a former Bishop of Calcutta? It showed that nothing can be thought out by the brain without the help of the hand. The poet must write down his thought, and then he can think another. The inventor must put his conception into bodily form, and as he creates its parts one by one, his mind can go on conceiving the rest. So faith without works is barren, being alone; but faith wrought with Mr. Grubb's works, and by works was faith made complete.

A sister writes:—"Now is the time to sow the seed in dear old France. I wonder more of the good people who have been feeding so at Keswick and other Holiness Conventions do not cross the Channel and give out a little of the blessing to their starving neighbours. So many speak French who cannot go abroad to heathen lands." We cannot give any satisfactory answer. The Continent is our Samaria, and comes before "the ends of the earth" in the Master's marching orders to us. The spiritual needs of France are generally known, but the greatness of present opportunity is little realised.

Religion in the Royal Navy, as practised by Captain Hughes Hallett, R.N., of Her Majesty's ship Garnet at Callao, seems an odd mixture. From a question put in the House of Commons by Mr. M. Stewart, M.P., it appears that on Sunday, June 19, in accordance with the first article of the Naval Discipline Act, "prayers and preaching" by the chaplain, Rev. A. R. Price, B.A., R.N., were duly "performed," in the course of which the Fourth Commandment was read to the crew; but immediately afterwards, in contravention of the concluding part of that article, the captain employed the officers and crew in a rifle competition (using Government arms and ammunition) to which certain of the British community in Peru were invited.

On the following Sunday the Fourth Commandment was again read to the crew by the chaplain; and afterwards Her Majesty's boats and boats' crews were engaged in a public regatta with the Peruvians, to the no small scandal of the British merchants there; notwithstanding that it is the Captain's duty to see that "the Lord's Day is observed according to law." On the complaint of a British resident at Callao, the Admiralty have directed the Admiral in command of the Pacific squadron to inquire into this violation of the Naval Discipline Act. The bad influence of such proceedings upon the naval service must be deep and far-reaching. We rejoice to know that many naval officers are setting an example which is at once salutary for the present life and helpful in regard to spiritual experience.

Our friend Mr. Haley, of Wakefield, presided last week over a meeting near Filey, at which a rising young Wesleyan minister, Rev. Dinsdale Young, gave a lecture on the late Morley Punshon. In it he referred to the present preachers of modern thought, whose cheap emendations of divine truths reminded him of a decorator who had been employed to repair a country church, and whose bill included the following items:—"Altering the Ten Commandments, 10s. 6d.; improving the Creed, 10s.; making new Lord's Prayer, 15s."

A Romanist contemporary announces, seriously enough, in a paragraph to which prominence is given before the leading articles, that—

A relic of St. Anne, the mother of the Blessed Virgin, consisting of a portion of the forearm, has been procured for the church of St. John the Baptist, New York.

Doubtless the word procured was made use of inadvertently, and yet how singularly applicable it seems in the circumstances.

The Divine Word.

There is a connexion, a parallel, between the Living Word and the Written Word, which the natural man cannot perceive, and which spiritual men often fail adequately to recognize. In that searching passage, Heb. iv. 12, it is not easy to distinguish between Christ and the Scripture :—

For the Word of God is living and active, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart; neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight, but all things are naked and open unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do.

Is this living and active Word of God, the Personal or the Written Word; or is it the Living Word of God, using the Written Word, in the piercing power of the Holy Spirit of Inspiration? And is the Scripture thus the vehicle and the instrument of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost?

The Apostle writes that: "The Scripture saith unto Pharaoh." "The Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached beforehand the Gospel unto Abraham." "The Scripture hath concluded all under sin" (Rom. ix. 17, Gal. iii. 8, 22). This seems as though the Apostle regarded the Scripture as instinct with life, and intelligence, and power. "O man of God . . . take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee."

"Come, see a Man that told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" The woman left her waterpot because in one brief interview the Word made flesh had searched her through and through, and convinced her, not that the words spoken were Messianic words, but that He who spoke them was Himself the Christ.

Come, hear a Word that told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Scripture? The Word pierced me to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow; and discerned the thoughts and intents of my heart; and I searched the Scriptures daily, and knew that I had in them eternal life; for they testified of Jesus. Not some of them only; but in Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms, He expounded unto me in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself.

The Scripture foreseeing the Cross, and the soldiers breaking the malefactors' legs, declared, "a bone of Him shall not be broken;" and Jesus, knowing that all things were being accomplished in Him, and foreseeing the profane and vain janglings, the foolish and unlearned questions which should gender strifes, said, "The Scripture cannot be broken;" and Peter, remembering the vision of his majesty in the holy mount, declared that we have the word of prophecy confirmed, "whereunto ye do well that ye take heed in your hearts, as unto a lamp shining in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise."

Those who depreciate the inspiration of the Word of God, and say that such books as Job and Jonah are poetic fictions, or who play fast and loose with it and say at other times, "It is all inspired," are said to be nice, agreeable, good-tempered, fascinating people; while those who protest with both hands earnestly against the Scriptures of truth being degraded to the low level of inspired fiction, are "hot," they "use strong expressions," they "are disagreeable and pertinacious persons." Well, Nero fiddled while Rome was burning; but the people whose goods were burned, and whose loved ones perished, took it seriously. Were they to be blamed?

We have little interest in discussions on Inspiration. We feel as we should if the character of our mother were traduced. We should be too indignant or too full of contempt for the slander to condescend to defend her. We should only say, "They did not know her." Only by knowing her could they love her; and no defence of ours could make them love her except they knew her. "They say. What do they say? Let them say."

The current criticism springs from and is addressed to the intellect; but the Scripture is spiritual, and can only be perceived in the spirit. It is Divine, and can only be known within the veil, and the veil can only be entered through the rent body of the Second Man, the Lord from heaven, in whom the first man, of the earth earthy, sees himself to be a worm and no man, and all his boasted wisdom foolishness; that no flesh should glory in His presence, who hath chosen things that are not to bring to nought things that are.

To be candid, we are not zealous to affirm constantly that inspiration is verbal, or plenary, or both, not finding Scripture thus particularising concerning itself. Enough that the Scripture saith that "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God," and Scripture knows no other Scripture than itself. Enough that men spake from God, moved by the Holy Ghost. M.

A CONDITION OF REVIVAL.

We find in an American contemporary the following remarkable paper, which we reprint as likely to be of real service at present.

The time has come for subsoiling. It is with the souls of men as with much of the soil of older states—worn out. The light soil has been run over by a kind of religious physical sensationalism; men do not think as they once did. Profound introspection is no longer the style. Shallowness of conviction is like the tillage of light soil. Men do not read their Bibles as formerly. The Cross is now presented to the emotional side of human nature. Christ accepted is all the theme, while the consequent condemnation of Christ is a subject relegated to a past age. The law of God is thrown away as a thing superfluous—as the bitter rind around the love of Christ. There has been of late a strange and unaccountable change in the sensibilities and convictions of men. Years ago men forty years old, worldly minded, and saturated with sin, giants in their unbelief, were seen upon their knees so deeply convicted that, while others sat in the inquiry room, they kneeled and could be heard calling on God for mercy. Whole congregations were so broken down that they were not willing to leave the church at midnight. Church members could have been seen, out in the storms of wind and sleet of winter, hunting for the last sinner whom memory could recall, and for whom they could think themselves in any way responsible. Parents would interrupt the preaching, rising to ask for prayers for themselves and children.

Once, in a sermon, a prodigal son was described as followed by the undying love of a mother wasting away in consumption, who said, "I could die if I only knew that my son were walking in the footsteps of his departed father." At last, when her voice had been reduced to broken whispers, all she would say was, "Have you heard anything of my poor boy?" At that moment a man in the front pews rose and said, "I am that boy. I heard of my mother's desire, and have come all the way from California to see her. But, sir, I still have my wicked heart, and I did not go home, because I knew that my mother wanted something to comfort her which I did not have. Can I find Jesus Christ for my Saviour now, so that I can go and see her?" Two men commenced praying for him at the same time, and the whole congregation was broken down. Those who had known him in his young life gathered about him, and that mother's prayers were answered. Her boy, a man whose head was silvered over, had come home at last.

Heart-brokenness must first be felt in the Church of God. Rarely has a revival ever come that it did not start in the heart of the minister; or by some of the elders who had been pricked in their hearts. It is reported that when Dr. Nicholas Murray was in Wilkesbarre there was a great time of spiritual dearth, which, at first, seemed to trouble no one but the pastor. He prayed about it publicly and privately without much encouragement for a long time, when after a powerful sermon to his people, he awakened some of them, especially one of the elders, who came at two o'clock in the morning and rang the bell. The doctor lifted a window and asked, "What is wanted?" He said, "I have been praying since the close of the night service, and have come to tell you that I feel assured in my heart that we will have a revival." The pastor said, "Go home and sleep the rest of the night, for it has already come." Honoured church-members have often appointed private meetings to make inquest into their own souls for idols stowed away and concealed amidst the cobwebs of spiritual neglect, while the spiders held the temple instead of the Spirit of God. The time comes in the history of a Church of God when judgment must begin in it. There must be repentance between the porch and the altar. The members of the church must be reconverted. As the Saviour prayed for Peter, that he might strengthen his brethren, they must learn by sharp spiritual inspection that there are marked discrepancies between what they know and what they have done, or are doing. They are all right in their heads, but they must be pricked in their hearts, so that its anguish shall express itself in prayer that their lot may not be with hypocrites and unbelievers.

Italians in London.

Some months since, I opened a house of education for Italians at 34, John-street, Bedford-row, W.C. Church work conducted in Holy Trinity parish, Gray's Inn-road, has brought great improvement amongst the Italians residing in this neighbourhood. Every Sunday, at 4.30 p.m., I have invited them to divine service in the Italian language, and have had a hearty and numerous response.

Every Saturday my wife has called together as many Italian girls as she could attend to, and instructed them in domestic employments. On Thursday afternoons the Italian mothers have come in, and attended the "Mothers' Meetings." This Society had already enrolled seventy members up to the end of last month. The young men and young women have formed themselves into a choral society, and every Wednesday evening receive the benefit of musical education. There are excellent voices among them. The work is in the most prosperous and fruitful condition. Means are scarce, but the Lord will provide.

But I have seventy Italian women, and an equal number of babies and children, whom I would like to send for an airing into the country, at least for one day. But this would cost £20. There are many generous souls in England who have sojourned on the shores of that classic land of Italy, and have brought home mementoes and sweet things to be a joy for ever, and this would willingly show their gratitude to the children of bella Italia in England!

Surely they could find no better object than the Italian men, women, and children that we have collected around this house. They will be grateful, and I too, shall be grateful for whatever is done for them.

STEWARDSHIP AND ITS RESPONSIBILITIES.

A Bible Reading given at Keswick Convention

BY REV. HUBERT BROOKE.

We will read the first two verses of Luke xvi. "And He said unto his disciples, There was a certain rich man which had a steward; and the same was accused unto him that he had wasted his goods. And he called him, and said unto him: How is it that I hear this of thee? Give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward." The words "He said unto his disciples" tell us for whom the lesson of the parable is intended. The Lord's disciples are stewards, in a sense that those who are not his disciples are not. "A certain rich man." When the Lord spoke to the Pharisees He said, "a certain man," because they needed to be taught the existence of God; but when He speaks to his disciples He says "a certain rich man," because they needed to be taught the richness of their God.

"Which had a steward." In Romans xvi., amongst greetings, you will find (v. 23) "Erastus the chamberlain (or treasurer) of the city saluteth you." Here we have the same word as that rendered "steward." A steward is a treasurer, and as far as he is such he has to deal with things that belong to somebody else, and must afterwards give account of how he has used them. The moment he begins to use anything committed to him for himself or his own purposes, he becomes a dishonest treasurer: something is sticking to his hands that ought to flow through them.

In 1 Pet. iv. 10 we learn how far the word has to do with us. "As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God." We must not think of the disciples as apostles only; the Apostle Peter speaks of everyone, and there is not a single disciple to whom the calling does not apply, to whom the name does not belong. We are treasurers of God, to receive things from Him, and use them for Him. In 1 Cor. iv. 7 we learn the realm of the stewardship, "Who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive?" We are stewards in relation to everything we have. As a treasurer must be ever to the person or persons for whom he acts, we are careful to look out for such responsibilities only honest and trustworthy people. God's people in Christ Jesus are not called upon to give an account for the sins that are past—the Lord Jesus has given the account and paid the debt long ago; but all are called upon to give an account for all those things of which God makes them stewards—everyone will have to give account at the judgment seat of Christ.

The lessons especially belong to those who are ministers of the Word. In 1 Cor. iv. 1, "Let a man so account of us, as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God." So they have received for their ministry "the mysteries of God." This word is sometimes applied to the sacraments, but not in Holy Scripture. That is an ecclesiastical and historical sense, but in the New Testament it signifies those things which God kept hidden but has revealed—things that were secret but now are known. Ministers are the stewards of them, and it is their duty to minister them to those whom they serve in God's name.

In 1 Cor. ix. 16 we read St. Paul's words, "Though I preach the Gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel! For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward; but if against my will, a dispensation [or stewardship] of the Gospel is committed unto me." Ministers have the Gospel given to them, and woe is unto them if they keep it to themselves instead of using it for others. They must taste and know of its sweetness and fragrance in their own souls, and then pass it on to those for whom it was committed to them. In Acts xx. 24, you find the Apostle speaking of the "ministry which he received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God." That was his stewardship, and his life's aim was simply to carry it out, and do what the Master intended to be done with it. In Heb. xiii. 17 we read of what must also come under the heading of stewardship: "Obey them that have the rule over you [or guide you, and submit yourselves; for as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy and not with grief." We are stewards of anything of which we must give account. Here is a word for all those whom God has called to the ministry of his Church, that they are called upon to give account for souls, and they can only give account with joy if you obey their calling, and if their calling is a ministry which God has given to them. Therefore we plead with you to listen in order that you may obey.

But we want to reach out wider and see what those things are of which we are all ministers and stewards. "As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God" (1 Peter iv. 10). What are those gifts? Turn first to Matthew xii. 36, "Every idle word that men shall speak they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." The lips that speak and the tongue that frames the words are part of the stewardship which God has entrusted to us. The wicked man, in Psa. xii. 4, says: "Our lips are our own," but the godly man, in Hosea xiv. 2, says, "We will render the calves of our lips"—or our lips as calves consecrated to God. He has given us our lips, and we offer them to Him. An "idle" word is one that is unworking, or does a bad work. A jocose word is not necessarily an unworking one, but may sometimes do much to cheer a downcast labourer. It does not follow that idle words are merry words; used for God, merry words may do work for God. One day the precept shuts our mouths, and another day it opens them. By our words we shall be justified as faithful stewards, or condemned as unfaithful stewards.

In Matt xviii. 33 the Lord says to the unmerciful servant, "Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow servant, even as I had pity on thee?" It was the mercy of forgiveness—of 50 or 1,000 pence or talents makes no difference. As soon as forgiveness is yours, it is a trust for you to pass on to your brethren on the same terms as you received it. You are not to hide it as treasure, but to shed it to those around. "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth, and it tendeth to poverty."

In the parable of the talents (Matt. xxv.) we read that "After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them" (v. 19). Talents were just so many sums of money. We have applied it in an ecclesiastical sense to the many gifts God has given us. "There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit." For these the Lord says, when He comes again He will reckon with us. What are our talents? Rather, I would say, what are not our talents? "What hast thou which thou hast not received?" So many things has He given us—"life and breath, and all things." These are all talents. Then we have home and happiness, and love and friendship, children, relatives, and friends. We are all stewards of the manifold grace of God, and if every believing soul would become an honest steward there would be nothing more to tell you, but you would have much to tell others. These two thousand people could each start a conference, and there would be four millions of attendants at once.

At first this responsibility may seem a burden, and the longer you look at it outside you the bigger the burden appears. The things that burden and perplex and overcome you do so because you meet them as though you were your own master and not as though the Lord were your Master. If you take upon you the yoke of and begin to use for Him all you have and are, you will find that his yoke is easy and his burden is light. Then you begin to know what Theodore Monod says, "We need two conversions—first, from natural men to spiritual men, and then again from spiritual men to natural men," until the spiritual man becomes the natural life, and the burden is liberty and the bondage delight.

This is just carrying into practice what the Lord taught his people in the days of old. The things He gives you He gives not for yourself alone, but for Himself alone. In Joshua i. 2, you hear how the Lord spoke to Joshua and said, "Go over unto the land which I do give to thee." He gives the land. Now the next verse (3), "Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you." The gift was first put before Joshua, and then it was taken up by him. There was a proviso, "The land is mine" (Lev. xxv. 23). Yes; and the life is his too. The land was not Israel's, although given to them. And we are not our own, but to be used for God. Of the land it was said, "It shall not be sold for ever." At most it could be loaned for a short time. The faithful Israelite was a rich Israelite. In a far better sense a faithful steward is a rich steward. If God sees him faithful in the least, going on to the less, and then the more, He will say, as to the elder son who knew so little of his father's heart, "All that I have is thine." The son could not use it all, but it was for him if he wanted it for his father's service. There is not a single thing that a servant needs that the Lord does not held at his disposal. Do not look at the service and yourself, but at the service and the Master; there is no difficulty then.

The steward is only responsible to his Master: "One is your Master, even Christ." Do not be the servant of man. He tells you how to take up the responsibility, and what it shall be. Practise the habit of and saying, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" When will the living Church of God rise, and its members, as honest stewards of the manifold grace of God, say, "What wilt Thou have me to do, and it shall be done"? Is it too much of us to use the language of the servants of David, "Thy servants are willing to do whatsoever my lord the king shall command"?

In Luke xii. 42 are two characteristics which we must make our own:—"Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, etc.?" We must be faithful and wise, touching the conscience and the head. We must be faithful to do just what the Master tells us, and wise to know what He does tell us. In Psa. lxxviii. 72, we learn what God's chosen servant David did. He fed, or cared for, Israel "according to the integrity of his heart," that is, faithfully. Again, he guided them "by the skilfulness of his hands," or with wisdom. If we are to be wise, we must study the rules of our Master's household, and, if faithful, we must carry out those rules to the letter. It is a grand thing to be literal Christians. If anybody doubts the literal inspiration of God's Word, let them see it in your lives, and when they behold it carried out to the letter they will have an answer which they cannot refute, and you shall close the mouths of blasphemers. As "good stewards" we read in 1 Pet. iv. 10; that is something more than faithful or wise. We must begin with wisdom, know what is the Master's will; and go on to be faithful, carry the will into action. After putting into the service, we must put our hearts in, serving with goodwill, "heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men." In Titus i. 7 we read: "A bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God." We must show to all men that we are honestly carrying out the Master's will, giving none occasion of stumbling. We should hold the Master's gifts very loosely but firmly, so that if He shall say, "Give them back to Me," we shall be ready to yield them at once. The steward in Luke xvi. was accused of wasting his master's goods, not of purloining them or misappropriating them. In the case of the prodigal son you find that he "wasted his substance." There are, perhaps, some servants of God who steal and keep for themselves things that were given them to use for Him and his people. Others, perhaps, have not stolen, but have hoarded for themselves goods that God gives them to use in his service.

"Turning the grace of God into corruption," because not using our talents for God. Hoarding instead of scattering his grace. If you hoard it, you will keep it in cold solitude. Let us understand that they are richer and better when given out fresh and taken in fresh every day. If we are not to be purloining, neither are we to be wasting stewards. This touches fearfully the whole Church of Christ. Suppose a man, having a piece of ground, divides it up, and sows one part with various kind of seed, one over the other, puts shrubs around, and builds a hothouse over all! That is what the Church of Christ is doing. There is a barrier across one part of the world, and the other half has not heard the name of Jesus. In the planted part the seeds have choked one another, and while the regions beyond are waiting to yield a hun-

dredfold fruit on seed carefully sown. The seed is both the Word of God and the children of the kingdom. Where are you sowing? Where are you going to sow, you young men and young women? Where are you going to exercise your influence? In a district where there is a fine rich Christian church, or in one where there is a poor church? Let me commend to you the example of the apostle who would not build on another man's foundation, let alone sowing on another man's crop.

God bring us to see that, whether we are willing or not, if we are believers in Jesus Christ, we cannot help being stewards; and every steward who neglects to seek his Master's will and do it is a wasteful steward, and if not cast out altogether will be a shamefaced steward, and have nothing to say at the judgment seat of Christ.

Seaside Papers.

MUSINGS BY THE SEA.

Nay! we see but a part of God, since we gaze with a finite sight!
And yet not darkness is He, but a blinding splendour of light.

—Songs of Two Worlds—Lewis Morris.

God's way is in the sea, the Psalmist sings; and thereby the ocean is hallowed ever more. We only see one side, the side phenomenal, when we look upon the ceaseless dalliance of the tides and the fickle humours of the surface waters. The ocean's sole story is not one of interminable variations, anon soft as infant's slumber and pictured by the stars, anon dark and "gurly" and portentous; for beneath the surface billows is a far ampler volume of water that is never stirred by fiercest storm, since God upon the sea has left the imprint of his changeless step. The solitude of the sea, as well as of the desert, is hallowed ground, and every common ripple, no less than bush, is "afire with God."

God's way is in the sea; therefore, it cannot be defined by anything which human sense or reason can bring to bear in the elucidation of it. How vivid this feeling becomes as we gaze out upon the rolling deep! How can a way be made through the sea which shall be perceptible to the senses? The element of water fails to retain any impress that is made upon it. The waves of the great deep wash out in a moment or two the track of any ship that sails over its course. You may macadamise terra firma, but not the pathless sea. In our towns, ways are defined by the pavement and the houses; in the country by hedges and palings and beaten tracks. But the sea's surface is incapable of definition. You cannot partition it off or mark it out. There, then, is an element you cannot define in God's way.

How true is this of God Himself! We say of ourselves that we are finite. We have limits; there are bounds that shut us in on every side. But we say of God—He is a Spirit Infinite, having no finite limit. He is a Spirit Eternal, without any temporal definition. Hence, in the quest of God, there is always an above, always a beyond, that we cannot fathom or explain. Such knowledge is too wonderful for us. The mind, like the forced wing of an eagle, gets weary in the struggle to compass this shoreless sea.

God's way in nature is in the sea. Men of science speak of atoms, and tell us that the great globe is a massive concretion of these ultimate particles. But are they able to make God's way in nature sensibly apparent? By all their searching can they bring an atom to light? No. They can only in wonder speculate as to the character and qualities of the mysterious bricks by which the universe is built up. So we know that life is; but what life is man has no more idea than a clod.

ALL NATURE IS A PATHLESS SEA.

God's way in providence is in the sea. We cannot explicate or unravel, try as we will, the providential dealings of God. Nor does it matter what measure we take or what balance we use, whether a nation be the problem or an individual, whether we weigh God's ways with men generally or with ourselves in particular, the mysterious is ever the leading thought. Foolish man, indeed, would have God's dealings brought down and squared off in terms of his own understanding. He would rationalise everything. He would macadamise the sea of Providence. But he cannot. Though he would be as God—his measure—he falls short of it. How much better to accept the fact that his way is in the sea. Why try vainly to reduce Providence to scale?

You may see one wiser than yourself, wealthier born than yourself, more prosperous in business than yourself, one more highly thought of than yourself, &c., &c. Still, it would not become you to say to the Potter, "Why hast Thou made me thus?" Your safety consists in leaning on the Potter Himself for support; and He, who has made you such a helpless thing, as you think, will bear you up. It is not for you or me to quarrel with the Divine dealings, which we can no more fathom than a fly is able to appreciate an astronomer's calculations.

God's way is in the sea because it cannot be forecasted. What a picture of mobility and changefulness is the sea!

The sea is beautiful lulled to rest;
The pictured stars that gem its breast
Are epitaphs written upon the deep,
Over the places where loved ones sleep.

But how treacherous, even in her most placid moments, is the vast, deep sea.

Beautiful the sea
Where it spreads to the gaze its expanded blue,
Or reflects the clouds in their pomp unrolled,
And moves in its glory of green and gold.

But there is an awfulness in the beauty. Any moment the scene may change, and the peaceful expanse become corrugated with frowns.

As the sea is the creature of vicissitude, as you cannot tell because it is smooth to-day it will be smooth to-morrow, so, gauged from our standpoint, is the course of Providence. "It is the unexpected that happens," said an illustrious statesman, and who could not write an autobiography in confirmation of it? God's way is in the sea: therefore let us not build castles in the air, and dream of sensible issues that our eyes may never behold. God's way is in the sea: therefore let us live a moment at a time, and say, "One step enough for me." Let us hang loose to the seen and temporal, knowing that while the "lot is cast into the lap the disposing thereof is of the Lord.

One thought more, and we have done. God's way is in the sea, for He is Lord of the Sea. He knows how to hold the great monster in check; how to conquer the proud swellings of the sea; how to make a way through it for His redeemed.

The sea is the most ungovernable force that we know of. It is fickle to the last degree and vengeful also. But the sea has its Master, and when, as the Son of Man, He lived upon the earth, the sea knew its Lord. The stormy sea was a solid pavement for his feet; the raging waters heard his voice, and were still.

Sometimes He lets the sea go awful lengths, but He is sure to come forth at last and rebuke its fury. Sometimes the Church has reeled on the angry billows, and taken, as it appeared, a header into the abyss. But no. The Lord has come at the critical moment, and restrained the sea's raging. Rejoice, O ye children of God, because your Saviour is Lord of the sea. Though tossed about for a season on the sea of adversity, sink not in the trough of despair. By faith breast the billows. The Lord has not renounced his authority. His way is in the sea, and the sea knows it.

As with individuals, so with the nations. We may see a certain course taken that bodes disaster, destruction. But let us look up. The Lord sitteth above the floods.

Mrs. Wilkes' Rescue Work.

Writing in reference to the work in her hands at Manor Cottage, Poplar, E., Mrs. Wilkes says:—The Lord has blessed and is blessing the work in the hearts of the young women, for they show it in their lives and by their actions, and I know the fourteen years spent amongst them has not been in vain. Funds are very short and hard to get, for I have lost so many friends by death, but I am praying, working, and trusting, and I welcome help from The Christian with much pleasure. Many a home has been made, and many a woman has found Christianity to be a real thing through this effort. I sent a girl home by the Leith boat last Monday week. Her father took her back; she had fallen so low, as those poor country girls do sometimes. Sick, in rags, half starved, I took her in; her baby was born and died here. She had the most awful epileptic fits, but the skilled doctors and my dear fellow workers' tender nursing, with God's blessing, saved her, and she is safe in her Scotch home, with her heart full of praise and wonder. An expensive case, but well worth the money every way, for it was all mercy shown to a pitiful object for Christ's sake, and there have been hundreds such, and will be thousands more, if we are helped to go forward.

SAYING "YES!" TO JESUS.

Saying "Yes!" to Jesus,
All our earth-days through;
In Life's changing music
Keep this keynote true.
Sad or glad the Life-chords
As they rise and fall,
One glad "Yes!" to Jesus
Ringing through them all.
Hints of Heaven's music
Brightest hours shall bless;
Darkest hours shall gladden,
With this keynote, "Yes!"

Saying "Yes!" to Jesus,
Oh, what rest it brings
To the happy servants
Of the King of kings.
From his royal errands
Never holding back,
Going where He sends them,
—Find they any lack?
In the Master's pleasure
Quick to acquiesce;
To the Master's bidding,
Quick to answer "Yes!"

Saying "Yes!" to Jesus!
Is it hard sometimes?
Nay, not hard to trust Him!
Hark! like echoing chimes
Ringing o'er the valley
Where He bids us tread,
Comes his, "I am with thee,
Child, be not afraid."
Oh! forgive us, Master,
All our trustlessness,
Calling, Thou hast often Heard no answering "Yes!"

Is the voice of Jesus
Calling thee to-day,
Body, soul, and spirit
At his feet to lay?
Ah, the life thus yielded
Shall be found, not lost.
Answer "Yes!" to Jesus,
"Yes! at any cost."
His just claim upon thee,
Soul-redeemed, confess;
At his feet receiving Strength to answer "Yes!"

Soldiers' Home, Winchester.

Many of our readers know and value the quiet faithful Gospel work carried on by the Misses Perks at Winchester, amongst soldiers and civilians, townsmen and villagers. We have just received the annual report, from which we find that the past year has been one of much encouragement. Mr. Edwards' long illness has involved much care and anxiety, and even now it will be long ere he will be fit for active work; meanwhile the operations of the mission are carried on vigorously in every department, souls are being saved, and the young converts are learning the joy of service.

"Besides our band of converted soldiers who go abroad, we have a band of civilian converts, who do good work, carrying the Gospel into the villages. Much blessing is seen as the result in these country places, and very glad the people are to be visited by the colporteur, who calls regularly, supplying Bibles and books at a low price, and preparing the way for Gospel meetings. Our Bible Carriage, 'The Evangelist,' has again been on its mission to those in darkness and sin; not only by proclaiming the joyful message, but by circulating good, wholesome sound literature which is so much needed in a day like this, when that which is pure and true is being cast on one side. Bibles, Texts, Tracts have been brought within reach of the poorest.

"This year has been one of distinct blessing amongst the soldiers who come down to the Home, are interested in the Word of God, and very many have been led to the Saviour. Knowing what temptations meet young soldiers, we do our best to get hold of them so soon as they arrive. Numbers of young soldiers can thank God for having thus been provided with a real home, away from home."

Many interesting letters from soldiers now serving abroad are given in the report. These will stir many hearts, and commend this fruitful mission to the sympathy of many. The address is, Miss L. Perks, The Soldiers' Home, Hyde-street, Winchester.

From Dr. Griffith John.

The province of Hunan has of late been drawing a good deal of attention to itself. I send you a translation of a part of a letter written by one of our converts from Changsha, the capital of Hunan, to his brother at Hankow. On May 1st seven candidates were admitted into the church connected with the London mission at Hankow. Of these, two are Hunan men—one a native of Changsha and the other Chou Han's quondam cook.

The former left us some weeks since for Changsha. The news of his having become a Christian went before him, and created a perfect storm of excitement among his people. On his arrival at his native place the clan met, the convert was seized and dragged into the ancestral temple, where he was reviled and beaten. He was not allowed to say one word in his own defence, but simply told that in becoming a Christian he had renounced his ancestors, and must be dealt with according to the clan law. Fortunately, one of his clansmen, being possessed of a little more intelligence than the rest, interceded on his behalf, and proposed that the convert should write out a paper expressing his willingness to be expelled from his clan, and promising never to enter the ancestral temple again. This he did, and therefore renounced all claims to any and every privilege to which he is entitled as a member of the clan. At Changsha we have another Christian of many years' standing, and he writes me in glowing terms of the displayed by this young convert on this trying occasion. "By the grace of God," he adds, "a man united to God, as a branch to the vine, can rejoice and be glad even when cut off from clan and home."

On the 5th ult., a younger brother of this convert was baptized by us, and the letter above referred to was written to him by his elder brother soon after their expulsion from the clan. To me the letter is deeply interesting, and I am inclined to think that many among your readers will be glad to see the following extracts :—

"To my virtuous younger brother, Shao-ling,—Since I left Hankow for Hunan you have ever been in my thoughts. On the 21st inst. I received your letter informing me of your baptism on the 5th. Having been thus blessed of God, it is my supreme desire that we both should in all things live in harmony with the principles of the Christian religion, abandoning the false and following the true. We must diligently observe the customs of the Christian Church, attend divine services regularly, and ever pray to the true God. We must also bring our mother to the services, so that she may walk the heavenly way with us, and become partaker of Eternal Life. That the entire family should obtain the Gospel's unspeakable gift is a matter of the utmost importance. Let me exhort my worthy younger brother to take the conduct of the pastor for an example, and urge all men to resist the devil and abandon the world's evil customs. Salute my beloved brothers in Christ, Ngan and Chen. May I ask if they are keeping up the daily prayer meetings in my house?

"I, your elder brother, am now in the City of Changsha, distributing the Holy Book and preaching the Gospel. In the streets there are many who blaspheme and revile us. Moreover, the people of Changsha, both inside and outside the city walls, all know that you and I have joined the Christian Church. The other day one of our clansmen had a consultation with some of the baser members of the clan in regard to us. They dragged me into the ancestral temple, where they beat me, reviled me, and wanted to kill me, because I had become a Christian. I was left without an alternative but to write out a paper expressing my willingness to be CAST OUT OF THE CLAN.

You and I, together with our children and grandchildren, can never again enter the ancestral temple. As for me, I am quite willing that it should be so. Not only do I not regret the step I have taken; my joy is greatly increased, my heart is full of gladness. Now that you, my younger brother, have joined the Church, you will not be displeased with me on account of what I have done. . . Though our clansmen, together with our relations and friends in Changsha, despise us, and though many hate us and revile us, it is for us to manifest patience, and avoid all wrangling and disputings. Being disciples of Jesus we must carry the Cross. Consider the Apostle Paul. He was at one time a persecutor of the Church, and afterwards he was called upon to endure persecution. Paul endured joyfully the bitterest trials. Shall you and I, then, not willingly endure this trifling persecution?

"My worthy younger brother, don't be anxious. You and I, having received the grace of God, and become possessed of the truth, have God Himself for our ancestor; the Gospel Hall is our ancestral temple; the pastors, the evangelists, and the Christians, and are clansmen. I exhort my worthy younger brother to banish all double-mindedness, to walk straight ahead, and not go back a single step. Keep close to the pastors, the evangelists, and the members of the Church generally. Have constant fellowship with them. This is a matter of great importance. . . .

"I, your elder brother, hold a prayer meeting in the City of Changsha every day at 7 p.m. A few friends join me, among whom are Chang Sung-lin, Chai Chau-tsung, Wang Shih-shun, Kung Kai-nan, and Teng Sung-lin, the eldest son of the Teng Mou-hua firm. These five come regularly to the services. They have mastered the Christian Catechism, and have a clear knowledge of the truth. They have all made up their minds to come to Hankow, and ask for baptism. The more I think about it, the more I feel that the holy religion of Jesus must prosper, and that the Church must grow day by day. Let us on no account be ashamed to exhort men. If we do our duty

MULTITUDES MUST COME IN.

"I have been making inquiries about Chou Han's affairs. I learn that the Imperial edict degrading him has arrived at Changsha. He himself is living outside the south gate, but keeps very much to himself. I hear also that he is in a very repentant mood. The Hunan people have lost all faith in him, and are very angry with him. As to the Benevolent Hall (the workshop of the Chou Han clique), that has been officially closed. I shall write out a copy of the Imperial edict and bring it with me to Hankow, so that the pastors and all the brethren may see the document. Greetings to the pastors, preachers, and all the brethren. May the peace of the Triune God be with all."

Such is the letter, and there is much in it to encourage our hearts.

(1) A great change has taken place in Hunan. Chou Han has been degraded, the publishing firms have been closed, the Benevolent Hall (the home and centre of the anti-foreign movement) has been disgraced, and the foul stream of anti-Christian prints and literature has been dried up at its very source. Had this young Christian made his appearance at Changsha last year, he would probably have been murdered. It would have been impossible for him to go about the streets of the city distributing Christian books and exhorting the people to believe in Christ.

(2) There is something pathetic in our brother's description of his expulsion from the clan, and the blessedness of his present position as a member of the family of the Firstborn. The clan influence in China is very great, and the clan privileges in many cases are very considerable. A man united to his clan is strong, but separated from it he is necessarily weak, and it is regarded as a great disgrace to anyone to be cut off. You are told sometimes that there are no true Christians among the Chinese converts, and that if the missionary were withdrawn the work would come to a speedy end. I would call the attention of all who think and speak in this way to the story of this man's self-sacrifice and patient endurance. He has only just entered on the Christian course, and it remains to be seen how he will run. But he has made a good start, and proved himself to be possessed of the martyr's spirit. There are many like-minded men among our converts who, we feel sure, would stand the severest test should the day of trial come.

(3) It is inspiring to read of the young convert holding a daily prayer meeting in the City of Changsha, that stronghold of Satan, and of his being joined by the eldest son of the owner of one of the publishing establishments employed by Chou Han in his anti-Christian campaign. In this work he is aided by another Christian brother, who has been a member of our church for many years, and who has been residing at Changsha during all these troublous times. At one time he was reported to Chou Han, and a search was made for him. He, however, clung to the place, and

NEVER DENIED THE FAITH.

His letters to me during the past twelve months I have found deeply interesting and of great value. The spirit of prayer on behalf of Hunan, which pervades the native church at Hankow, is largely to be ascribed to the letters of this brother and the esteem in which he is held.

(4) It is instructive to notice how completely both the people and the scholars of China are under the control of the Central Government. We were told last year that the riots were to be ascribed to an uprising of the masses of the people against the missionary and his work. We know now that the infernal machine was set agoing by a handful of scholars and expectant officials in the City of Changsha, with the full cognizance and sympathy of the local magistrates, both higher and lower. There can be no doubt whatever as to the truth of this statement. No sooner, however, did Peking take the matter in hand than Chou Han and his clique collapsed, and we now learn that the people who had been duped by these influential men, instead of sympathising with them in their downfall, are treating them with the suspicion and contempt which they deserve. This is exactly what might have been expected, and what some of us predicted would take place. Had Peking not interfered, the riots would have gone on, and had not the Foreign Powers spoken out in accents clear and strong, Peking would not have moved an inch. Everything in China depends upon the attitude of the Government. In this case the Government has shown itself all-powerful. The pity is that it did not move sooner, and that its action has not been spontaneous.

Still, we have much to be thankful for. There has been a great clearing of the atmosphere all around, and our present outlook is far brighter than it was some time ago. Our emptied schools are full again, the patients are coming back to the hospitals, and the accessions to our Church membership remind us of the years before the riots. I am ever praying for the opening of Hunan and the conversion of our Changsha enemies. Will you and your readers join me in this prayer?

Some months ago I called attention to the great loss which the Central China Religious Tract Society had sustained by fire. Not a few of your readers have sent in valuable aid in response to my appeal. I would avail myself of this opportunity to thank them most heartily, one and all.

I am,

Yours faithfully,

Hankow, July 1, 1892. GRIFFITH JOHN.

MISSION WORK IN NATAL.

REV. DAVID RUSSELL, of Pietermaritzburg, is now in this country pleading for help in the evangelisation of Natal. He and Rev. G. J. Pugh are labouring amongst the European colonists, the Dutch-speaking natives, and the Zulus. The Congregational Church at Pietermaritzburg began this aggressive missionary work amongst the masses around some eight years ago. It has been much blessed, but now the need for more helpers has become very pressing.

The only limit to the indefinite extension of this great work is the lack of workers and of funds to supplement the money always generously contributed by the people themselves.

For the sum of £100 a young man could be equipped, sent out to Natal, and settled as a missionary to the colonists and natives, and such a station would in a short time become self-supporting.

A home for Zulu converts in Pietermaritzburg is greatly needed to save these young disciples from contamination by association with their heathen fellow-countrymen. For this a good building is desirable. A sum of £1,000 would go a long way toward the erection of such a home, whilst something like £100 a year would maintain its useful work.

Mrs. M. S. Osborn-Howe writes as follows:—"Mr. Russell's great desire is the evangelisation of Natal and the native territories, and we earnestly hope he may have the sympathy and interest of the Lord's people at home. In our own work we have had his warm support and sympathy, and the help of his experience."

Communications should be addressed D. Russell, pastor Congregational Church, Pietermaritzburg, Natal; care of Rev. W. S. H. Fielden, Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street, London, E.C.

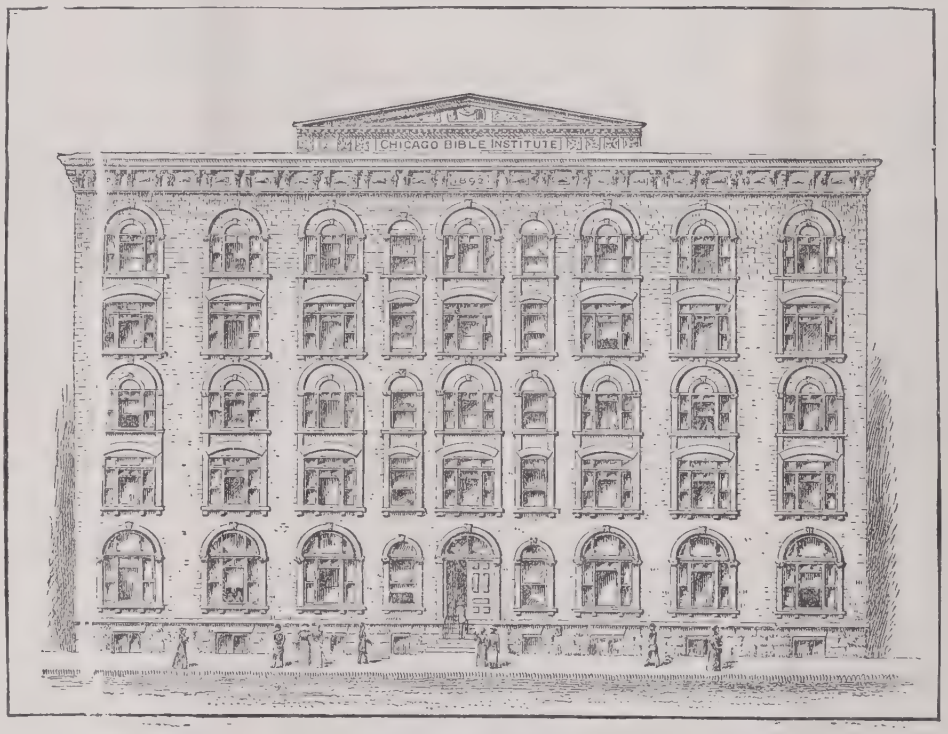
Chicago Bible Institute.

The value of this institution is being increasingly felt by Mr. Moody and his fellow-workers in that department. The great and pressing need of the foreign fields is men and women not only consecrated in heart, but equipped for efficient service by special study and by a home apprenticeship. The Bible Institute provides this training. It is now full to overflowing, and Mr. Moody is having two additional stories added to the height of the building. The students in it represent nineteen different nationalities preparing for work in every part of the world. We append some interesting notes lately received from one of the lady workers :—

Major Whittle was at the Institute throughout June and the earlier part of July, lecturing on the Epistle to the Romans. He brought with him the Princeton College quartette, which is led by the son of the late Mr. P. P. Bliss, and "with their help" held a series of meetings in the various churches, spending one week in each of the three divisions of the city. Only a single meeting was held in each church visited. A chorus choir of twenty-five voices, composed of students from the Institute, and led by Mr. H. H. McGranahan, its musical director, sang the Gospel at these meetings. Duets were sung by Miss Whittle and Prof. McGranahan. Miss Whittle has been especially blessed in reaching society young ladies, and her assistance in the meetings was very valuable.

Efforts were directed toward arousing the churches to more activity, and particularly with reference to the World's Fair. One Lord's day morning the service was held in the First Congregational Church, Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D.D. pastor, the old church home of Major Whittle and Mr. Bliss. Here many of Mr. Bliss's hymns were sung for the first time, and tears came to the eyes of many old friends as they heard Mrs. Bliss's arrangement of "Rock of Ages" sung by Paul Bliss and his friends.

The summer tent campaign has begun. Three Gospel tents, the largest accommodating 1,800 people, are holding nightly audiences gathered from the slums. Evangelist M. B. Williams, who has been greatly blessed in the South, is in charge of one. Another is in the hands of Mr. F. N. Smiley, an evangelist of English birth who has been very successful in Pennsylvania, and who came to the Institute to study its methods and that he and his wife might study music. He had no sooner arrived than he was put in charge of a tent.



A third tent is in a neighbourhood where two years ago it was said that any man who took a tent there ran the risk of being killed; but the meetings are for the most part very orderly, though the man in charge is a student of limited experience in such work. Children's meetings are held four afternoons in the week, at which hundreds of children are in attendance. There are many conversions among them, as well as in the evening meetings, and it is manifest that the Lord is blessing the tents.

Major Whittle has a home in the suburbs, and back of it is the United States Marine Hospital. For years he has been interested in this hospital, and, feeling anxious to give the old sailors an opportunity to hear the Gospel, he has erected a tent on his grounds and holds meetings there, assisted by helpers from the Institute.

The Superintendent, Mr. Torrey, has been attending two conventions, where he held daily classes for Bible study. The first was in Kentucky, and was composed of the southern Y.M.C.A. secretaries and students from the various colleges. The second was a Chautauqua Convention in Nebraska, and there Mr. Torrey gave a series of lectures on Bible doctrines and conducted the "Ministers' Institute."

It has been found necessary to enlarge the principal building of the Institute, and two new stories are being added. This will give accommodation for one hundred and eighty men. The engraving represents the Institute with the addition of the two new stories.

Several students have lately come from Great Britain.

TRACT WORK IN CENTRAL CHINA.

I am sure the readers of The Christian who take an interest in Tract work in China would like to hear of God's blessing upon it. The following letter, dated May 2nd, and just received from Mr. Lutley, of the China Inland Mission, will be read with much interest :—

"I cannot too highly value the work that is being done by the Central China Tract Society. Personally I am much indebted for the great help many of these tracts have been in spreading a knowledge of the truth throughout this district. One great good resulting is a general enlightenment of the Chinese mind on what we really teach, preparing in many cases hearts to give the Gospel an unprejudiced hearing when the missionary comes. The following cases which lately came before my notice while itinerating should encourage us to go forward.

"Early in November we were at Han-cheng Hsien in Shen-si, perhaps the most unfriendly city near here. While on the street, with the usual crowd around, a respectable man came up and began carefully looking through the books. Someone in the crowd said, "What are you looking at those books for? Don't you know that they are all drugged, and that as soon as you look at them you become duped?" The man replied, "If you are afraid of these books, I am not," and then proceeded to tell that he had brought a Christian book some two years ago, and found it to be good, and was anxious to know and understand more of the doctrine it contained, and concluded by saying, "Later on you will all wish to understand it, but it may then be too late."

"About a fortnight later we were in Chen-Ch'ang Hsien, where we only stayed one night, but that evening I had a long conversation with an old man, who told me that some three years previously a missionary passed through the district selling books, and a friend of his had obtained one; his friend was good enough to let him have a reading of it. He could not remember very much of it, but one thought stuck to him. He said: 'Did not Jesus give his life for the sins of all men?' He was very glad to get some more books.

"A few days later we were at a small town by the Yellow River, and while on the street selling books and speaking to the people, to our equal surprise and delight a well-dressed man joined in and commenced telling the crowd about God, and Jesus, the Son of God. Upon inquiry we learned that he obtained his knowledge from a tract which he had bought two years previously when on a visit to Ni-Ch'uan, a neighbouring city. Thus a knowledge of the Gospel which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth is being spread abroad.

"A week or so later we attended a fair in Ho-tsin, Shen-si, where we disposed of between three and four thousand books and tracts. During our stay in that town a man from a neighbouring village looked us up and introduced himself by saying that about two and a-half years before he had been staying for a short time at Kih-cheo and had there bought a copy of John's gospel from me, but finding much of it that he could not understand, he used to call frequently upon a Mr. Chang, a native Christian, for explanation of difficult passages. His stay at Kih-cheo was soon at an end, and he had to return to his home near Ho-tsin, but continued constantly reading John's gospel, and his knowledge of its contents proved that he had read it well. There and then he asked for a copy of the gospel that he might turn up passages he could not understand and have them explained. To show the difficulties in the way of a Chinaman understanding the Bible without some help, I will mention one thing that had been puzzling and troubling him. It was, why did the Pharisees put the man that was born blind out of the church [temple] because he spoke in favour of Jesus? It never entered his mind that the church here did not refer to the Christian Church. He had for some time given up idolatry, and his bright happy face as he eagerly told us how the Lord had enabled him to give up opium smoking, to which he had formerly been a slave, without the use of medicine, gave us every reason to believe that he was really born of God. He remarked that one verse of the Gospel was sufficient for him to digest in one day, and his general simplicity and faith caused us much joy. Since seeing him I have heard from others that he has been boldly witnessing for the Gospel. During a recent fair he got a table placed in a convenient place, on which he spread his little stock of Christian books, and invited the people to read them, he himself preaching the Gospel to crowds who gathered around him. He has been the means of leading at least one to a knowledge of the truth.

"Let us sow beside all waters and sow in faith, for we know not which shall prosper, this or that, or whether they shall both alike be good."

We are constantly being encouraged by similarly cheering news from different parts of the empire, and thus strengthened by tokens of God's blessing upon our work, and accounts of souls being saved, we faint not nor get weary in our work of faith.

I take this opportunity of thanking the readers of The Christian who kindly help us by prayer and gifts. Our subscription list, towards making good our loss by fire at the beginning of the year, has been very satisfactory. We have since the fire been able to rent better and safer premises on the foreign concession.

Tract work is a growing work in China. It is an important factor in opening the country to the Gospel, as the above letter shows; but the more the country is opened and missionaries are able to travel and settle, the greater is the demand for books and tracts.

THE PRINCE OF PREACHERS.*

MR. SPURGEON BECOMES POPULAR.

Mr. Spurgeon's case presents an instance of the exceptional mode of Divine preferment. While a mere youth, he is thrust into the full blaze of metropolitan popularity. To cite his genius or his talents is no explanation of this result, from the side of God, whatever it may be from the side of man. There must have been a Divine reason underlying this swift and signal elevation—a reason that must lie, as it seems to us, mainly in him who was the subject of it. For, after all, the Father is ever pruning his vine. He does not give to any of his children a position of great relative use, save as a sequel to his own work within.

To what, then, was this disciple's swift and decisive promotion due? We infer it was due to this fact—that there was nothing in him necessitating delay. He could be placed in the seat of honour, for he had the spiritual grounding requisite. He could serve the relative end, for the basis of it had been laid in his own heart. The light was there; it needed but a stand adequate to its power of illumination. And specially should be instanced this point—that he had the true Christian foil in respect of honour, namely, humility.

It is not needful to detail all the circumstances concerned in the promotion of the young pastor of Waterbeach. Happy and content with his lot, and on the swim of success in his lowly sphere, the tide, unknown to him, is already at the flood which is to bear him to the shores of distinction. The pastorate of New Park Street Baptist Church, Southwark, was then vacant. Apart from the larger sphere provided, there was nothing in the condition of the church in question of a nature to tempt even a village pastor. Numbers of the sheep were scattered, the congregation thinned, the once prosperous cause in a state of depletion. But the one thing needful in the circumstances was there—indefinite scope. Hither then he comes, elected, after careful trial, to the arduous post of pastor, acknowledging the high honour conferred upon him as called to follow in the train of illustrious predecessors, craving indulgence on the score of inexperience and youth, and seeking through their prayers to enter upon his office with a deep sense of the responsibility of the trust.

The success was immediate and decisive. Soon the chapel, which had not been one-fourth filled, became crowded. Public interest continued to grow. Chapel-enlargement became necessary; and the sitting accommodation was raised from twelve hundred to eighteen hundred. But the pressure from without had more than correspondingly risen. The cry is, Still they come.

Mr. Spurgeon is now at the zenith of his popularity. The masses are entranced; the classes are captivated; while—what is better still—by the great drag-net of Gospel testimony, fish of all kinds are brought to the shore. The facts constitute a chapter in the romance of history. One marvels that he could stand the strain and excitement of such a rapid and sensational promotion. But He who thrust him forth stood by him. In grace he exceeded his years. Amid the buzz of expectation and the sea of faces upturned to greet him as he entered the great edifice, he kept so in touch with his own weakness as to feel beneath him the everlasting arms. And this is a feature common to those whom God delights to honour. He communicates confidence, and, at the same time, weds it to a state of mind almost bordering on collapse. The most powerful sermons that have ever been preached have been heralded "by weakness and fear and much trembling."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.—A young people's Society of Christian Endeavour Conference was held on Saturday, August 6, in the Congregational Church, Allerton, near Bradford, in order to form a union for the district. An enthusiastic meeting was held, presided over by Mr. White. Mrs. Gaunt, of Laister Dyke, delivered an address on "Power for Service," giving wise and Christian counsel to those who, in joining the various societies, were for a while eager to render service, but gradually lapsed into lethargy or indifference. She lovingly reminded her young hearers that God needed Christian endeavourers to be whole-hearted, loyal, and true, that He might use them as vessels unto honour, and that they might realise the joy and happiness of being faithful in the King's service.

MISS R. KRIKORIAN.

Miss R. Krikorian, of whose features some idea may be gathered from the picture which we give, is an Armenian, the daughter of Rev. P. Krikorian, of Aintab, Turkey in Asia. Her father was one of the first to receive the Gospel message when preached in Armenia about fifty years ago by American missionaries. In spite of great persecution he has stood fast in the faith and been an earnest preacher for some forty-five years. In Aintab he has a congregation of about two thousand very poor people. In a communication to us Miss Krikorian says:—

"Being a devoted man of God, my father brought the children of his own family to the light of the Gospel he loves so well. Some of my brothers, following his example, have done and are now doing splendid work in Constantinople, Smyrna, Oorfa (or, as it is called in the Bible, 'Ur,' Gen. xv. 7), Antioch, Marash, and other towns in Turkey in Asia. I, his ninth child, have been wonderfully blest in God's work at home. After having been trained in our National Schools and in the American Seminary, I was sent out to a village called Beylan, near Alexandria, to teach the children and preach the Gospel to the women. I was only sixteen years of age, but the Spirit of God worked through such humble instrumentality, and many women and children were brought to a saving knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ during the ten months I was there.

"On my return home I was sent to Constantinople for further training, which would enable me to be of more efficient assistance to Miss Pierce in the Seminary, where I taught for four years. The wife of the late Dr. Trowbridge established

MISS R. KRIKORIAN.

'district meetings' among the Gregorians, my native people, and for more than a year I directed this work, while still teaching in the Seminary, conducting two 'beggar schools' which I had started, and presiding over the 'Young Women's Christian Association.' My health unfortunately did not stand the heavy strain, so I gave up the teaching in the Seminary, and devoted my whole time to the directing, etc.

"We had over 900 women in our district meetings every week listening to the Word of God. Very many were converted, and some left their Gregorian churches. Such a glorious progress made the priests very jealous of us, and we were subjected to persecution, especially myself, who was looked upon as being the leader. Yet in spite of all opposition, the work was manifestly blest. The Lord sent us overflowing mercies through the wonderful preaching of Rev. Harootune J. Denanian, an earnest man of God, trained in our Central Turkey College, a native of Tarsus and Superintendent of 'The St. Paul's Institution' there. The loud and bitter cries of the thousands of converted sinners were heard in many towns and villages. Some missionaries and others came to Aintab to witness the wonderful blessing with us. We glorified our great God when we saw even the sick palsied Gregorian women, by whose bedsides we had formerly many prayer meetings, brought to our churches on their stretchers, and carried home joyous in the knowledge that, through the Blood of the Lamb, their sins that were many were all forgiven.

"When I saw all this, I wondered if God might not be pleased to use me for even greater things if I were only willing. It was then that the desire for medical knowledge came to me forcibly. I knew that by an acquaintance with a certain department of medicine I would be able to reach the Mohammedan women. I expressed my earnest wish to Mrs. Shepard, M.D., of the American Mission. She was delighted, and did her best for me. On September 23, 1891, I was admitted to the Training Home of Dr. and Mrs. Grattan Guinness, Harley House, Bow. There, and with the great help of dear Mrs. Guinness, whom I thank with all my heart, I attained my aim, finished my greatly desired training, passed my examinations, and obtained my obstetrical diploma, which will be of the utmost value in my mission work in my native land.

"And now how pleasant it is for me to see the days of my preparation come to an end under God's great and good Providence, and the blessed days of service open before me! Midwifery is such an important and pressing need for Turkey. While this is very true about my country, yet no English man or woman could imagine what an opposition and prejudice there is in Asia against any young lady undertaking to prepare herself for such a thing. But, by God's help, I have been the very first one who did ever dare to undertake it! The women of the Turkish harems endure untold agonies rather than submit to be attended by a medical man at such a time.

"I propose to train the native young ladies scientifically in midwifery, most of whom will come no doubt from our Seminary, where we generally receive lady students from any towns or villages in Syria, Armenia, Cilicia, etc. These ladies, when trained, will practise midwifery or start little Zenana medical missions amongst their own people, and so, with God's blessing, we hope to help to spread his name and teach his love through the whole country.

"Cannot the followers of Him who went about doing good, help to equip me for my longed-for future work in the suffering and benighted land where I was born?"

Contributions will be kindly received by Mr. J. McDonald, Y.M.C.A., Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

KASHMIR MEDICAL MISSION.

Dr. Arthur Neve writes with reference to the cholera:—"Only a few cases had occurred at Kashmir at first, but later on the increase in numbers was very great. The Resident went off to Gulmary, and everybody followed as fast as coolies and ponies could be obtained. Here we quietly settled down to fight the epidemic with all the means available. As far as the European quarters were concerned this was comparatively easy, but the city, embedded in the filth of ages, and with the habits and prejudices of the people fostering the spread of the disease, has suffered frightfully. The deaths rapidly increased from five or ten a day to three hundred.

"Dr. Thomas, the native doctor, began visiting in the eastern side of the city, while I took charge of the right bank of the river down to the second bridge, a district of about 10,000 people. Nothing could be done in the way of sanitation, and but little in the way of drugs, for the cases were very rarely seen during the first two or three hours when treatment is so valuable. I get up very early so as to avoid the heat, and ride down to the bazaar, and then see the new patients in the neighbourhood. The people all crowd round the unfortunate patient; a well-known man will have twenty or thirty neighbours sitting round him.

"There is much scepticism about drugs, which a woman expressed yesterday when asked if she wanted any medicine for her husband, and she said, "There is no medicine, for the disease is 'tamba tagsir,'" which means confession and repentance. I only wish they would give these a good trial, but at present it is a sheer superstition. At first the people were rather doubtful about the house-to-house visitation, but when it was found to be simply for the purpose of treatment, the ignorant native herbalists did their utmost to bring discredit on our work, notwithstanding a good many were anxious to have help. In many cases one can do but little, in others one can turn the scale, and although only a few lives may have been saved, I think the moral effect of our work is important.

"The people well know the apathetic selfishness of their co-religionists, and they see the missionaries' ladies, as well as others, going about trying to relieve their suffering.

"On June 10, Dr. Thomas died after a brief illness brought on by the strain of work, and was buried the next morning. Some of the villages are full of cholera. Something may be done to prevent its spreading. Surgeon-Colonel Harvey has been sent to inquire specially into the epidemic. He will move into our house this afternoon and stay there."

The Railway Mission greatly needs workers to go abroad and work amongst railway men, who in most cases are shut off from ordinary evangelistic efforts. There are many stations at which the door is widely open, but there are no workers. Information may be had of the Secretary of the Railway Mission, 18, New Bridge-street, London, E.C.

ROME IN CHINA.

As it is a mistake to think that the unspiritual man at home will make a spiritual missionary abroad, so is it a mistake to think that the Romish missionary in China is so affected by his surroundings as to preach the simple Gospel of Jesus Christ. Whatever one might hope, quite the contrary, so far as I have seen in China, is the case; rather is Roman Catholicism darkened by its contact with heathendom. As the leopard cannot change its spots, neither can the harlot Church be the means of spreading a pure Gospel.

The Romanists are aggressive here as everywhere, but earnestness and energy are no gauge of truth, though in these days they often pass for it. The Fuh Kien Mission alone could prove many instances of their zeal in proselytizing. Any one interested in this subject would do well to read Archdeacon Wolfe's annual letter in the C.M.S. Intelligencer for May of this year, in which he shows what Roman Catholicism really is in China. I quote one paragraph:—

"I only wish our English people at home who seem so eager to rush into the foul embrace of the Papacy could but see the superstitious and idolatrous practices of the priests and their converts here, where no restraining influence is brought to bear upon them, and where they are not afraid of exposure by the light of Protestant truth. I make bold to say their eyes would be opened to the true nature of Romanism, and they would not be so ready, as so many seem to be at present, to embrace so unscriptural a system."

The Romanists have just now arrived at Yeu Ping Fu, already occupied by the Episcopal Methodists and ourselves for years. Here the native priest rides about in a chair with four bearers, and adopts the style of a mandarin. But I want to illustrate what I have said principally by what I have lately seen in the north-west of this province and in central Kiang-si. A few extracts from my journal will best do this.

"Stayed the night at a Romanist's inn; the signs of his religion were very prominent—crucifix, pictures, etc. After supper I had a most interesting talk with the landlord. He knew more about Christianity than most Romanists I have met, but seems very far from settled in his faith. I read to him John iii. 16, and had a little talk with him about it. He rather stuck out about the spiritual power of their priests to forgive sins, and actually gave as an instance of this power their influence in the yamen (the magistrate's court). Can it be that they teach their people this power comes through spiritual sources?

"I noticed a large board outside the inn, giving notice that he retailed foreign 'smoke,' viz., opium. Thank God! no member of

as the Protestants are called, so far leaves his Master's principles as to sell this poison to his fellow mortals. I mean in the infant Church of China. I fear this is far from being true of many a member of Christian Churches in our own country. They are not so consistent. Shame on them! In the morning my friend showed me his prayer book, in which the name of Mary occurred frequently, but that of Jesus seldom.

"By the side of a large wooden cross stood two foreign wine bottles, which I was told contained holy water which he had brought home on return from a pilgrimage. One remark of his struck me painfully. He said, 'There are three whom we Romanists think it important to worship—Jesus, Joseph, and Mary.' Of the Father and Spirit they seem to know almost nothing. Joseph seems to be almost a deity in their eyes.

"At Kwang-Tseh I soon saw traces of Romanism. Some respectable-looking young fellows dropped the gospels, muttering 'the crooked doctrine,' and one, 'heresy.' The saddest thing I saw in this way was a number of women in a shop, as I thought telling Buddhist beads; but on close inspection I found at the bottom of the elaborate beads were embroidered crosses, and figures of the virgin. How can the poor heathen see anything between this and idolatory?

"In Kieu Chang Fu I met some Romanists; they have a fine church and several foreign priests seven or eight miles off. We were told significantly that the people would not have them in the city. The bustling city of Fu Chin Fu is the headquarters of Roman Catholicism in Kiang-si. Here they claim over 10,000 converts, and their little red calendars of festivals, fasts, etc., were to be seen in many shops and houses. Last year the notorious Ko Lau Huei men from Hunan incited people to burn down their chapel, and a chapel some miles lower down was actually destroyed.

"The substantial stone court that forms the entrance to their buildings has, in consequence of last year's trouble, been changed into a small military yamen. This yamen-like entrance, together with weapons and a number of soldiers, gave the place more the appearance of a fort than a chapel. A Romanist volunteered to explain Christianity to a man who had come in to see me; but when he carefully explained that Heaven worshipped by the Chinese was really exactly the same as Heaven's Lord (the R.C. name for God) I had to stop him.

"He and several others said, 'Why don't you Protestants come here? You could easily get a house, and many would come to hear.' Why don't we? The answer must come from Christian England. Why is central Kiang-si so largely left in darkness, or with a

GLIMMERING TWILIGHT SHED FROM ROMANISM.

How could I tell them the love of Christ was so cold in England that only a few comparatively could be warmed enough to exchange snug homes and family circles for Chinese inns and such provision as an alien land, not over comfortable, can provide, but withal the happiest in the joy of doing the Master's will? How much longer will Christians allow only a false glare to be where the true light ought to shine.

"On leaving Fu Chin I passed a small wayside cottage from whose owner I received a pressing invitation to go in and drink tea. When his wife joined in the warm invitation I went, but what was my horror, after taking a seat, to find that both man and wife dropped on their knees and began worshipping me. I begged them to stop, assuring them I was a man. I soon saw from their pictures, etc., they were Roman Catholics! They took me for 'a holy father,' as they call their priests, and I had to assure them repeatedly that I was not."

The Romanists in China do not, at least in this province, teach Sunday observance, nor indeed is weekly assembly for worship enjoined. Only on the four great Sundays in the year is attendance compulsory. Mariolatry reaches a point never, I think, attained in the home lands. Archdeacon Wolfe told me the other day that in Hok-Chiang he actually knew of an instance in which the sedan chair belonging to the neighbouring idol temple, and used for bearing the village idol, had been borrowed to carry the figure of the Virgin on some high festival in her honour. In Nang Wa, as doubtless also in other places, there is a large idol temple, bearing on its front the characters meaning "Upper Heaven's Holy Mother;" the characters, Shinmu, meaning Holy Mother, are always used by Roman Catholics as the title for Mary. Is it any wonder that the heathen think the Roman Catholic terms imply but a new set of foreign idols?

In some districts the Roman Catholics are very antagonistic to the Christians, especially in Hok Chiang, and the spirit that burnt the martyrs in other lands is often observable. In Shanton, where the American Board Missions have a most successful work, this doomed Church is doing its best to draw converts from the simplicity of their faith, but, thank God! so far, with little or no success.

Probably, most will admit that among the early Romanist missionaries to China there were some really holy men, and among their successors surely there must be some who have the love of God in their hearts, though strangely misled as it seems to us. And certainly, in their zeal, adaptation to native ideas in dress, etc., as well as their thorough work at the language, they have taught Protestant missionaries valuable lessons. Notwithstanding all this, we must not forget that much of their teaching is a snare of the devil to catch unwary souls. Their presence is therefore no excuse for less effort from the Protestant Churches, but rather a challenge to set up the true light of the simple Gospel.

Let us earnestly pray for the individuals in this miserable Church, who have never known a pure light, if we cannot pray for the Church as a whole, resting, as we believe it does, under the ban of Jehovah. And let us hasten to come to the help of the Lord against the mighty in these dark places of heathenism.

AN ISLAND DESTROYED.

With reference to the appalling disaster (unparalleled since that of Krakatoa) which has been announced as having visited Sangi in the West Indies, we have the following from the pen of one who has lately returned from a visit to that island:—

The island of Celebes, belonging to the Dutch, is situated about 15.20 degrees east from Singapore. The northern part of this island is a narrow peninsula called the Mirrahasa, a most charming mountainous country on the equator. Of the 145,000 inhabitants almost 125,000 are Protestant Christians belonging to the Dutch Reformed Church. Not a village which has not got its little chapel. Only lately I came back from a trip through the Dutch colonies. I spent a very happy time amongst those peaceful people of which so very many live in the full assurance of the forgiveness of their sins. Also quite close to this peninsula on the volcanic Sangi islands missionary work is increasing, although it has met with great difficulties. The native Christians already amount to upwards of 20,000. But the last mails have brought us very sad news from that field. It has also been reported in the English papers that the largest of these islands has been destroyed by a volcanic eruption. About 2,000 people have been killed. The number of them that are wounded is not known yet.

Through the mercy of God the missionaries have been saved, hiding themselves behind a hill-range.

But of all the native pupils who were out in the field not one is left. The misery and the sufferings of the people are too awful to describe. Hundreds were burnt to death or buried alive in the hot ashes. A few hours were sufficient to change this beautiful green island into an awful desert. Famine-stricken missionaries and natives look out in vain for their houses and rice-fields, and cocoanut and spice gardens. How dark are often the ways of the Lord with the nations! We can only pray that such awful judgments will open the hearts of many Sangi heathen, and lead them to the feet of Him who also died for their sins.

Advertisements in the Dutch papers ask for immediate assistance. Much is wanted if only to prevent a famine. Already every animal which survived the calamity has been eaten. And when we preach to the heathen to love their neighbours, the Christian Church at large must show on such occasions what that love can do. Surely many English Christians will only be anxious to help here. Communications should be addressed to A. Bierens de Haan, 605, Keisersgracht, Amsterdam.

Mohammedans in Calcutta.

Allow me to bring before your readers the urgent claims of the Mohammedans in and around Calcutta, with a special desire to awaken and extend sympathy on their behalf in connection with the important work amongst them of Rev. Jani Alli, M.A. (Corpus Christi Coll., Cambridge). Many who first learned to know and love him when he was passing through our University already know that he is a convert from Mohammedanism, and received his early Christian training in the High School at Masulipatam from Rev. Robert Noble. It is only in comparatively recent years that the opportunities for work amongst Mohammedans have been so encouraging; doors are widely open now, and the work at Matyaburj (Calcutta) especially claims immediate help, a school having been opened there in immediate proximity to the palace of the late King of Oudh. To this school many of his family and retainers resort, and the prizes were on the last occasion distributed (at the earnest request of a favourite wife of the late King) within the very walls of the palace. This widowed queen is in constant communication with Mr. Jani Alli, and his personal influence has been the means of admitting within the palace the lady missionaries of the "Church of England Zenana Society," for which admittance much prayer had gone up for many years. Surely the field awaits the reapers! The little school, begun with two boys, now numbers 153, and the building in which it meets may at any moment be withheld. The C.M.S. have sanctioned the erection of asuitable schoolhouse, for which £1,200 will be needed to be raised in England. Rev. Jani Alli is now in this country, working hard to raise this money. He hopes to return in November. His present address is, Rev. Jani Alli, Park House, Park-place-villas, London, W.

OUR MARKED TESTAMENTS.

A few weeks ago some children at Brighton sent eighteen beautifully marked Testaments to Miss Tuck, of our Mission.

These Testaments were the first response to the following "Hint to Helpers" in our last year's report:—

"We quote the following from Our Own Gazette.

"'A.B.C.—We would suggest that you invested some of the proceeds of your "Love-Bag" in some penny Testaments, and that on Sunday afternoons be marked with red ink about 100 of the most striking Gospel passages, such as John iii. 16, Matt. xi. 28. These marked Testaments are much appreciated.' Testaments marked as here suggested would be of much use among the hundreds of English speaking Bengalis in our district. We shall be glad to distribute as many as friends can send us."

Berhampur is the "capital" of the Murshidabad district in Bengal. In this district there 1,125,000 Hindus and Mohammedans, and only one missionary society at work. Our missionary force consists of two ladies, and my wife and myself at Berhampur, and two ladies at Jeagunge, a large town fourteen miles away. With us work a band of some twenty Bengali Christians—preachers, teachers, zenana visitors, and Bible women. Through our district flows for seventy miles a branch of the Ganges. Up and down this river we itinerate, preaching at the towns and villages on its banks. But just now I want to tell you what became of six of the marked Testaments from Brighton. These Miss Tuck gave me to distribute.

As we are so few missionaries in the district, we have to use every possible means to make Christ known. At the beginning of July I began distributing a four-page English paper called the Evangelist. This is specially edited by Rev. R. Wright Hay, of the Baptist Mission, Dacca, for educated Bengalis. We distributed this paper among the English-speaking Government servants, lawyers, and students in Berhampur itself, and also sent copies of it to every English school in the district. (There are over 2,000 boys studying English in this district.) On the Evangelist was a notice saying that it would be sent free monthly to any person who sent me his name and address. Soon names of schoolboys began to come in on postcards.

When Miss Tuck gave me the six marked Testaments, I thought, "What shall I do with them?" Finally, I decided to sent them to the first six boys who had written for the Evangelist. With the Testaments I sent a note saying how I came to send them. Four of the boys have already written to thank me, and perhaps you would like to see a copy of their letters. This will help you to realise how English is becoming the language of the upper schoolboys of India. I copy the letters as they were written—mistakes and all—only leaving out the boys' names and addresses (for they themselves might object):—

"Dear Sir,—I am glad to thank you for your kind present of a copy of New Testament. I will inform you hereafter when I shall go through it.

I remain,
Your sincerely,

"Dear Sir,—Very many thanks for your kind present of the New Testament to me.

Yours affectionately,

(3)

"Rev. Sir,—I am much pleased to acknowledge that I received by this day's post a copy of the New Testament sent by you free, with a letter dated the 12th Jully.

I am, Sir,
Your most humble servant,

(4)

"Sir,—Be pleased to accept my warmest thanks for the great kindness you have shown to me by sending a marked New Testament. Some of my friends are now very much anxious for the book, so I think they will write to you soon. With many thanks for your kindness, and best wishes for your health and happiness,

I remain, dear Sir,
Yours truly obliged,

As letter No. 4 hints, I have received several more applications. Most of the boys write for the Evangelist—evidently thinking this will bring them a New Testament eventually. Some boys apply directly for the latter. One boy writes:—"Now I am going through the length and breadth of your Evangelist, I have read some passages of New Testament which you have presented to one of my class friends. Your Testament has special force to induce me to go through the whole book, and as I have no Testament, new or old, so I cannot go further through the book. . . . Will you be kind enough to send me all those things?"

Now, boys and girls, why have I told you this story? Because surely this is a way in which many of you could help on the work of Christ in India. In almost every district throughout India there are hundreds of boys studying English. If you would mark penny (or fourpenny) Testaments (praying as you mark them), and send them by book post to any missionaries you know in India, I am sure they would be delighted to receive and distribute them.

"The entrance of thy Word giveth light." When you have sent your marked Testament, do not forget to pray that they may be used of God to the conversion of those to whom they go. Above all, give your own hearts and lives to Jesus, that you yourselves may be "Epistles of Christ, known and read of all men."—I am yours, in Christ's service.

THE C.S.S.M. ON SCARBOROUGH SANDS.

Whilst spending the latter part of a holiday at Scarborough, I have on several mornings enjoyed being present at the sand-services of the C.S.S.M. Rev. C. Nash, the missioner, is admirably adapted for the work, and gets a good hold of the children by his cheerful and attractive way of conducting the service. It is interesting to notice that though this is a children's mission, a large interest is taken in it by the "grown-ups," and while the juveniles are accommodated on their sand seats, the adults form a compact circle around them. Thus indirectly the Gospel is preached to a general congregation day by day.

A curious little incident occurred one morning. There is a spot known as the children's corner, at which the services have been held for several successive years. One morning last week the niggers took possession of it, and when the friend carrying the Mission flag arrived he found the ground occupied. The arrival of the flag at the margin of the crowd called forth a torrent of abuse from the leader of the minstrels, who supposed the possession was about to be contested. The flag, however, was moved away a few yards and arrangements made for the service on a neighbouring spot. The nigger performance was in full swing when Mr. Nash commenced the service, but no sooner had the singing of the hymn commenced than the people began to desert the niggers and join the service, till the former had lost nearly all their company, and finding they could not rally their audience subsided into silence for the greater part of the time that the service lasted. Next morning the C.S.S.M. were left in possession of their usual corner.

THE McALL MISSION BOAT.

The Mission Boat is continuing its good work and proving true to its name. From the village of Trilport and Germiney it proceeded to the town of Epernay, where it has been for over a month. The meetings there have been most interesting and successful. Not only have the working-people been coming, but many of the middle class have also found their way to the boat, and have seemed greatly interested in what they have heard and seen.

One Sunday the boat was filled twice over, afternoon and evening. Mr. Brown, who spent a fortnight there, was deeply impressed with the meetings, as was also M. Merle d'Aubigné, who ran down for an evening to fill up a gap.

The accompanying letter from Mrs. Charlier, the wife of the pastor of Epernay, will show their opinion of the work, and, better still, what they earnestly desire to do when the boat leaves. The pastor and his wife and family are all working most heartily in the meetings. I trust that friends will bear in mind the needs of the work, both the boat itself, and the special appeal that Mdme. Charlier makes for Epernay.

The boat will soon be leaving that town to descend the Marne, calling at various places that it has to pass by on the upward journey.—Yours truly,

Wm. Soltau.

In her letter, Madame Charlier says:—About five miles from the well-known vineyards of Ay, whose grapes are used in making champagne, the River Marne bends, and on its banks is the pretty little town of Epernay. Here for a month past the Mission Boat, "Le Bon Messager," has been stationed. Scarcely had it come to its moorings before a crowd gathered round it, and the following day, without any attempt at advertising, the boat was filled by an attentive and quiet audience. Each evening this little floating chapel has been filled by those who came to listen eagerly to the preaching of God's Word. And we—the pastor and his family—have been following with the deepest interest the unexpected visit of the vessel.

The boat is anchored on the left bank of the river, and here there are two faubourgs, containing between 3,000 and 4,000 inhabitants. They are separated from Epernay proper simply by the river, but that makes all the difference, because these faubourgs (Magenta and La Villa) are in the parish of Ay. Thus they have no place of worship of their own. The burials are often conducted without any priest. The sick only see him when at the point of death. The young people and children are completely neglected. Perhaps once a month, during a part of the year, a catechism is held for the children. That is the actual condition of things, which we witness with deep sorrow, and which we were earnestly seeking to remedy when the "Bon Messager" suddenly arrived. The meetings on board are not only frequented, as we have said, by the adults of this quarter, but the children also flock in. What a delightful sight to see poor neglected little ones from the streets listening attentively to the lesson and learning to sing Gospel hymns!

But with sorrowful hearts we look at them as they leave the meeting; we say, what will become, when the boat leaves, of the good seed thus scattered? We must open a mission hall and continue the meetings and schools, etc. But we cannot undertake the expenditure. The little church of Epernay has already more than it can do. It receives no support from the State, and has many heavy charges to meet for its own poor, etc. We ask God, as did Gideon, to show us clearly the way for us. "I pray Thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, to give me a sign that I may know if Thou art with me."

We follow with deepest interest our missions in Africa, but a mission in our own country is just as needful. Let those who doubt this come and see these working people gathering each evening to hear the Word of God! Let them ask Captain and Mrs Pim, who conduct the work on the boat with so much devotion and skill. Let them look at these poor children around us, growing up like heathens. The harvest-field is truly white; there are labourers ready. Who will provide them with the implements necessary?

ROYAL NORMAL COLLEGE FOR THE BLIND, UPPER NORWOOD, S.E.—The president and executive committee have resolved to open a special house for private and professional pupils in the autumn. The students will be able to prepare for the universities or take a high course of training in music. The principal (Dr. Campbell) will furnish particulars to all who may desire further information.

Mr. Müller's Orphan Houses

The fifty-third annual report of this institution has just been issued, and, like all its predecessors, is full of interest. Unhappily, however, there is an unwonted feature in the balance-sheet. During the fifty-eight years of the existence of the institution, there has usually been a balance on the right side—often a very considerable one. We are sorry, however, to observe that when the account closed on May 26 of the present year there was a deficit altogether of £3,663. Of this, £1,951 arises in the orphan account, the remaining £1,712 representing salaries due to helpers for the past three-quarter year, and which had been voluntarily relinquished until the relief of financial pressure made it possible to pay them. This action on the part of the institution staff betokens a loyal interest in the work which may well cheer the directors in this time of pecuniary stress.

Remembering the special and unique aim of Mr. Müller in this institution—in God—it is not unnatural under the circumstances to be somewhat concerned, not for the principle itself, but for the credit of the principle in the eyes of the Church and the world. It is, therefore, important to see what Mr. Müller has to say on the subject. He refers to the fact that only once before has such a financial crisis occurred, viz., in 1881-2, when the expenses for the orphans exceeded the income by £488, but, he adds, "at that time, in less than one month after the commencement of the new financial year of the institution, by the payment of legacies, an amount was received which was three times greater than the deficiency, and adding the donations which came in to the legacies, we had six times as much as the deficiency."

"In like manner," Mr. Müller writes, "on the 26th May, 1892, sixteen legacies which had been left were due, and might any day be paid to us, amounting altogether to £3,435." Mr. Müller also states that in addition there are forty-five other legacies left to the institution, payment of which depends on the death of relatives, amounting to £25,983, and adds, "I simply refer to this to show that we did not draw on the bank at the end of this last financial year of the institution whilst we had no prospect of being able to meet the account. Besides this there are the five large orphan houses, erected and furnished at a cost of £115,000; and these houses are entirely unencumbered. Further, we have about nineteen acres of building land, which might be sold for many thousands of pounds.

Readers will take careful note of the interesting fact relative to the sixteen legacies which became due on May 26, 1892, the amount of which nearly balances the deficiency. The faith of God's servants has been tried, but still it is true that they who trust in Him shall never be confounded. God's promises sometimes seem to go to but they never pass over it. Mr. Müller and his colleague, Mr. Wright, are as firmly convinced as ever of the soundness of the principle upon which the work has been conducted from the first, and regard the present experience only as a test of faith and patience. The language of the Report is "Our trust in Him is, as before, unshaken; and we doubt not in the least either his power or his willingness to help us in his own time: and we believe also that only for blessing has He been pleased thus greatly try our faith and patience."

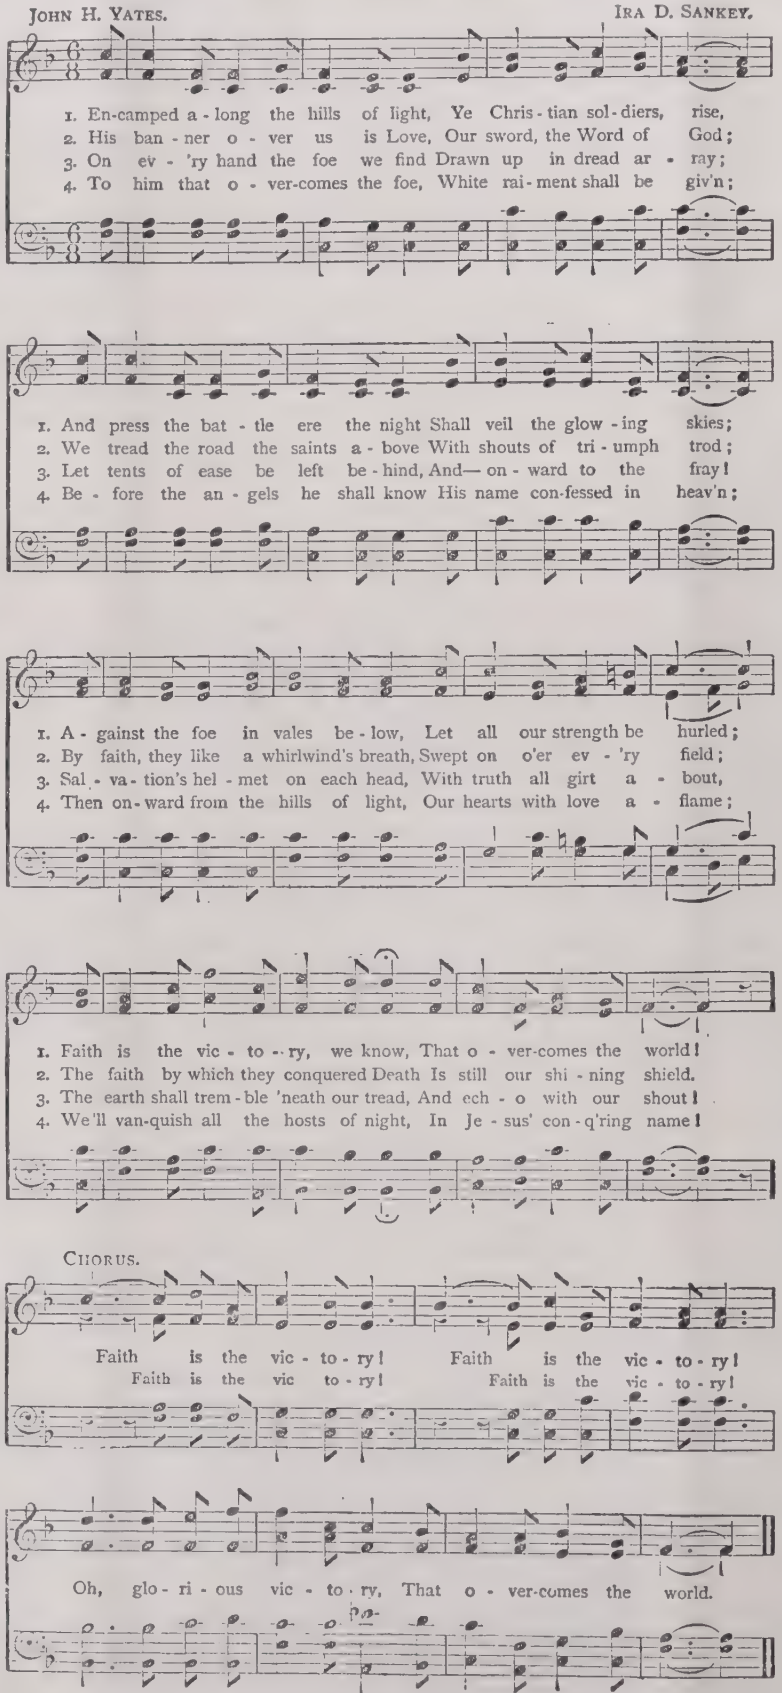
At the same time, Mr. Müller endeavours to discern the will of God in this occurrence, and concludes that a contraction of operations is pointed to, unless the income should, in the future, be more abundant. There is true courage in this expressed readiness to narrow the scope of effort in order to maintain a scriptural principle, rather than attempt to run a big institution by the sacrifice of it. The question of human need is ever a pressing one, but there is a question which with Mr. Müller has ever stood first—"What is the will of God?" Subjection to that has not diminished his zeal and effort, but has rather guided it to successful issues.

The channels through which supplies have come present the same variety and striking originality as ever. Here is one remarkable story:—"A small heavy packet, directed to Mr. George Müller, Orphan Houses, Ashley Down, Bristol, was sent by Mr. Sarsfield, manager of the warehouse of the Scriptural Knowledge Institution, to Mr. Wright. As we have often had such heavy little parcels sent from a donor, who puts aside all the farthings he receives in his business for the benefit of the orphans, this parcel was given to one of our assistants, to count the coppers which the packet was supposed to contain, who soon found that £200 in gold was enclosed therein. This anonymous donation, left at 78, Park-street, was taken for the orphans in our time of great need, and thus a plain proof was afforded that God has not forgotten us, though our faith and patience are greatly tried."



From Cornwall comes £9 13s. 6d., "being a penny in the pound for all goods sold during the year." From Sutton, £1, "a gift on the donor's 91st birthday." On Oct. 1st, Mr. Müller writes, "In addition to many small donations received since Sept. 27, we obtained to-day, on account of the legacy of the late Mr. R. W. J., £550."

These are samples of many similar instances of the providential way in which the work has been sustained through another year. For more than half a century the career of this institution has been watched with the deepest interest by thousands of God's children, who have either learned by it the lesson of faith in God, or have had their faith wonderfully strengthened by its records. As the ship has sailed on in deep water with plenty of sea room, they have learned lessons of Divine power and goodness and liberality; and they will still continue to learn the same lessons, even more thoroughly, as they observe the Divine hand guiding it through straits and shallows out again into the wealth of ocean.

Faith is the Victory!

"This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. —1 JOHN v. 4.

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.—The annual conference (commencing on Monday evening, Sept. 26, and concluding on Thursday evening, the 29th), will take the place of the Christian Convention held at Dundee annually in September. Amongst the speakers are Rev. H. E. Fox, Principal Douglas, Revs. John Bennett, D.D., H. D. Brown, G. Wilson, John Smith, Professor J. R. Thomson, J. Urquhart, F. E. Marsh, James Johnston and others.

MISS M. F. CUSACK:

"THE NUN OF KENMARE."

ONE of the most interesting books of a biographical kind that issued from the press of this country last season was THE STORY OF MY LIFE, by Miss Cusack, better known as "The Nun of Kenmare" (Hodder and Stoughton, 6s.). A more reliable and instructive commentary on the teachings and methods of the apostate Church system which calls itself Roman Catholic, has never been given to the reading public of to-day. Anything more opposed both to the letter and spirit of Christianity, than the sayings and doings here recorded of Romish ecclesiastics and functionaries, it would be impossible to conceive. Miss Cusack's story of her strange and eventful life has therefore a value far exceeding its merely personal aspects. It is an unfolding and an exposure of that unscriptural, inhuman, and degrading organisation that acts as a social and spiritual blight wherever it prevails, and is now striving to bring Christendom once more under its malign domination.

MARY FRANCES CUSACK is descended from an ancient and well-known Irish Protestant family. Circumstances deprived her in her early days of the parental care and nurture that might have saved her from many of the sorrowful experiences of later life. She got a liberal education, however, and there were before her bright prospects of earthly happiness. Suddenly the young friend who had won her ardent heart, and to whom she was betrothed, was stricken down by the hand of death. The whole outlook of Miss Cusack's life was changed. She was prostrate for a time. During convalescence she was induced to read much High Church literature, the study of which predisposed her towards the vocation of a "Sister" in a Protestant convent. About this time her path crossed that of Dr. Pusey, whose influence decided her. Incidentally, we may remark that Miss Cusack, in her narrative, speaks in very plain and by no means flattering terms of the methods adopted by Dr. Pusey in his ritualistic propaganda: "He let expediency be the rule of his life, instead of honesty. He deliberately deceived those who confided in him with a trust which almost amounted to worship."

Miss Cusack's "romantic ideas of a Sister's life" were soon dispelled by her experiences of the jealousies, backbitings, and internal strifes, as well as by the daily round of monotonous work, religious service, and Romish imitations at the Plymouth and other conventual institutions. But the superstitious virus had begun to course within her veins, and she was ultimately led to the conclusion "that Puseyism was a very miserable imitation at best," and that she had better try the real thing. She secured an introduction to a Romish priest in London, and was in due course received into that communion. "When I joined the Church of Rome," she says, "I had no idea of what Rome taught or of what Rome was. I knew later to my bitter cost, when the knowledge was useless. I believe there are few who entered Rome at that time who did so much personally for the Church, yet to-day all the recompense I have is to be assured that I have lost my soul, and to be left to the doubtful charity of strangers for my daily bread. . . . If the Inquisition had the power which it used to exercise, and which it may have again if Christian people are not warned in time, all that I have done would not procure for me even a mitigation of the death penalty, or of the torture which would precede it. And yet Rome claims to be a Christian Church."

It would be impossible within the limits of a short sketch to enter into any detailed account of the strange vicissitudes that marked Miss Cusack's life as a Romish nun. That she was thoroughly sincere and desirous to do good to those round about her cannot be successfully questioned. It is true that a feeling of wonder arises in our minds, as we read the miserable story of the way in which she was thwarted, opposed, and traduced, how it could have taken her so long to be undeceived, and why she did not leave the Romish faith and fellowship long years before she was driven to that step. It may be that God had wise purposes in permitting her to drink deeply of the cup of bitter disappointment; of ecclesiastical self-seeking and tyranny; of feminine pettiness and spite; of the deceptions and cruelties of convent life, and of the wholly unnatural and unsatisfying character of the conventual system. Miss Cusack is very candid, but very fair and impartial in her descriptions of what she saw and knew and experienced. She hints at, rather than openly speaks of, the grosser abuses of the system, and utters a plain warning to English Protestants against permitting in their native land such horrors as have disgraced convent life in other countries and in past days.

Becoming a member of the order of the "Poor Clares" in Newry convent, a year after she joined the Romish Church, she passed her novitiate there; and before making her final vows she was obliged to sign a deed of gift making over all her property to the convent. "I did not know what a deed of gift was then. I know now, when, in advancing years, I have to earn my daily bread, and know that those who practically drove me out of a home by ceaseless cruelty have the enjoyment of all that ought to have been mine."

The next stage of Miss Cusack's life was that which brought her public notice and fame, and secured for her the appellation of "The Nun of Kenmare." A sisterhood having been founded at Kenmare, she joined it. There she did much literary work on behalf of Romanism, the proceeds of her publications being swallowed up by the convent. During the famine year of 1879 she took an active part in the work of relief, and nearly £20,000 came in through her instrumentality. As to the agrarian troubles of the Irish peasantry, she asserts that "the Roman Catholic landlords are the very worst in Ireland"; and that the country will continue to be in a miserable condition "until some Christian statesman rises in the might of the Lord, and declares that Ireland shall not be governed by the Pope, or by selfish landlords or 'patriots,' but on Christian principles."

Notwithstanding her self-denying endeavours to benefit the poor, "Sister Clare," as she was called, suffered much wrong at the hands of priests, who made and published libellous attacks on her. There were others, including many Protestants, who appreciated her efforts. She had also "troubles with troublesome Sisters," and she was constrained to leave Kenmare with the view of founding a new convent at Knock, a place of notoriety for alleged miraculous cures. She intended to commence a work for the better education and training of servant girls, so as to fit them for emigration. She was thwarted and opposed in every way by her ecclesiastical superiors, and finally she was driven from Knock, her health having greatly suffered through the treatment she received. It is a wretched story of base ingratitude and of cruel, heartless scheming, and we commend the perusal of it to any whose eyes have not been opened to the reality of this God-dishonouring, man-degrading system.

Sister Clare came to England and proceeded to Rome, where she saw the Pope; and she received his special commendation for her new plan of service. Having been forced to leave Ireland, she went to the United States, partly to collect funds for her scheme, and partly to find an opening for an Emigrants' Home. But her persecutors had been beforehand with her, and she found that the calumnious reports with respect to her, started on this side the Atlantic, had been circulated on the other side, despite the endorsement of her plans by the authorities at Rome. There is not the harmony inside the Roman Catholic fold, she says, that some Protestants fondly imagine. "There is no Church so rent by factions, jealousy, and discord, but the iron lash of Papal authority is freely used to silence any public exhibition of the sore."

In America she found the same cruel and unreasonable opposition from priests and bishops, and the same, if not more glaring, abuses in connection with the conventual system. Slowly but surely the conviction grew in her mind that "Rome was a gigantic fraud." She was loth to cut herself off completely from those in the Romish Communion, whom she had helped, and for whom she felt in a large degree responsible. She wrote to a Protestant Episcopal minister in America, who had at one time been a Romish priest, but had been delivered from that bondage. Having received counsel from him and his bishop, she resolved that the die should be cast, and she left the Romish institution where she was sojourning. This she had to do almost by stealth, in order to secure the safety of papers valuable to her, and which would otherwise have been destroyed; and some of her first experiences among Protestants in America were not particularly encouraging. In vain she pleaded with Christians of all denominations to help her in establishing a quiet mission for Romanists in New York. According to Miss Cusack, the power of Romanism is so great and widespread in America that even sturdy Protestants are afraid to oppose it openly. Her correspondence was withheld from her by Romish postal officials. "America is supposed to be a free country, but it is not a free country for those who leave the Church of Rome. The great majority of offices, high and low, are in the hands of Rome."

She left America with a sad heart, and returned to England, where she now lives—a poorer and sadder but a wiser woman. Her career ought to be as a beacon light, and a voice of warning to all who are being deluded by the specious sophistries and immoral pretensions of this anti-Christian and relentless federation—the greatest foe to human freedom and to purity of faith that the world has ever seen. Miss Cusack is now engaged in lecturing throughout Great Britain, so far as her strength will allow.

She is also engaged in trying to reach Sisters who would leave convents if they were assured of a temporary home. She has taken a room at 8, South-street, Thurloo-square, S.W., where she can see Roman Catholics who wish to hear from herself privately, and personally, why she left the Church of Rome. Already she has received the thanks of one gentleman whose daughter was enticed into a convent. Mr. H—— says:—"We hope your work prospers, and that you are getting the financial support you need for this anxious work, so trying to your health. May God bless you for what you have done for us!"

We earnestly commend Miss Cusack and her work to the sympathies and prayers of Christians everywhere.

Rescue Notes.

BY MRS. BRAMWELL BOOTH.

The Rescue Work of the Salvation Army is so generally admitted, whether judged by its methods or by its results, to be worthy of the sympathy and support of all, that it is often in danger of losing, and, in fact, does lose, the very help it so much needs because the Lord's stewards imagine that its wants are always supplied. I think this is our case just now. I have received during the last eighteen months or two years particularly, and continue to receive, from Christians of every name who have personal knowledge of our work, most precious testimonies of their gratitude to God for what He is doing in this part of the field, as well as to personal blessing received through those who have gone out from us to fight the battle of life.

Circumstances prevented us from holding the annual meeting usually held at this time of the year in connection with our work. This fact, I think, makes it desirable that I should report progress to many friends among the readers of The Christian who are, I know, interested in our Homes. I will confine my remarks entirely to the operations carried on in the United Kingdom.

We have now sixteen separate Homes, affording accommodation at the same time for 387 women. In addition there are three promising young business undertakings finding remunerative employment for seventy more. During the year ending last month we have received 1,498 women and girls in moral and physical danger and distress, and during the same period have sent out, with every prospect of earning an honest and virtuous livelihood, 1,176, of whom 705 have been sent to domestic service in this country, largely in Christian homes. Figures are not as a rule very interesting, and to the average reader I fear that even these will appear rather dry. I have not space to discuss their inward meaning; may I be permitted to say, however, that they possess a significance of the highest import. They are not merely the records of a great work accomplished by the grace of God, but they are fraught with a great hope for thousands of lost ones who are now in the shadow of uncleanness and death.

I speak thus because all those who are working with me have set before their minds and hearts as the end of all their labour the conversion of all who come into our hands. To this I attribute not only the permanence which characterises the work accomplished in our Homes, but the happiness and freedom from many difficulties which might reasonably be expected in dealing with this class while they are under our care. Of course we have some failures and some disappointments, but even among the comparatively small proportion of those who have left us as unsatisfactory in former years many have in some way or other returned to our influence, and thus we have found the "bread" after many days.

God wonderfully justifies his own methods and "fulfils Himself in many ways." Our faith in Him for the most hopeless cases has again and again begotten in the hearts of the most degraded and abandoned a hope for their own salvation. "If I can only get to them," said a poor outcast, reputed by the police to be the worst woman in the country — "if I can only get to them there'll be a chance." She did get to us, and a terrible accumulation of wrong and cruelty, of sin and suffering, her life had been up to that hour. For years she had lived in the fields and woods near her native town, only visiting it for shameful deeds, and her whole ensemble when she reached us was that of a neglected animal rather than of a woman. Love and patience and the re-creating power of the Holy Spirit of God restored in some measure his lost image, and now C. is living an earnest and humble Christian life.

In nothing have I been more rejoiced than in the reproductiveness of our work. Only this week a former inmate of one of the Homes (who gives out of her own earnings 6d. a week to the funds) arranged to have two girls sent to us, who through her seeking out and personal influence are abandoning their evil life. But it is the blessing that often follows the advent of one of our girls into a household which specially cheers me. It is not uncommon to hear of the salvation of fellow-servants through their instrumentality, and to receive letters from Christian mistresses expressing the deepest gratitude to God for help received through them. Of a truth our Lord chooses his own instruments to do his own work, and a Magdalene may still sometimes do for Him work which a Peter or a John may not.

This effort has a special claim on the Christian churches. The daughters of every church knock at our doors and find them open. I sometimes think I have been given to see the answers of more mothers' prayers than any Christian woman of my age. For while I mourn the want in home training which has so often led to the wandering away of the lost sheep, I can rejoice all the same when we are able to say "The dead is alive and the lost is found."

We ask your prayers. Much of our work has to be done in an atmosphere laden with the taint of the most degrading and depressing impurity, and in the face of difficulties which God alone can enable us to overcome. The cruelty of sin, its reckless and shameless disregard of its own consequences, and the ruin of hope in multitudes of hearts, all burden us, sometimes beyond measure. Pray for us, please, and help us with money and sympathy to carry on this warfare as God shall enable you. Yours, seeking the lost,

Florence E. Booth.

Young City Toilers.

Those who are interested in our "Old Welcome" efforts to help young city toilers will be glad to hear that we have been able to give over 300 of them some hours of fresh air in the Forest.

Through the kindness of a lady who owns a small portion of the Forest, we were privileged to have a delightful spot all to ourselves. After some hours of recreation, all who wished were invited to stay to a meeting for testimony from the ladies and their friends, and we were very pleased to see a large majority remain with us. Great blessing resulted from this simple service, there being some decided cases of conversion.

We are rejoiced to be able to send a few of our weary women to the seaside. One who is now at Lancing-on-Sea for a fortnight writes most cheerily: "I thank you so much for sending me to this lovely place. The ladies are all so kind here, I shall be sorry to say good-bye. After breakfast we sing hymns, and a chapter is read which is a splendid help to any one during the day. I cannot tell you how grand the sea is: I had never seen it before."

The sympathising friends who help us to give our weary sisters this rest and enjoyment will be richly repaid when they hear what a blessing it brings to many. We should be glad to receive any good sound Gospel books, tracts, or leaflets for distribution. Eleanor Fisher.

KESWICK CONVENTION.

THE PRAISE MEETING.

The proceedings at the meeting for praise on Saturday morning, July 30, were pitched in a high key, and properly so, for many testimonies had been borne to blessing resulting from the Convention. During the week numerous requests for prayer had been received; now a budget of requests for praise was produced. In some cases the reason assigned was that believers had attained to an assurance which they had never before realised of the all-sufficiency of Divine grace. In others, God was thanked for revealing to trusting souls the reality of the cleansing power of the blood of Christ and the filling of the Holy Spirit, whereby true professors were enabled to perform, and faithful witnesses to work, to the glory of God. There were also many cases of gratitude for light upon the elements of Gospel truth, those who entered the tent aliens from the heavenly commonwealth being able to rejoice in adoption into the Divine family through faith in the atoning work of the Lord Jesus Christ. The remarkably fine weather that prevailed throughout the week was also a constant topic of thankfulness.

Praise was not simply verbal. During the latter part of the week a number of persons who had obtained spiritual profit at the Convention signified their joy by making offerings for the work of God in various fields of labour. The cause of missions had been made to press on many hearts. Therefore, a gift was sent, "from one who desires henceforth to be a more faithful steward; I cannot offer myself, but will do all I can to send others into the foreign field." Another offering was "from two sisters, for foreign missions and itinerant work in Ireland." Gold chains, rings, and parcels of jewellery were handed up, in the interest of missions, by persons who had determined to dispense with superfluities. Another earnest soul gave a bicycle "for mission work." One donor had been greatly helped by an exposition by the Tamil evangelist, "David," who spoke of God's promises and undertakings under the figure of "a cheque, to be received by faith, and cashed by obedience." The Keswick Mission was specified in many cases.

In song as well as prayer-utterance, God was thanked for all the fruit of the Convention. Then the company on the platform led with parting words in the form of selections from Holy Writ. In individual cases sentences of explanation were added. Mr. Hopkins quoted Isaiah lviii. 2, pointing out that the promise covers guidance, satisfaction, and strengthening. Mr. Moule gave 2 Samuel xix. 30 and Psalm cxxxix. 23. Mr. Moody rejoiced in a deepened realisation of the fulness of Luke xv. 31. The chairman (Mr. Robert Wilson) joined in the thanksgiving of our Lord as recorded in Matt. xi. 25, 26. From all parts of the hall, for about half an hour, messages of peace and words of counsel were given in the form of Scripture quotations. "We have found Him" (Jno. i. 45), said one; "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God" (Col. iii. 3), said another. Among other very appropriate verses were "Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether by life or by death" (Phil. i. 20); "Son of man, stand upon Thy feet, and I will speak with thee" (Ezek. ii. 1); and "After these things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven saying, Hallelujah, salvation, and glory, and honour, and power be unto the Lord our God" (Rev xix. 1).

The meeting was a season of much refreshment, and was concluded very properly with the hymn, "All hail the power of Jesu's name."

THE MISSIONARY MEETING.

The tent was crowded on Saturday at ten o'clock, when the missionary meeting opened. The platform presented a cosmopolitan appearance, not merely including missionaries from many lands, but grouping blacks and whites in happy contrast—Orientals from Persia and India sitting alongside representatives of the negro race—"all one in Christ Jesus. Dr. Cumming, having, in prayer, presented the great cause of missions to the God of missions, the Chairman read Psalm lxvii. In the course of some remarks he pointed out that the long-accustomed form of Mr. Eugene Stock was absent. He read, however, extracts from a letter from him, dated Sydney, June 6. Having asked for prayer upon the work in which he and Rev. R. W. Stewart are engaged, Mr. Stock said: "I want especially to tell you what a joy it is to come out here and follow in the track of Mr. Grubb and his party. You may be glad of independent testimony to the greatness of the work done. Whenever I find myself in parishes where they laboured, I am sure to find many rejoicing in the Lord and his power to use them in his service."

Mr. Stock went on to intimate that the blessing had spread from the colonists to the heathen, and that many of the candidates who are coming forward for mission work are the fruit of Mr. Grubb's mission. He continued: "I and Mr. Stewart came out here for two purposes—first, to arouse a deeper missionary spirit, and secondly, to make arrangements for sending forth, directly from Australia, candidates desiring to labour in connection with the C.M.S. We have not preached our Society, but have striven to set forth Christ's claim for the service of his people, and have spoken on the mission field in its length and breath. God is graciously prospering our work, and missionary unions are being established. We are here in New South Wales for two months, and then go to Victoria for two months, then to Tasmania and New Zealand. By Christmas I hope to be in England." The chairman was instructed to send a message of warm love to Messrs. Stock and Stewart.

Rev. C. A. Fox led in prayer, remembering England's sins as well as her responsibilities. He asked for the speedy abolition of the opium iniquity, "whereby we increase our revenues by increasing hell's receipts." Deploring the drink traffic, he spoke of "the accursed drink, with added poison, forced upon ignorant savages to complete their savagery." Christian operations at home and abroad were specified, and God was asked to unite his children in a brotherhood of service. "The heathen around," said Mr. Fox, "are all one—in sin, in want, in despair; the Church is divided, though Christ is in her midst."

REV. J. HUDSON TAYLOR

gave the first address, calling attention to the missionary story in Acts iii. and iv., a record which had afforded him strong encouragement during recent troublous times in China. It was the hour of prayer that took Peter and John to the Temple, on the occasion of this miracle of healing performed in the name of Jesus. They were not wealthy, but there is something better than silver and gold. God could feed his missionaries now with manna from heaven as He did the Israelites in the wilderness. He condescends to accept the gifts of his people to carry on his work, not because He cannot do without them, but because He can only give blessing to those who exert themselves to support his work.

At the Shanghai conference, the missionaries entered into a covenant to pray that God would send at least a thousand missionaries to China in the next five years. God began to answer this prayer at once. During the first year 200 missionaries went, many of them not sent in the ordinary ways. From that time missionaries had "poured" into China as never before. Referring to the disturbances in the country, Mr. Taylor said: It is not for the children of God to be appalled when the devil rages. God always lets him overreach himself, and brings good out of seeming evil. God has used the circulation of the wicked pamphlets against the missionaries to open up many fresh regions. The Emperor had to send a proclamation throughout the empire, and workers in connection with the C.I.M. are now witnessing, in cities hitherto closed, and which would have been closed to-day but for Satan's opposition.

God is working in China in a way I have never known. I have recently seen some old brethren, who tell me that within the last few months missionary work has become quite a new thing to them. I believe we are on the eve of a mighty outpouring of the Spirit of God upon them issionaries of China. Our native Christians are feeling that they also want the life more abundant. Mr. Taylor concluded by laying all the workers upon the hearts of his hearers, whom he asked to pray for the sadly needed reinforcements. Miss S. G. Stock's hymn having been sung, several brethren delivered addresses of five minutes' duration. Rev. John Wilkinson could not plead so great a cause as that of Israel in such a limited space, so he prayed God to remember his covenant to bless the seed of Abraham.

Rev. J. S. Adams, of the American Baptist Missionary Union, told of Divine interpositions in China; Mr. Maxwell Wright pleaded for South America, with its thirty millions of people; Rev. J. S. Hill, Bishop-designate of the Niger, spoke of the little broken band of labourers in that wide African field in which the names of Samuel Crowther and Graham Wilmot Brooke are specially fragrant; and Dr. Harry Guinness described the need of Central Africa, and the blessing of God upon the efforts of the Congo-Balolo mission in penetrating the dense darkness.

Other speakers were:—Rev. R. Stewart Wright (L.M.S.), from the shores of Tanganyika, Central Africa; Mr. Dudley Kidd, of the Cape General Mission; Miss Reed, of the North Africa Mission; Miss Grimwood, from Tarn Taran, Punjaub, India; Miss Abraham, from Patna, India; Miss Pollard, of the British Syrian Mission; Miss Perston Taylor, engaged in medical mission work in Palestine; Dr. Gillison, of Hankow, China; Rev. J. Morrison, of the Church of Scotland Missionary College, Calcutta, India; and Rev. W. H. Ball, educational missionary in India. Many strong appeals were made for additional workers, the ladies showing that there is to-day a wide-open door among the women in the lands of the East.

Mr. James Henderson followed with a brief account of the new missionary movement among students in Scotland. Meetings have been going on for nearly ten years, and last year some members, after visiting Keswick, went to the University centres telling of the blessing they had received. There are now more than a hundred who have consecrated themselves to God's service.

The hymn "Anywhere with Jesus" having been sung, spoke a few words to the female portion of the assembly. She placed before them a fact, a question, and a promise, which were potential in her own life in taking her to China. The fact was the passing away of millions who have never heard of Christ. The question was—What response have you given to the claim of these souls? You have given, or are giving, some response, and you will have to face it some day. Having called attention to the example of Christ in point of humility, as set forth in Phil. iii. 5-10, the speaker gave the promise as found in v. 15 of the same chapter. Some may feel that they have not come to counting all things as but loss for Christ, and to them she commended the word, "If in anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you."

MISS GERALDINE GUINNESS

REV. F. BARING GOULD

began a warm-hearted address, by referring to the closing words of 1 Cor. ii., 16, "The mind of Christ." This had been the watchword of the Convention, in regard to individual experience, and it was now spoken of as regards the evangelisation of the world. Dealing with the Lord's command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature," he said: Is it not an appalling fact that there are very many places of worship throughout our land where this portion of the mind of Christ is hardly ever alluded to? The result is that there are about eight hundred and fifty millions of the human family who know nothing of the Father's love, nothing of the Saviour's blood, nothing of the Spirit's power. The Protestant Church of Christ sends forth a devoted band of about seven thousand men and women all told. Is there not cause for humiliation? Is there not reason to recognise that the mind of Christ in this respect has not yet been grasped by the Church throughout the world? Here in England, I am told, we have one minister of Christ for every five hundred of the population; in China there is one missionary—man or woman—to every sixty thousand of the population.

In order that the mind of Christ may be realised on this subject, we want—call it, if you wish, a baptism of the Holy Ghost, or the fulness of the blessing—in our midst, to shake us from our lethargy. What is the mind of Christ with regard to each individual member of the Church of God? Dr. Pierson has told us that, in accordance with the Divine purpose, every true follower of the Lord Jesus Christ is a co-worker with God the Father, a co-sufferer with God the Son, and a co-witness with God the Holy Ghost. We want to realise our personal responsibility in this matter; that an interest and a share in the work of world-wide evangelisation may be an integral portion of the life of every true-hearted follower of the Lord Jesus. There is only one single country in the world, Tibet (and perhaps Arabia) that is closed to missionary labour. Let us pray that Tibet may soon be open to the waiting workers of the Moravian Mission on its borders. If the Master were here this morning, would He not say, "Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught." What would be our response? Would it be, "At thy word, I will let down the net"?

Let me give you two nets:—First, the net of believing, persevering supplication. How many of us join in the missionary prayer, "Thy Kingdom come," and also obey the injunction, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He send forth labourers into His harvest"? Let down this net, and teach your children from their earliest days to pray for this cause. A young man prayed all through his school life, "O, Lord Jesus, if it be Thy will, let me be a missionary." Do you wonder that he has gone up to Cambridge with a heart burning with missionary enthusiasm?

Then let down the net of personal service. Directly you enter the school of Christ, the Lord comes to you and says, "Go, work to-day in my vineyard." The vineyard is the world. Be perfectly clear, after inquiring of God, where you are to labour—at home or abroad. Take heed that, in all circumstances, you are able, in the presence of God, to say, in the words of one of old, "Thy servant is ready to do whatsoever my lord the king doth appoint." In conclusion, the speaker urged all his hearers to face this great question—to realise their duty, and search their hearts as to their disposition.

Rev. Evan Hopkins followed with a request that those who were willing to hold themselves ready to do the Lord's bidding, either at home or abroad, would indicate it by raising their hands. A large number lifted their hands in response to this solemn question.

Mr. Moody, in a few words of prayer, committed to the Lord those who thus pledged themselves to be his willing servants. "Teach us," he said, "how sweet Thy will is, and enable us to yield ourselves wholly to thee." He also prayed for the labourers in the mission-field, and asked that the Lord would Himself speedily come in triumph and glory.

The benediction having been pronounced by Rev. F. E. Wigram, the Doxology was heartily sung.

A SECOND MISSIONARY MEETING.

was held on Monday morning, August 1, at which Mr. Robert Wilson reported that the money received and promised towards missionary objects during the Convention amounted to £1,166, besides about seventy packets of jewellery, some of them of considerable value. Both these items have since grown, and may yet be added to by consecrated Christian people. Mr. Wilson went on to explain that the number of donors this year has been much more numerous, so that although the total amount is smaller (for last year there were some large gifts which have not been equalled this year) the interest is more widespread. Mr. Wilson remarked that he believed it was the intention of the Missionary Committee to see what could be done to send out definite missionaries to the heathen, thus realising the desire of many friends.

Rev. G. C. Grubb read extracts from reports on his mission tour in Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania. The various members of his party followed, including Messrs. Campbell and Millard, with Mrs. Millard; also "David," the Tamil evangelist, Messrs. Jackson, Bidlake, and Ewbank. In conclusion, Mr. Grubb prayed for all who are labouring in the cause of Christ. He named many workers at the Antipodes, and in other lands which he had himself visited, and particularly asked God to teach his people to show mercy to Israel, in order that blessing may come to the world through the seed of Abraham turning to the Lord.

MISSION TO THE JEWS.

On the Sunday afternoon Rev. John Wilkinson held a meeting at Friar's Crag, which was largely attended. He had to say little by way of justifying the order—"to the Jew first"—for the audience was made up of such as were already in full sympathy with him and the cause which is so near his heart. He spoke of the present condition of Israel as affording opportunities which the Lord would have His people embrace. He was also able to refer to some of the many cases of blessing consequent upon the testimony of the agents of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews. Fine weather made the proceedings very enjoyable, and many were instructed and cheered by the address delivered. Every word was inspired by love for Israel and Israel's God, and the whole showed a firm grasp of the facts and figures that relate to the history and condition of the chosen race.

CAPE GENERAL MISSION.

An interesting meeting was held at Friar's Crag on the afternoon of Saturday, July 30th. Mr. Arthur Mercer, the secretary, dwelt on the text "He fashioneth their hearts alike," and urged that the unconscious thirst of the soul for Christ was just as real in heathen hearts as in our own. Yet we are allowing the heathen to go down to death thirsty and unsatisfied, not knowing of the River of the Water of Life. Mr. Dudley Kidd, who has lately returned from South Africa, insisted that many Christians in England could never expect the fulness of blessing till their hands were cleansed from bloodguiltiness on account of their heathen brethren, for whom they were doing so little.

He testified to the reality of the work that is being done at Cape Town, the headquarters of the Mission, and where they had about fifty meetings every week, many being in the open air. Branches of work have been started at Pretoria and Johannesburg, the heathen being reached in both places. The Mission has a worker among the native labourers at the Kimberley Diamond Fields; and in Swazieland a missionary and his wife, and native helper are at work, though the ground is hard, owing to the unwillingness of the Queen and her advisers to receive the Gospel, and the consequent fear of the natives to disobey the Court.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR SOCIETY.

With very small notice a very interesting meeting was held in the Congregational Chapel at Keswick, on the Thursday of Convention week. Rev. W. J. Bain, the pastor, presided, and after his preliminary remarks, Rev. E. R. Hasse, of Mirfield, a manufacturing village in Yorkshire, delivered an address. He said that having classes of factory girls and colliery boys, he had felt the difficulty of keeping them under religious influence. Not long ago a paper reached him from America in which he learned the methods and the success of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavour. He started with twenty active members, all girls, and about forty associates. The members set themselves to win all the associates for Christ and active membership. They have nearly succeeded.

What are the fruits of the movement? Generally, that the members are rapidly turned into earnest self-sacrificing Christians. As soon as an opening is seen for some department of Christian work, a committee of the young people takes it up. Thus, some of the members noticed that in a certain part of the town there were several infirm old people. They organised cottage meetings for their help, and a great boon these have proved. The missionary spirit has wonderfully spread—missions to lepers, to the black races, almost anything to which they can be helpful, attracts them, and witness for Christ becomes a definite personal thing. They live Christ at home, and parents, hitherto careless are led to Jesus.

Rev. J. J. Muir, of Liverpool, said he looked at the Christian Endeavour movement from the point of view of the root principles of our life—the great method was to get right with God. If no opportunity is given to our young people to show their feeling and devotion, how can we expect their deepest and best impulses to be elicited? Our

PROFESSING CHRISTIANITY IS DROWSY.

Our churches will have to awake to the higher needs of the young people. Christian Endeavour must be something wonderfully attractive, when young ladies and young men preferred it to parties, and the emphatic terms which young people characteristically use are applied to the meetings of the Society. One of the best results is that thus you find out what young people are thinking of. Evangelistic work becomes almost a passion with them.

What a wondrous development the Christian Endeavour has had in a short time! It originated in America in 1881. Now there are 1,200,000 members, and above 20,000 societies. "Oh, very well for boys and girls of the lower stratum," said some critics. His work at Waterloo, near Liverpool, did not lie among that class. He had to deal with young ladies delicately trained and young men in good positions or respectable situations. He found that the Christian Endeavour is equally attractive to these.

Mr. R. C. Morgan, of London, remarked that as we grow older we become more and more interested in the children. The Y.P.S.C.E. solves the important problem what to do with the children just leaving the Sunday-school. He recollected hearing of an old lady led to Christ at ninety after a worldly life, who had been converted as a child, but the elders did not think her old enough to be recognised as a Christian, and all her life from her teens to ninety had been consequently wasted. If the churches dealt fairly or wisely by the children thousands of them would be in recognised fellowship. The C.E. takes account of the children individually; they feel that a personal interest is taken in them, and consequently they feel personally interested in one another. The C.E. pledge is the essence of the movement. It is a definite undertaking to do what is involved in the profession of being a Christian.

Dr. Kitchen, from Australia, said the C.E. needs no apology. Three years ago it reached Australia. Ministers were at their wits' end to know what to do with their young men.

MERE SOCIAL EXPERIMENTS FAILED, but the C.E. succeeded. It is a mistake to suppose that to interest young people you must patronise, secularise, and shun religion. The Society leads young people to speak and work for the Master. He had himself learned to speak in C.E. meetings. The proceedings bring out their varied gifts, on committees, in organisation, and in direct Christian work. It is a means of spiritual strength to the churches, stirs them up, sweeps them onward in youthful enthusiasm. Sam Jones has said in his brusque way that while the Church is putting on its boots the devil runs a mile.

Rev. Clarkson Piper, of Ipswich, held that the C.E. would be a great stimulus in the churches. He knew a church which had got down to the verge of extinction. A young man introduced the C.E. movement, and the church is now flourishing.

Mrs. Banks, Miss Chambers, several other ladies, and Rev. J. E. Reed added their testimony; and another year perhaps the C.E. will have taken its place at Keswick together with the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A.

A CONVENTION HYMN.

Holy, holy, holy Lord,
Look from heaven upon Thine own:
With the Spirit light the Word;
Let its pearls in blood be sown.

Give us grace to rise from earth,
Leave its fetters all behind;
Children of a second birth,
Offspring of a purer mind.

Take us, break us on the wheel
Of Thy matchless, holy love;
Make us, even as we kneel,
Worthier of the saints above.

Saviour, touch our hearts with fire,
Thrust us out to seek the lost:—
Rescue them from dirt and mire,
Woo them Godward at all cost.

THE ANTI-SEMITIC AGITATION.—In a letter to a German newspaper, founded to combat the Anti-Semitic agitation, Professor Max Müller says:—"I have repeatedly expressed disapproval of the Anti-Semitic agitation. In all matters I am opposed to shallow generalisation. When one hears people express general opinions about Englishmen, Frenchmen, Germans, &c., one is always led to ask them, 'How many Englishmen have you seen or known?' 'Perhaps twenty.' 'And yet you judge of 20,000,000!' I have known many Jews, having been born at Dessau. Many of my best friends were Jews. Now, it is true that there are black sheep among the Jews, but to judge and condemn the whole people by such is, it must be admitted, opposed to all rules of inductive logic. For a long time past I have preached to every German in England that he is individually responsible for the good name of the German nation. I should like to be able to preach the same to every Jew. Every single Jew is responsible for the good name of his race. If every single Jew would feel this, or if the community would let him feel it, there would be no more Anti-Semitism."

INDIAN CHRISTIANS AND OPIUM.

BY REV. ARTHUR W. PRAUTCH, OF THANA, BOMBAY.

It is with pain and reluctance that I write upon the use of opium by Indian Christians. The evil exists. There is ground to fear that it is increasing. Only harm can result from hiding the truth from British Christians. While many of them are making sacrifices to extend the Kingdom of Christ in India, their Government is responsible for a policy that is causing sad inroads among the flock won from heathenism.

The evil commences in childhood. I can speak from personal knowledge in regard to Western India. Here it is a common practice for children to be dosed with opium from their babyhood. The evil in its various stages is not obtrusive like some vices, although more fatal, both morally and physically. Its unobtrusive nature often causes it to escape the attention, for a long time, of missionaries. Opium-eating can be indulged in with absolute secrecy. The experience of Dr. Morison, of the Presbyterian Mission, Rampore Beauleah, Bengal, with reference to the general population, must be the experience of many missionaries in regard to the Indian Christian community. Dr. Morison said after investigation caused by an inquiry from England: "I began to realise, for the first time in my life, after twelve years' residence in this town, that there were forces at work under my very eyes that were swiftly and surely bringing ruin and degradation upon innumerable families in India, and that, account for it as we may, our Government was responsible for fostering and propagating this demoralising plague."

I believe few missionaries are more intimate than I with native Christians. Yet I but faintly realised the extent of this evil until I called a meeting of my native helpers, especially to consider the subject. From their clues I have gathered painful evidence. I will first deal with giving opium to children, and its results. A few days ago I called upon nine families, who, it was suspected, among others used opium. Six of them confessed to me that it was true.

In one family it was said, "Opium constipates the child, so there is not so much work for the mother to keep it clean!" This policy will explain not a few early deaths. In answer to the question, "Do you know of cases of overdose?" the father of the family said, "Yes; our neighbour's wife was annoyed at the child worrying her, and gave her a larger dose than usual. The child fell into a stupor like death. The mother raised a wail, and I went to see what was the matter. I poured water on the (mud) floor, laid the child on the damp place, poured water over her, and fanned her. After a time she came to." This Christian man would not be classed among the ignorant. He was baptized many years ago, and has held a teacher's position in mission schools.

In another Christian family it was the custom for the mother to put opium on her finger, and then give it to the baby to suck. In yet another Christian family, where there were five children, the parents admitted that opium had been given to all, through ignorance; but they would do it no more. Here, alas! the seed has been sown in the appetites of the children, and who knows what it may bring forth?

The other cases were similar. In every instance the parents confessed that opium makes a child dull, and that there is danger, in these doses to children, of the foundation of the opium habit being laid for adult years, although the doses are generally stopped not later than when the child reaches the age of four. The Bombay Guardian, of July 2nd, 1892, gives an illustration that is to the point. It says, "It is not Mohammedans and Hindus alone who are the victims of this black plague. Painful instances could be given of its ravages among Indian Christians, many of whom acquire the opium crave in childhood. How this happens was indicated three days ago, when a missionary brought to us a little tin box, the interior sticky with opium, which he had labelled as follows: 'This box with the opium in it was taken from the shelf of a native Christian family of over fifteen years' standing by a misionary visiting. It was for the use of children.'"

This dosing of children with opium is responsible for a great deal in after years. In writing upon this subject in relation to Indian children generally (the principle applies to the children of Christian and non-Christian parents alike), Miss A. M. Andrews,* Ludhaiana, Punjab, said last year: "In our work as Zenana Missionaries we see much of the incautious use of opium. Infants are often brought to the dispensary more or less heavily drugged; and many are the children I have had to teach who could hardly learn, so stupefied were their brains for life by the nightly doses given to them while babies. Such children, too, are very frequently vicious and their moral sense seems so dulled that it is impossible to awaken them to shame or remorse for their faults as you can other children. I remember one specially sad case of a little English child born in India, who, on the loss of her mother, was sent to her grandmother in England. The lady, an earnest Christian, was, when I saw her, in deep distress over the depravity of her grandchild. The child was nice in many ways, but her moral sense appeared hopelessly asleep. Her friends had every reason to fear that as an infant she had been drugged with opium by her ayah, and this fear was confirmed in my mind by the description given me of her. It corresponded so completely with what I have seen in native children who have been thus drugged."

Many young men and women, the children of native Christian parents, are handicapped in the way above mentioned. Vicious propensities have been incited, and the moral sense dulled within them. Pity them. Government opium has caused them to have not one, or two, or three, but a legion of demons to fight against, and that with an enfeebled will.

"Government opium!" perhaps you exclaim, and then ask, "What has Government to do especially with giving opium to children?" In Bombay Presidency (I do not know how it is elsewhere), the Government has a very direct connection with drugging children with opium. It has assumed the legitimacy of the custom, and taken the monopoly of the business instead of discountenancing it. The following is translated from an official notice that has been posted about Bombay. "At present the right of selling children's [opium] pills has been given to the Bombay Opium Contractors, and such pills can be bought of all the Government opium shops in Bombay."

Cases of adult slaves of opium among Indian Christians (including preachers), are cited in "The Truth upon a Momentous Subject," by two Indian missionaries.* I could add others. Several have come to my knowledge within the past few weeks. Out of consideration for the victims and their families, I will throw over their sad histories the cloak of silence. Let British Christians take this to heart, that they cannot allow their Government to continue the calamitous opium traffic without the drug making havoc among the work of missionaries. This is the case in two directions, viz:—(1) in the native church; and (2) in increasing the difficulty of obtaining converts from an opium-permeated population.

British Christians should demand the immediate prohibition, under the British flag in the East, of this agent of hell, and wash their hands also of the wrong that is being done to China by its export to that many-millioned land. The insignificant quantity that may be required for medicine can easily be arranged for while stopping the black plague in India.

Convention at Dufftown, N.B.

This annual gathering took place in the Town Hall, Dufftown, on Wednesday of last week. The first meeting was occupied with a Bible study on "The New Covenant." Rev. James Smith, who was chairman, gave the opening address. He showed that the covenants of Scripture might be divided into conditional and unconditional, according to the measure in which they depended on man's conduct. He then sketched the covenants, the Noachic, the Abrahamic, the Sinaitic, the Davidic, and the New Covenant announced by Jeremiah, and pointed out how they all meet in Christ—how they all involve sacrifice, and how they all have signs or tokens. Finally, by a reference to Heb. xiii. 20, he submitted that we might justly speak of "the blood" as the demand or requirement of the covenant; of "the resurrection" as the guarantee of its provisions, and of "the Spirit" as the seal of it; the first answering to the mediatorship, and the second to the suretyship of Him in whom all covenants and promises are yea and amen.

The next speaker was Mr. Duncan Davidson, of Inchmarlo, who read Galations iii., 13—18, and showed how we are in the Covenanter, and that all our blessings are in Him as the Seed of Abraham, and all based on redemption, according to ver. 13.

Mr. James Butland followed with a clear and practical word on Peter i. 2, pressing home the truth that obedience is the sure pathway to the possession and enjoyment of all promised blessings, obedience being associated with election, with spirit sanctification (or setting apart) and with blood-sprinkling.

Mr. James E. Mathieson, of London, spoke a helpful message and the meeting terminated, all hearts being cheered by God's counsels and filled with his blessing.

The missionary meeting in the afternoon was presided over by Mr. Mathieson and addressed by Dr. Cousland, who spoke of medical mission work in China; by Rev. T. T. Matthews, who spoke from twenty years, personal knowledge of the wonderful work of God in Madagascar, and whose thrilling narrative fairly carried away the audience; and by Dr. J. L. Maxwell, of London, who spoke of the work in Africa in particular; and of the special difficulties in the various fields, and how God meets those difficulties in general. All these addresses were pointed, informing, and powerful, and the meeting separated praising God for the great things God is doing among the nations.

A women's meeting in the evening was addressed by Mrs. Stewart of Logie, and by Mrs. Davidson of Inchmarlo; and the evening meeting at 8 o'clock for Gospel Testimony was addressed by Rev. J. B. Cumming, who was in the chair, on Heb. ix. 16, 17, and x. 28, 29, showing that the death of Christ has met all covenant demands, and that the penalities attached to the Gospel testimony were more awful than those attached to the law of Moses. Mr. Butland then gave a lucid and stirring address on the story of Mephibosheth in 2 Sam. ix.; and Mr. Davidson followed this up with an earnest appeal from the parable of the "great supper" in Luke xiv. 16-24. These Gospel testimonies were touching and telling, and a deep spirit of solemnity pervaded the audience, and before all left the hall, there is reason to believe that some eyes were opened to see Jesus. The audiences all day were larger than usual.

MR. MOODY IN NEWCASTLE.

After a flying visit to Scotland, Mr. Moody opened on Thursday evening his third campaign in Newcastle-on-Tyne. Meetings were held in the Circus, seating between 2,000 and 3,000 persons. The arrangements had been made by a united committee working in connection with the Y.M.C.A., while a fine choir had been formed of 300 voices, and the mission had been looked forward to with hopefulness and prayer.

At the first meeting on Thursday evening the great building was crowded densely, and as one who was present wrote: Mr. Moody has lost none of the old fire. It is eleven years since he last spoke in Newcastle, but time has dealt tenderly with him, and there was before the audience last night the same robust form, the same great individuality, and the same rugged eloquence that have so often charmed large assemblages in this and other lands. The evangelist took no text for his remarks. It was an address, as he avowed it to be, to Christian people, and it dealt fully and generally with the faults of both ministers and people. The quickened church, he maintained, was the greatest power on earth, for the quickened church possessed the Spirit of God, and it was the work of the Holy Ghost to convince men of sin. If they had to preach Christ they would require the assistance of the Holy Ghost, and with that assistance there could be no defeat. When the Holy Ghost convinced men and women of sin He shed abroad the love of God in their hearts, and they were blessed with a new creation, a new force, a new hope, a new joy, and a new love. It was not a natural love merely; it was something higher, broader, deeper: it was the love of God. This was the kind of love they required; and with it the Christian should be full of joy—the joy of the Lord, but to secure this they required prayer, they wanted the true spirit of Christianity to bring power to the people.

Two large meetings were held both on Friday and Saturday, while on Sunday Mr. Moody spoke at no less than six meetings, beginning with the early morning Christian workers' gathering. In the forenoon great efforts had been made to secure the attendance of non-church-goers, and the result was a splendid turn-out of working men. The remarkable gathering of the day was, however, the great open-air service, when from five to six thousand persons listened to the Gospel. The six o'clock service was for men only; while the final meeting in the People's Palace was crowded and enthusiastic, and accompanied by many tokens of solemnity and power.

Short as the mission has been, comparatively, it is believed by those who have shared the work and taken part in the inquiry meetings, that very real work has been done, and that many souls have been aroused from the slumber of sin and compelled to flee for refuge to the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE UNIVERSITY CAMP for public-school boys has been much blessed. It began and ended each day with a short and bright service, conducted by Canon Taylor Smith, and the presence of God was manifested, especially on the Sunday and the two following days. The Tuesday service took the form of a testimony meeting, when many of the boys stood up before their schoolfellows, and told of blessings received, in some cases of definite conversion, and in others of restoration from backsliding. At the close of the meeting and until a late hour in the night, little groups and knots of lads might be seen gathering round their officers, and others speaking of, and enquiring concerning the things of the Kingdom of God.

Letters to the Editor.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

Sir,—In your issue of July 14, 1892, a correspondent, speaking of the account contained in the Book of Esther, says: "The question is not, whether the slaughter be called a massacre or self-defence, but whether we can morally approve, or refer to the Divine Being as the authority, a method of retaliation which resulted in such carnage. From the teaching of the New Testament we know that we cannot. . . We have to correct the moral teaching of the earlier books by reference to the spirit of Christ."

There seems to me to be in this connection a certain confounding of things which greatly differ. The account as given in Esther informs us that Haman the Agagite, or Amalekite, maliciously plotted to destroy the whole Jewish nation, because of one independent man who would not bow to him or do him reverence. This slaughter if it had been accomplished would have cut off the Jewish nation, in which rested the promise and hope of man's redemption, so far as it existed in the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of the Persian empire, reaching from India to Ethiopia; and this calamity was the result of the plotting of one man of a race which for its sins had been long before condemned to extermination.

Through a chain of marked and mysterious providences this wicked purpose was discovered, but too late; and as the laws of the Medes and Persians admitted of no repeal, the only thing to be done was to allow the Jews permission to defend themselves. They were accordingly granted permission to "gather themselves together, and to stand for their life, to destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish, all the power of the people and province that would assault them, both little ones and women, and to take the spoil of them for a prey." (Esther viii. 11). Accordingly this was done. The Jews gathered themselves together and stood for their lives, and slew eight hundred men at Shushan, and seventy-five thousand in the different provinces throughout the land. These men were, according to the decree, men that would assault them, that is, their assailants; persons who sought to murder the unoffending Jews, were met and destroyed. The Jews did not assail others, nor did they meddle with their "spoil," though the King's decree permitted them to do this. Now this, it is said, "we cannot morally approve, or refer to the Divine Being as the authority."

Concerning this there are several things to be said:

First, the Book of Esther does not "refer to the Divine Being as authority" for these proceedings. The sole authority for it was King Ahasuerus, the Persian Emperor, who had been deceived into an unjust act, and who issued this edict for the protection of a wronged and outraged people, who, as his captives and subjects, had a right to protection at his hands. The question whether God approved of it or not is entirely gratuitous, for the name of God does not appear in the whole book; nothing in it is said in the record to be done by the authority of God; nor is there any "moral teaching" concerning the act; but the providence of God most manifestly appears in bringing about in various ways the deliverance of His people whom He had promised to protect, and the destruction of the Amalekite family of Haman, whom, long before, the Lord had declared He would, for their sins, blot out from under heaven.

The New Testament was not the law-book by which the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of Persia were governed. Nor is it yet the law-book by which any nation is governed or ever has been governed. The author of the Book of Esther does not say that the proceedings which are there narrated were right or wrong. He simply tells the story, and speaks of the deliverance of the Jews from the hands of their enemies, passing no judgment on the acts or the motives of the chief actors.

Secondly, are we quite certain that we "cannot morally approve" of an oppressed people, given up to slaughter by an unjust decree, standing for their lives, when they had the warrant of the Government for so doing? We may bear in mind that these men were not Christians; they were Jews, and they were simply Jews outwardly. Some of them were devout, some of them were very likely not. There is no evidence that they were better than or different from the ordinary Jew; and therefore the question arises, whether a man, not a Christian, has a right under any circumstances, to stand for his life or defend himself. The laws of all lands declare that a man has such a right; that self-preservation is the first law of nature, and that a man has a right to protect his life. This may be contrary to the directions given to Christians in the New Testament, but these men were not Christians, and all men have not faith; and there are few people, probably, who will not admit that there are some things which some men have a right to do, which Christians, as individuals, ought not to do. For example, a judge has a legal right to condemn a murderer to death. Has a Christian such a right by virtue of his Christian character? An executioner has a legal right to take human life. Has a Christian such a right according to the New Testament? These rights do not come to men as Christians, they come from "the powers that be," which "are ordained of God." They come from the civil magistrate who "beareth not the sword in vain." They come from that authority which makes the magistrate "a terror to evil doers, and for the praise of them that do well."

Third, there seems to be some misapprehension concerning the principles embodied in the Mosaic Law and the Gospel of Christ. These principles, it is said, cannot be reconciled, and, therefore, it is claimed that, while the New Testament is a revelation from God, these portions of the Old Testament inconsistent with the New must be accounted as coming from a different source.

But do these objectors weigh well the difference between the Law and the Gospel? The Law of Moses was given to a people which had no national organization, no government, no rulers, no laws. Going down to Egypt as a little band of hunger-driven pilgrims and strangers, they were subject during the centuries of their sojourning there to Egyptian law. Departing from Egypt they were without laws. But the government of three millions of people without laws would be an impossibility; anarchy and ruin would have been the result of such an experiment. Hence a law was given: the most wise and humane and salutary that the world has known. But it was a law resting upon the Divine authority, executed by human hands, and enforced by penalties, otherwise it would have been simply advice without authority.

The Gospel of Christ was not designed as a law. It was given, not to a nation which had no laws or organization, but it was sent forth into a world which was already filled with organized governments, ruled by kings, controlled by laws, having abundant legislation, and requiring nothing in these departments. Our Saviour gave no regulations for the direction of national affairs. He gave no direction for the punishment of crimes. We shall search in vain through the teachings of our Saviour to find any direction for the punishment of murder, theft, robbery, or any other crime against the civil law. There was no need of legislation regarding these matters; there had already been legislation enough, and if the Saviour in his teachings had outlined a plan of government, or given magistrates directions for the orderly execution of their duty, his Church would at once have come into collision with the civil power in every land where the Gospel is preached.

Omitting all mention of these things, leaving Cæsar to attend to Cæsar's affairs, He taught not the duties of governors or of rulers, but the duties of men and women as private individuals. Consequently his Gospel has gone into all lands under monarchies, empires, republics, and among the savage tribes; the Gospel of Christ makes men better under all governments, but interferes directly with no form of government which exists.

This does not by any means imply that government is unnecessary, or is unjust, or is wrong; it simply indicates that the Gospel of Christ was not designed for the government of the world, but for the salvation of the individual, and that, instead of laying the foundation for commonwealths and governments, to supplement the governments that already existed under Divine authority, the Gospel works by improving and regenerating the individual, and so indirectly works, to some extent, a cure for the abuses and the wrongs that fill the world.

Here then we have two entirely distinct systems; the Mosaic Law, laying the foundation of civil government, and the Gospel of Christ, making provision for personal salvation.

But we are not to imagine, because the Gospel does not interfere with government, that government is wrong, or that kings and rulers have no right to protect their subjects, or to punish their enemies; nor have we just reason to conclude that the Jews, unjustly assailed, had no right to defend themselves, when the government under which they lived expressly empowered them to do it. They were actuated by no mere thirst for blood or desire for personal vengeance. The life of the nation was at stake, the nation in which the world's hope in the coming of Messiah was enshrined; and under the highest human authority known to them in the Persian empire, these assaulted people protected themselves. To say that men have no right to meet force with force, is to subvert all government, and turn the world over to the dominion of robbers, murderers, and assassins.

The representations of the Divine character as marked by unvarying kindness, tenderness, and compassion, are essentially one-sided. The Scripture teaching represents the Lord not only as a God of Love, and compassion, and tenderness, but "as a man of war;" as the Lord of battles, of armies, of hosts, and "in righteousness doth He judge and make war;" and the redeemed of the Lord lift up their voice, saying "True and righteous are thy judgments, O Lord, for Thou has judged the great harlot that sitteth upon many waters."

The God of the Bible is certainly the God of nature, but the God of nature is the God of the storm, as well as the calm; the God of the thunderbolt, the earthquake, and the tornado; and in all these varying manifestations of his power there is nevertheless an underlying element of goodness and of mercy. The tenderest father may be the man whose indignation will flame most fiercely against those who would disturb his household and destroy his children. Not only does the Great King love righteousness, but He also hates wickedness, and the hatred is as divine as the love.

The principles of the Gospel of Christ are for the government of men who are sent forth as "lambs in the midst of wolves," but for the wolves themselves a very different method of government must be adopted. The sheep can be controlled in the easiest and simplest manner, but the wolves must be dealt with sternly. Hence the Law is as Divine as the Gospel, judgment is as Divine as mercy. In this present state of things "mercy rejoiceth against judgment," and we are commanded to deal with men in mercy as God hath dealt with us. We are bidden if our enemies hunger to feed them; not because it is just, not because they are deserving, but because God, to whom we are under supreme obligation, having forgiven our trespasses, teaches us to forgive others, and to go and illustrate the principles of grace and long-suffering to others "who know not God, and obey not the Gospel." He deals with man in grace to-day; by and by He will deal in justice, as He has dealt in justice in time past. And to judge the methods employed under the Mosaic Law, in the time of captivity, by New Testament standards is simply to abandon all government, and this is something which the Lord has not yet seen fit to do.

INSTRUCTING THE YOUNG.

Dear Sir,—I read with much interest in The Christian, of July 7, Mr. Henry Gibbs' letter on Instructing the Young. Like him, I, too, have been trying for some time past to find some works suitable to young people over fourteen or fifteen years of age, exposing the errors and false teaching of the Romanists, and the Ritualists in the English Church. I was looking out for something similar to an excellent shilling manual, published by Messrs. Bagster and Sons, called "How we got our Bible," which I have finished reading and discussing with some of our children on Sunday afternoons.

My object was that they should go forth armed for the fight against the infidelity and scepticism of the present day, and able to refute the dangerous doctrines which are abroad concerning what I hold to be the living Word of the living God.

I think Mr. Gibbs' plan an excellent one, and well deserving the attention of all Sunday-school teachers, but there appears to be still something wanted in the form of a readable manual for use in families, and for the senior classes in our Sunday-schools, bringing before the elder children clearly and simply the errors and false teaching of Romanists and Ritualists, so as to counteract what we find now openly taught in some of the religious publications of the present day (vide "Observer's" letter in your issue of July 7).

I have brought this subject forward recently on several occasions, and it has been suggested that the good Bishop of Liverpool (Dr. Ryle) should be approached, and invited to bring out in the manly, clear, straightforward way in which his tracts are written, a pamphlet of this kind, taking up briefly each subject such as "Confession," "Mariolatry," "Purgatory," "Priestly Absolution," "Papal Infallibility," etc., in successive chapters, showing how these grievous errors came to be received and taught, and also the outcome of such pernicious teaching, as witnessed in Ireland, on the Continent of Europe, and North America. I feel sure many of your readers will agree with me that a manual of this kind is greatly needed in the present day.

A few days ago I was given a small pamphlet called "A Simple Catechism for Young Protestants," by the late Dean Champneys, published at 11, Adam-street, London, by the Church of England Book Society. This small eight-page catechism is very good for children up to ten or twelve years of age, but something more seems to be required for those who are older. Can we not get such a work for our children, and young people? If any such exist, perhaps some of your readers would mention them for the sake of those who desire that their children should be armed against the false teaching of both Romanist and Ritualist.—Yours very truly, A General Officer.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

BY REV. F. B. MEYER.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 21.—NUMBERS VII.

There is much use for rich men in connection with the work of God. When wealth is given, it should be considered as a precious talent to be devoted to promoting the coming of the kingdom, or the alleviation of the burdens of others. It was thus with the princes of Israel. And instead of their gifts being all thrown together, or any attempt being made to abbreviate the record, there is an elaborate enumeration of them each by each. So God does not allow any gift made to Him to pass without deliberate and careful notice. Even though it is one of thousands, all so similar that the ordinary eye could not detect the difference, to Him each stands out as it were entirely by itself. To God each gift has a unique value, and is associated with the history of the love that made it the means by which it was obtained; and the entire record is emblazoned before Him in letters of living light. Note that the vessels were not only costly, but they were accompanied with appropriate gifts, "full of fine flour," "full of incense," whilst many animals were given for the altar. So if we would be vessels meet for the Master's use, we too should seek that real Divine filling of the Holy Ghost, which may be had for those who seek it by a living faith. Oh, that our ears too were anointed, that we might hear that voice speaking from between the Cherubim, directing us in every perplexity, and communicating the inner thoughts of God!

MONDAY, AUGUST 22.—NUMBERS VIII.

The candlestick, made out of beaten gold, is a type of the oneness of Christ and his Church in the work of witness-bearing, and light-bringing to the world. The Levites were presented to God in the place of the first-born sons of Israel, who were reckoned as peculiarly his, ever since their redemption from the destroying angel by the blood of the Paschal Lamb. Thus Israel laid their hands on them, as if to transfer their responsibility, and Aaron waved them, i.e., offered them in dedicatory prayer to God. From that hour the tribe was separated from common use for holy purposes, the assistance of the priests, and the work of the tabernacle. The Levites may be taken to represent the Church as distinguished from the rest of mankind, or the little band of earnest ministers and missionaries who are set apart for the specific use of the Church; but in any case they were perpetually reminded that sin mingled with their holiest ceremonial and required perpetually the efficacy of cleansing blood. After our best services, we are still unprofitable servants. From twenty to fifty is the prime of a man's life. All our best energies should be devoted to God, but when we have passed the limit, and are no longer able to fulfil our former ministry in all its duties, we may still keep the holy charge. Zacharias was very stricken in years, but he offered incense. We can always intercede so long as the power to pray is left us. Nor will our maintenance cease until our life-work be done.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 23.—NUMBERS IX.

The Passover must be kept in the wilderness, to recall the great deliverance on which the national existence rested, and to anticipate the time when the pilgrim staff would be laid aside for ever. For the same reason we should keep the Lord's Supper; but we should take equal care to come to it cleansed from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit. Men must be kept back, if they are not clean through the blood of God's Lamb. None who are walking in the darkness of hatred or inconsistency, can have real fellowship with God, in whom is no darkness at all, and none such should have the appearance of fellowship. It is to the detriment of their own souls, if they do, and to the lowering of the spiritual tone of the whole body, with whom they attempt to associate. In the welcome given at the Passover feast to strangers, we may learn of the largeness of God's heart, which includes in its blessings, all who will comply with the conditions laid down in his Book. My soul, never forget how thou wast a stranger once to the covenant of promise, but thy God has made thee to sit at the children's feast, and sheltered thee for ever beneath the blood. Let nothing keep thee from the outward acknowledgment of all thou hast received. And where the table is spread, the cloud broods. Oh, that our goings were always determined by its movements, staying till we know the mind of God about moving, and moving only at the rate and in the direction He indicates. It is wonderful how clearly his will is revealed to those who cease from man, and whose eyes are ever toward the Lord.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 24.—NUMBERS X.

The silver trumpet in your life and mine, reader, must be the sweet voice of Jesus. We must gather ourselves to Him at his call, and journey or halt at his bidding. That voice alone may summon us to fight, and bid us rest. Ask for the quickened ear that it may never speak to thee in vain. The soul must visit Sinai, but it must not live there; it must journey forward to Tabor, Calvary, and Olivet. See, the standards are advancing through the world. In solemn pomp the true Israel of God advances from age to age towards her destined heritage. Find thy place in that procession; it must now be in the hindmost ranks, because the former ones have already entered the glory. The Ark of the Covenant goes first. We follow where Jesus leads the way. In that track victory is sure, because the Risen Lord scattered our foes on the day of the Ascension. It is only when we get out of the line of march that we are cut off. Perhaps it was a little touch of unbelief on the part of Moses which made him want the company of Hobab, to act as eyes. It is better to let the Lord choose our inheritance for us. His eyes run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show Himself strong on the behalf of those whose heart is perfect towards Him.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 25.—NUMBERS XI.

The terrors of Sinai will not keep the heart of man from lusting and crying out. The mixed multitude cannot find sustenance in angels' food. Our heart must be perfect with God before we can really enjoy Christ, who is the hidden manna, whether in private prayer or through his Holy Word. And probably there is no better test of our true state before God than this. If our appetite for the Scripture and for fellowship with God is declining, it is because the mixed multitude have tainted our whole-hearted devotion. How evidently Moses was overstrained! His God did not rebuke him, but eased the burden that overtaxed him, because he knows so well how to discriminate between the wilful petulance of our hearts and the reaction from overstrain. He knoweth our frame, and remembereth that we are but dust. But though man breaks down under the weight of responsibility, God does not. He bore Moses and the people in his strong loving arms, and carried them all the days of old. He did more. He supplied them with the food they craved, and touched with a Divine fire the men whom He had chosen to aid his servant. Oh, that that sacred fire might again descend, not only on those who gather for special service, but on those who remain in the camp of the home or the daily business, that so all the Lord's servants might be prophets. No man of God, who was truly such, could be other than glad if that were so.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 26.—NUMBERS XII.

Ah! much-tried man, thou hadst been favoured above others, with revelations given to few, and thou needest, therefore, a special discipline somewhere to keep thee from over-weening pride! When men and women envy us, and say harsh untrue things of us, we answer best by being perfectly quiet. Let God avenge his own. Leave God to vindicate the character of his chosen servants. He will come down to do it. What a privilege is this to speak with God mouth to mouth! It was the unique prerogative of Moses, but it is the privilege of all those who, by faith, exercise their privileges in Jesus, and who are faithful in their special department in the household of faith. It is there that we learn to forgive, to pray for those who despitefully use us and persecute us, to bless them that curse. There is no such school for love to man as the secret place of the tabernacle of the Most High. But sin in any of God's own, though forgiven, will delay the march of the host. Our good and our evil promote or hinder all with whom we journey.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 27.—NUMBERS XIII.

The spies were a concession to the people's request. What need was there to spy out what God had given? It was surely as good as He could make it. Do not forecast the future, you will be sure to see more difficulties in it than sweets; besides, He will bring you to it at the appointed season. Believe Him, the land which He has prepared flows with milk and honey. The ten spies looked at themselves in comparison with the Canaanites, and said that they were as grasshoppers, but if they had looked at the Canaanites in comparison with God, they would have seen them to be lighter than vanity. Many put circumstances between them and God, and are filled with panic; others put God between them and circumstances, and are filled with holy joy. There is no land of rest without its giants. In other words, rest can only come to those who believe that God is prepared to give it them. But directly we begin to speak of our efforts as being the necessary condition for obtaining some priceless boon, we have no strength or hope left in us. Seek the Caleb heart, be wholly devoted to God, follow Him fully, walk with Him amid discouragement and rebuke, so shalt thou be impervious to fear and imbue others with thy spirit, and finally win Hebron, the guerdon of rest.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 28.

THE FIRST CHRISTIAN MARTYR.

Acts vii. 54-60; viii. 1-4.

GOLDEN TEXT: Acts vii. 60.

"The servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted me they will also persecute you." (Jno. xv. 20). Stephen, like the apostles themselves, experienced the truth of this word. In the case of Stephen there is much that recalls the death of Jesus:—The suborning of false witnesses, the charge that was brought against him, and the spirit in which the charge was met (vi. 11-15); his being cast out of the city, his prayer for his enemies, and the word with which he committed his spirit to Jesus (vii. 58-60), all these things were found in Jesus. Stephen followed in the footsteps of the Lord, not merely as an imitator, but as one possessed of his Lord's Spirit. In him Phil. iii. 10 was fulfilled.

The Address of Stephen, spoken in his own defence (vii. 1-53), contained many historical facts which were well known to his hearers, but they had not thought of such an application of them as Stephen made (51-53). Special prominence was given to Joseph and to Moses, because they were types of Christ, not only in the positions they occupied, but in the treatment they received. We need not suppose any interruption on the part of his hearers as explaining Stephen's sudden change of tone at verse 51. Hitherto he has been on his own defence, now he becomes accuser and judge, and charges home upon the Sanhedrim the very sins for which God had formerly punished his people. It is the application of this sermon, as of many a sermon since Stephen's day, that the people do not like.

A careful reading of the story of the martyrdom will show that strength and victory were with Stephen, and weakness and defeat with his enemies. The helpless rage which at first leads to nothing but gnashing of teeth (54); the fanatical fury which afterwards, in defiance of law (Jno. xviii. 31), hurries Stephen to death (57-58); the dying man's prayer for forgiveness (60)—all these things combine to condemn and humiliate the murderers. How their spirit contrasts with that of Stephen! One was the spirit of Satan, the other was the mind of Jesus.

The Vision (55, 56).—The work of the Holy Ghost in Stephen was two-fold—first to make a revelation to Stephen's mind, and next to embolden him to confess it in presence of his adversaries. The revelation was such that it transfixed the gaze of Stephen, and so entranced him that he became insensible to his terrible surroundings. It is remarkable that in describing the vision Stephen speaks of Jesus as the Son of Man. The name was frequently used by Jesus of Himself; but neither the Evangelists nor the Apostles employ it in the Gospels, the Acts, or the Epistles. Possibly Stephen had in his mind the language of Dan. vii. 13, 14, or Matt. xxvi. 64. It is encouraging to remember that in his exaltation Jesus is still true man. Standing—this, too, is remarkable, for Jesus is invariably described by Himself and others as sitting at the right hand of God (Mark xvi. 19; Heb. i. 3). The changed attitude suggests liveliest interest of Jesus in His faithful witness, and readiness to receive him when his persecutors have done their worst.

The Martyrdom (57-60).—The description is so vivid and full because Stephen was the first Christian martyr. The display of God's grace in him will minister courage and consolation to others. For this reason it is well that the circumstances of his death were of so trying a nature. How difficult to be calm and restful in presence of such unrestrained fury as the people displayed (57). They stop their ears against his testimony, and what they do hear they regard as blasphemy. Without waiting for a formal conclusion of the sitting of the Council, they rush upon him and bear him away with violence. The form of death—stoning—was about as distracting and painful as could be. Yet note that Stephen was sustained in quiet and joyous confidence in the midst of it all.

The law required that the blasphemer should be stoned without the camp (Lev. xxiv. 14), and that the witnesses should cast the first stone at the transgressor (Deut. xvii. 7). In both these particulars the letter of the law was observed (58). The garments were laid aside that the witnesses might be unimpeded in the act of hurling the first stones.

The two utterances of the dying man were addressed to Jesus Himself (59, 60). There are not many instances of prayer directed to Jesus, but these are enough to prove that the practice is not to be censured. See Jno. v. 23; Phil. ii. 10. The first word of Stephen was the last of Jesus (Luke xxiii. 46); and the last of Stephen was the first of Jesus (Luke xxiii. 34). Outside Christian history there is no other instance of prayer offered by a murdered man on behalf of his murderers. He fell asleep, for Jesus has made death to be nothing more than sleep for the bodies of His people (see Jno. xi. 11; Acts xiii. 36; 1 Cor. xv. 20). The awakening to a glorious resurrection takes place when the Lord returns (Phil. iii. 20, 21).

Persecution (viii., 1-4).—It was not unnatural that, having succeeded against Stephen, the fanatical multitude should continue their persecution. Saul's part in this persecution bore witness to his whole-heartedness and zeal in whatever he undertook. Are we wrong in supposing that the bearing of the dying Stephen had impressed Saul, and that his excessive zeal was an attempt to suppress the thoughts that would arise? God over-ruled the persecution of the Church for his own glory (1-4). His witnesses were scattered abroad. The bitterest enemies of the Church may often advance its interests by means which they intend for an opposite purpose.

NOTES OF A BIBLE STUDY.

BY CAPTAIN DAWSON.

Willing and Working.

EXODUS XXXV. TO XXXVI. 8.

i. Willing Hearts. v. 5. Freewill in the work.
ii. Wise Hearts. v. 10. Fitted for the work.
iii. Warm Hearts. v. 21. Fired to the work.

i. The Master's service is voluntary. There must be the freewill offering of service.

"Whosoever is of a willing heart."—v. 5.
"Every one whom his spirit made willing."—v. 21.
"As many as were willing-hearted."—v. 22.
"Brought a willing offering . . . whose heart made them willing."—v. 29.
"Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?"—1 Chron. xxix. 5.
"Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power."—Ps. cx. 3.
"The people willingly offered themselves."—Judges v. 2.
"Willingly offered himself to the Lord."—2 Chron. xvii. 16.
"If there be first a willing mind, it is accepted."—2 Cor. viii. 12.

ii. Wise hearts are needed to fit for the work.

"Every wise-hearted among you."—v. 10.
"And all that were wise-hearted."—v. 25.
"Filled with the Spirit of God in wisdom."—v. 31.
"Filled with wisdom of heart to work."—v. 35.
"Every wise-hearted man in whom the Lord put wisdom and understanding to know how to work."—xxxvi. 1.
"And all the wise men that wrought all the work."—v. 4.
"Every wise-hearted man among them that wrought the work."—v. 8.

The world's motto is "Get on," the Bible says "Get wisdom." "Wisdom is the principal thing, therefore get wisdom." "Get wisdom, get understanding."

There is need of prayer, "Give me now wisdom and knowledge." Personal and present, because each one needs both and we need them always.

Knowledge directs what is to be done, and what is not to be done; wisdom directs how to do it.

Knowledge is the material of which wisdom builds.

Knowledge brings the mass, wisdom puts it together.

Knowledge is like the rank and file of the army, wisdom is the general's head.

"The tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright."—Prov. xv. 2.

Grant that we may both perceive and know what things we ought to do, and also may have wisdom and power faithfully to fulfil the same.

"The King's favour is towards a wise servant."—Prov. xiv. 35.

"Who then is a faithful and wise servant . . . made ruler over his household."—Matt. xxiv. 45.

iii. Hearts must be stirred to the work.

Their hands were busy because their hearts were stirred, v. 25. They came with full hands. Willing hearts and helping hands.

"And they came, every one whose heart stirred him up," v. 21. "And all the women whose heart stirred them up," v. 26. "Every one whose heart stirred him up to come unto the work to do it," xxxvi. 2.

The great motive power for service is the constraining love of Christ—the compulsion of love. If we have to do supernatural work we must have supernatural power. It must be divine power, Holy Ghost power.

"Filled with the Spirit of God," v. 31. This was being fired to the work. We cannot all be learned or eloquent, but we can every one of us be filled with the Holy Ghost, "filled into all the fulness of God," Eph. iii. 19 (R.V.).

"The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus," Ezra i. 1.
"With all them whose spirit God had raised," v. 5.
"The Lord stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel," Hag. i. 14.

So the Lord not only fits his servants for work, but also fires them to the work.

Lessons on Service.

There is much spiritual teaching in these chapters about the Tabernacle, and there are many little bits which are mines of wealth and flash like precious stones. There are barely two chapters occupied with the story of the creation of the world and man, but no less than thirteen about the Tabernacle. We must not miss the lessons on details in service; every little detail is important.

It is a striking picture of voluntary devotedness and implicit obedience. May the Holy Spirit apply the lessons to our hearts, and give power so that they may be carried out in our lives.

SERVICE.

"For all his service," v. 21. "For any work of the service," v. 24. "All manner of work for the service of the sanctuary," xxxvi. 1. "Brought for the work of the service of the sanctuary," v. 3. "More than enough for the service of the work," v. 5. "Every morning," xxxvi. 3.

"UNTO THE LORD."

It was all to be done "unto the Lord," vv. 2, 5, 22, 29. Unless our service is "unto the Lord," it is useless.

"AT THE COMMANDMENT OF THE LORD."

This was the standing rule for all the work, five times repeated, vv. 5, 22, 29; xxxvi. 1, 5. In chap. xxxix. this is nine times repeated. Here are lessons on obedience and exactness in all work. See also Ezra vii. 23.

Heart.—This word is used fourteen times; nine times in xxxv.; five times in eight verses in xxxvi.

Willing and wise.—Are used ten times. Note how the words are linked with "heart."

Every one.—Used thirteen times in ten verses.

Work.—Twenty-one times in fifteen verses. There was work for all to do. There were men and women in the work. vv. 22, 25, 26, 29. They had different gifts, and they brought just what they had. vv. 23, 24, 27. They had all manner of gifts for all manner of work. See 1 Chron. xxix. 8. "They gave after their ability unto the treasure of the work," Ezra ii. 69.

"Give as you are able." Luke xi. 41, margin. These and other verses tell us the measure of our gifts.

Others just gave the work of their hands in skill and labour.

"The Lord's offering," vv. 21, 24.

"An offering unto the Lord," vv. 5, 22, 29. These expressions are beautiful.

The people had to be restrained from giving. "The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work," xxxvi. 5—7. This was giving! How different to-day. Would that it were the same. In 2 Cor. viii. there is a beautiful instance of real giving. The people were in great poverty and also in great trial, yet they abounded in joy and liberality. They required no urging to give, but they begged for the opportunity to minister to others. May we abound in the grace of giving.

There was individual filling and fitting for service. "The Lord hath called by name Bezaleel, filled him with the Spirit of God in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship, and to devise . . . and to make".. xxxv. 30, 31.

Men fitted to teach others, "filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work," &c., 34, 35. See also xxxi. 1—6.

It is a great gift to be able to set others to work.

"To know how to work all manner of work," xxxvi. 1. The words of David's prayer form the best sum up. "But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of Thee, and of Thine own have we given Thee." 1 Chron. xxix. 14. He which soweth with blessings to others, shall reap also with blessings to himself. See R.V. 2 Cor. ix. 6.

There is a society called "Willing Hearts and Helping Hands." It is a beautiful title. May God's blessing prosper them, and His power work by them. This is a practical chapter for their guide. I hope the present members are descended from the workers in this chapter, and that it is the old association revived and the names kept up. The present members must follow their ancestors in consecration and service, and let us all pray that there may be the same wonderful results to-day, for the good of many and the glory of God.

ABORIGINES IN QUEENSLAND.

Rev. J. B. Gribble, of the Bellenden-ker Aboriginal Mission, North Queensland, writes of itinerations in various parts of the colony, working among and pleading for the wretched aborigines. He says: I have now returned to stay. My missionary associates are Mr. A. J. Tyson, who has been previously engaged in similar work in the South, and Willie Ambrym, a converted South Sea Islander, who has thus devoted his life to the work of God in these parts.

I was obliged to secure a cutter (a small craft) for the mission, seeing that nearly all our travelling will have to be done by water.

We are now forming our settlement, which, of course, is rather rough. But smoother things will come by-and-bye. The aboriginal population of this mountain region is estimated at 5,000, and amongst these we shall, as soon as our headquarters station is sufficiently in order, begin itinerating. This is necessary as the tribes are so defined, and at the same time so very antagonistic the one to the other. To make matters still worse, nearly all the tribes of the region indulge in the eating of human flesh.

The only remedy for this dreadful condition of things will be the introduction of the Gospel. Thank God, last year that Gospel was for the first time given to those on the coast. But it will now spread through this vast district. For with God's help and protection we shall journey from tribe to tribe, over the mountains and along the deep gorges, and seek to gather in "those other sheep which are not of this fold," so that eventually there may be but one flock and one shepherd.

The blacks are dreadfully degraded. In their camps they go perfectly nude, they are fond of warfare, and if one had not any previous experience, their attitude at times would seem to be very dangerous. But with strong faith in the all-powerful Gospel we go forward in the path which we have pursued during the past fourteen years in other parts of this great land, feeling confident that in due course similar blessed results will be secured as elsewhere.

I am sorry to say that the whites here, as a rule, are greatly prejudiced against the mission; but for what reason we cannot say. They will not help the blacks themselves, and they seek to hinder the missionaries who settle amongst them for the very purpose. But by earnest persevering work, prejudice and opposition will be broken down, and the cause of righteousness and mercy triumph.

To show the great necessity there is for this new mission, only two days after I landed an aboriginal man was shot on board a bêche-de-mer boat which had recently come into port from the Reefs. The deed was that of a white man employed on the boat. I hastened to the victim's side, but found life extinct. He had been shot through the temple, the crown of the skull being terribly fractured. As I gazed on that poor slain black fellow, I once more resolved to do all in my power to help and protect this unfortunate and helpless race. Rev. Oscar Hill and myself followed the remains to the place of burial in the scrub, and at the grave we sadly read the appointed service. We were the only mourners, as the poor black was only a black fellow.

The accused was arrested, and charged with murder. But how will it issue? Strange to say a similar case occurred only a few days ago near Cooktown, which is not far from here.

Open-Air Mission.

On Wednesday, the 10th inst., nearly 200 members of the Open-Air Mission enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Brightwen at The Grove, Great Stanmore, the occasion being the fifteenth Summer Festival of the Mission. Though the morning was cloudy and somewhat threatening, the sun broke forth soon after noon, and for the rest of the day the weather was perfect. Many things contributed to make the holiday memorable. The kindness of the hostess, who addressed the members after dinner and conducted them through her museum in the afternoon; the lovely grounds and surroundings of The Grove; sweet fellowship and the renewal of old friendships; a combined prayer-meeting and song-service after tea; not to speak of physical exercises, such as cricket, lawn-tennis, and boating—all this filled high the cup of enjoyment.

Tender and touching, however, were the references to the two beloved leaders of the Mission—Mr. John Macgregor, the founder and president, and Mr. Gawin Kirkham, the devoted secretary—who passed away so recently. Their absence made a gap which was keenly felt, and it was with softened hearts that the preachers gathered for their evening prayer-meeting to supplicate a blessing on the future of this great work

DR. PENTECOST.

This evangelist has now gone for a short visit to America. On the first Sunday in September he hopes to be at Northfield, and take up for a few days the work of following up the Northfield Convention, at Mr. Moody's request. For a week or two the Doctor will be visiting old friends, and endeavouring to stir up fresh interest in the work of God in India, especially on behalf of the educated English-speaking natives in that wonderful land, amongst whom he had such delightful and hopeful work while in India. He hopes to return to London early in October to resume his work in connection with the Marylebone Presbyterian Church, of which for the present he has taken pastoral care.

It is interesting to know what God has wrought in that congregation during the last four months. From the beginning, the building has been filled with an attentive congregation, increasing rather than otherwise in numbers; a large number having taken sittings and indicated their purpose to remain.

On the last Sunday in June, Dr. Pentecost called an after-meeting at the close of the evening service, to enquire if there were those in the congregation who had believed the word preached and were ready to openly confess Christ. To the surprise and joy of many, about twenty men and women responded at once and confessed Jesus as Saviour and Lord. It has been his custom for years, in connection with his pastoral work in America, to make such an opportunity on Sunday nights. Since then on succeeding Sunday nights it has been continued, and on each occasion from ten to twenty persons, both men and women, have publicly confessed the Lord, and openly given themselves up in consecration as well as confession, until about one hundred have thus come out on the Lord's side; a considerable number have been wanderers and backsliders, who for years have been lost in London, but many of them confessed Christ for the first time. They have been for the most part the ripe fruit waiting to be gathered in. All classes of society have been represented in this number, from people in the higher walks of society down to those in the lowlier walks of life. Several were from the country, who were spending the season in London.

This quiet revival and ingathering has demonstrated two things. First, that it is not always necessary to inaugurate special mission services in order to bring about conversions, if only an opportunity is made in connection with the regular Sunday services for anxious souls openly to confess Christ. Several among this number have owned that they have been waiting for years to confess Jesus Christ and take their place among God's people, but had never had the courage deliberately to seek out a minister and declare their faith to him. One or two very interesting cases from neighbouring churches, having heard that such an opportunity was being made, went deliberately to Marylebone Church for the purpose of declaring their faith, intending to go back, of course, to their own churches and ministers for organic fellowship. Second, that people from the higher walks of society are just as ready to make open confession of faith when opportunity is made for them as those among the common people. Indeed, we hear several of the former class have been the most frank and prompt to respond to the invitation to declare their faith; not shrinking from standing in the congregation in token of their faith, or from coming forward in the face of the congregation to the front pew and there kneeling, in token of their entire surrender to God. This simple Gospel method was perhaps rather new to the congregation, but it has met with the hearty and cordial approval of the official members. The tearful eyes of scores of onlookers have testified how deep and true is the fellowship of the Spirit wherever men and women are moved to acknowledge and confess Jesus as Lord.

Of this number about fifty have already united with this church, the others returning or intending to return to their own churches for fellowship and communion.

The course of pastoral visitation which the Doctor has begun among the four or five hundred families connected with the Church has also been fruitful of good results, both in the awakening of fresh interest in the Church, in spiritual life, and in the winning of hesitating and timid souls to the faith and love of Christ.

THE SANTALS.—Rev. G. W. Panes writes from Deoghur, Bengal:—"There is a district to the west of the Teor Hills in the Santal country, which is as yet not taken up by any Mission. For the last three years I have been labouring in Santalia, and am desirous of occupying the above district, for the purpose of carrying on Evangelical Mission work. At present there is no case for a large expenditure of money, our need being a small bungalow."

Personalia.

Dr. G. S. Walton, of Mildmay Medical Mission, is, we learn, going, in October, to China as a medical missionary.

Rev. John G. Paton, D.D., is expected to visit Toronto in September, and it is hoped he may come to this land before returning home.

Rev. Frederick Baylis, of St. Philip's, Manchester, has been appointed to succeed Rev. R. Lang as one of the secretaries of the C.M.S.

Dr Edwin Fry, of Travancore, has, we understand, been offered the position of superintendent of the Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society, so long held by the late Dr. John Lowe.

Dr Graham Taylor, Professor of Pastoral Theology in the Hartford Theological Seminary, has been called to the new chair of Christian Sociology in the Chicago Theological Seminary.

Rev. F B. Meyer, after a swift, calm, happy voyage, reached New York safely, and spoke at Northfield on Sunday. We hope to give from his pen an account of the Northfield Convention.

Rev. Dr. Whyte, of Edinburgh, occupied the pulpit of Blair Athole Free Church on Sunday week, preaching an able and stimulating discourse to a large congregation on Rev. xxi. 5: "Behold, I make all things new."

Dr. A. T. Pierson, on his return to America, preached, the first Sunday, in Dr. Gordon's church in Boston, and at the close of the evening service gave a very interesting account of his experiences at Mr. Spurgeon's Tabernacle.

Rev. W. Darlow Sarjeant has gone to Switzerland to recruit, his medical advisers hoping that on his return he will be quite fit for preaching and speaking as usual. Mr. Sarjeant asks prayers for the coming conference at Interlaken.

Dr. D. A. Moxey has just married, in the United States, Miss Anna M. Tyson, the elder of the two sisters who are so distinguished in dealing with children. He hopes, after Nov. 1, to be at home at 11, Mansion House-road, Edinburgh.

Dr. Philip Schaff.—The latest tidings as to this eminent theologian are reassuring. He was seized, it will be remembered, on July 15 with a paralytic stroke, but it proves not to have been severe, and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse is stopping at Bettws-y-Coed, North Wales, for the month of August, where he preaches twice each Sunday in the Congregational Church, affording a rare opportunity to both residents and visitors of this beautiful Welsh village of hearing this gifted preacher.

Mr. James Monro, the late Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, is, we learn, making a profound impression in India by his assiduous endeavours in evangelistic work. He is working with his daughter upon independent lines, but his counsel and help are eagerly sought after by the more settled organisations, and he has been invited to join the Calcutta Committee of the Church Missionary Society, and has consented to do so.

Rev. Thomas L. Johnson, of "the African Mission of the Southern States and Territories for sending Coloured Missionaries to Africa," has been very unwell. He asks for an interest in the prayers of our readers. Mr. Johnson has left Liverpool, and his address now is: 7, Gordon-terrace, Wivertonroad, Sydenham, London, S.E. In a recent circular Mr. Johnson says:—"Rev. R. L. Stewart and Miss Virginia Jones, who sailed April 30, arrived safely in Monrovia, West Africa. Mr. Stewart has succeeded in securing the co-operation of native Christians in extending the mission work into the interior, with its objective point the Soudan."

CANNING TOWN.—The Wayside Gospel Mission has for some fifteen months been doing good work in this crowded district under the superintendence of Mr. Stephen Swift, whose labours God has been pleased to bless. The Gospel services indoor and out are largely attended by the humblest classes, while there are some 310 children in the Sunday-school; the Band of Hope, mothers' meeting and other efforts are also going well. So far the workers and their friends have met expenses, but now there is need for some little help, which may be sent to the secretary, 24, Avenons-road, Ford's Park, Canning Town, E.

WAIFS AND STRAYS SOCIETY.—At a meeting of the Executive Committee held on Monday (15), it was reported that the receipts during the last fortnight, including a gift of £1,000 for the proposed new premises for the St. Nicholas Home for Crippled Children from Miss Anderdon, amounted to £2,359, and that the payments were £1,451. The deficit on the General Fund was reduced to £288. It was stated that a lady had offered £100 if nine others would give a like sum, and another had promised £25 if nineteen others would give a similar donation towards the alterations, furnishing, stock, and implements necessary for establishing the Walsham Home.

Evangelistic Notes.

Rev. F. E. Smiley, who has been evangelising successfully in Pennsylvania, has gone to the Chicago Bible Institute, and while there is holding tent meetings in the Chicago Avenue.

Great Missenden.—A very fruitful mission has been conducted here by Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh. The closing services were largely attended, and proved highly encouraging. A similar mission is being held at Windover.

Mr. Henry Varley has been holding good meetings in the Royal Assembly Rooms, Weston-super-Mare. His afternoon Bible-readings have awakened great interest, while the evening Gospel services are proving times of much blessing.

Tayport.—Mr. Menceley concluded on August 7 a three weeks' open-air mission in Tayport, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. In answer to prayer the weather was most suitable, the audiences large every evening, and the attention given to the word preached was very marked.

Bible Carriage Work.—Messrs. Edwards and Newing visited New Milford last week with the Bible Carriage, and the preaching of the Gospel was owned of God. There was a very good attendance every night, while on Sunday afternoon and evening we had very large open air services.—J. G.

Ashburton, Devon.—The new tent to replace the one destroyed by the storm has been erected here by Mr. John Elliott, who is preaching the Gospel to increasing congregations. The mission, which has lasted five weeks, will be closed on Sunday next, and the tent will be removed to Buckfastleigh, in connection with the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Matthew Burnett recently paid a special visit to Cleveland Hall, W., under the auspices of the West London Mission. A large number of persons took the temperance pledge, which was presented to their notice with the force of Gospel teaching. Mr. Burnett hopes to pay another visit to the same hall next month. He is glad to be now resuming his work, to the great joy of many friends throughout the country. His return to Australia has been deferred, owing to Mrs. Burnett's ill-health.

Tent Work.—The Evangelisation Society lately organised a three-weeks' tent mission in Bishopstoke, services being held afternoon and evening on Sunday, and every evening, except Saturday, during the week. We were thankful to see men of different denominations joining together in worship to God under the same canvas, recognising that they had been saved by the same Saviour, and are subjects of the same King (and this can be the only sound basis of true Christian unity), and striving together to lead others to Jesus. The society's evangelist, Mr. Bray, preached the Gospel faithfully and powerfully, and, thanks be to God, we know of several who definitely gave themselves to God, and from the anxious interest evinced by nearly all we trust that the results of the mission will be deep and lasting. The meetings were very well attended, the tent on Sundays being crowded, and many coming some distance from surrounding villages. The value of the work of this society cannot be over-estimated, going as it does into villages where the truth is often obscured by man's theories.—H. C. W.

Jews in New York City.

The work carried on by Mr. Hermann Warszawiak among the Jews of New York continues to give great encouragement. The De Witt Memorial Church has proved too small for the large congregations which assemble, and Mr. Warszawiak now proposes to erect premises with seating accommodation for 3,000 people. This building will be named "Christ's Synagogue," and in addition to providing regular meetings, it will include a Jewish training school for evangelists and missionaries. Mr. Warszawiak writes:—"The need for this new building is great as the De Witt Memorial Church will only hold about 900 people, while our audiences of Israelites at the chief meeting day (every Saturday afternoon) has grown within the last year to about twice that number. We are too often obliged to send away hundreds of people, who in their anxiety come to hear the story about the Crucified Redeemer, and are not a little disappointed to find that they cannot get into the Church on account of having no more room. As a rule the Church is crowded and packed to its utmost capacity every Saturday, a half-hour or an hour before service begins. For a few months I have had to stop inviting more of my brethren to the meetings, knowing that there is not room enough for the old comers, but at the same time prayed earnestly to God to reveal unto me what to do. It is estimated that 100,000 dollars (£20,000) will be needed to provide the building, and several gifts, among which is one of 5,000 dollars (£1,000), have already been sent to me for this purpose." Communications to Mr. Warszawiak should be addressed to 65, Avenue D, New York City.

JOHN G. PATON'S MISSION FUND.

One of the practical results of the publication of the story of Dr. Paton's devoted life is the fund which has been formed to forward his project of planting missionaries and native teachers amongst the cannibals as yet unreached in the New Hebrides. A report of the success and development of the fund (now amounting to over £4,000) is before us, and we feel sure that our readers, who so largely helped in launching this effort, will be interested in reading the venerable missionary's thanks for their gifts. He writes:—

"In tears of joyful praise I have often adored the Lord for leading the hearts of so many of God's dear people in Britain and elsewhere to come so handsomely to my help through the 'John G. Paton Mission Fund.' My heart is filled with praise to God for bringing me such fellowship in His cause. Surely if ever missionary had cause to lie low at the feet of Jesus and adore Him for the help given in extending the Gospel to the heathen, and for the wonderful success He has given to our work amongst them, I am indeed laid under the deepest obligations to do so, and to press on his blessed service labouring for their salvation. With a heart full of gratitude I can only repeat what I have often said—May the dear Lord Jesus bless and reward you all with ever-deepening joy in his service!

HIS WORK.

"For the last three months I have suffered a good deal with internal pain and weakness; yet, inspired by the hope of being spared and used to have a missionary placed on every island of the group, in answer to prayer, Jesus has sustained me, enabling me to hold on in my arduous work and giving me some success in it. I am conducting a meeting every day, and from three to five meetings every Sunday, taking a collection where I can and travelling thousands of miles pleading the cause of the mission; but owing to the general depression of business, the many failures and the lack of employment, results are small as compared with the past. Still I rejoice to know that the work is dearer to Jesus than to us, and I labour on in faith that He will keep all going and help us to extend."

The report goes on to state how the money has been allocated, and tells of the condition and prospects of the work amongst the cannibals. How deeply they realise the blessings of the Gospel may be seen in the fact that on one island lately the infant church on hearing how the mission was supported resolved to have their first collection for heathen missions, and gave £25—probably all the money on the island—besides ninety fowls!

As to Tanna, the island on which he endured three years of fearful persecution, Dr. Paton sends a photo of Howia, a native Christian boy, to give some idea of what the Gospel is doing by way of changing the appearance of the children of these wild tribes. But for the Gospel, this lad, with naked body, wild locks, and heathen ornaments, would have made a piteous picture of a degraded savage, trained in all the evil practices of his race, to become a terror to those who bore him and a curse to mankind. Such is the uplifting power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, beginning its beneficent work in the heart it raises the whole of man into a creature worthy of God.

Mrs. Paton contributes a deeply interesting paper, telling of the trials and triumphs of the work, in which she states that though surrounded with natural scenery of surpassing loveliness the natives are not raised one iota by it, the Gospel alone having the power to change these poor savages. "The transformation between a New Hebridean savage and a New Hebridean Christian," Mrs. Paton deliberately states, "even in the expression of his face, is well worth labouring a lifetime to witness." She adds: "Our converts have never sufficiently advanced in Christian knowledge to be able to fight over the ologies and isms that occasionally occupy the attention of some of our white saints. They don't understand nor quite see the use of them, their faith in our Lord being so direct and simple, and their Christianity taking a very practical form.

"One of our islanders, who has been for many years in Sydney acting as a missionary to his sable brethren there, was met one day lately by a friend of ours. He said—

"'Well, Sam, where have you been to-day?'

"'Oh, I been to hear Mr. Hudson Taylor. I go every time.'

"'And how do you like Mr. Taylor?'

"'Oh, he grand fellow! He talk simple and I follow him; no bothering 'logity' about him!!'"

Mrs. Paton describes the joy of the natives in learning to sing our hymns, and mentions that their favourite hymn was, "In the sweet by-and-bye," which Mr. Paton translated and taught them—after a good deal of difficulty in ensuring proper time with the bass in the chorus.

The trinity of hindrances to the work, altogether outside the natives themselves. Dr. Paton states to be France and Rome, traders and drink, and the Kanaka traffic; and truly the white man is proving himself to be even more degraded than even the cannibals of the South Seas. The Kanaka traffic he amply proves to be as bad, and even worse, than slavery, and we are glad to notice that the subject is again being made public in the columns of the Times and other papers.

The report closes with a reference to a new method of helping Foreign Missions, which has been successfully organised by giving lantern lectures, the proceeds of which are devoted entirely to the evangelisation of the cannibals of the New Hebrides.

The report may be had free on application to the Hon. Sec. of the Fund, Mr. A. K. Langridge, Grove Hill, South Woodford, and we strongly advise friends of Foreign Missions to obtain a refreshing hour by perusing it.

Temperance Notes.

It has now been formally decided that liquor selling will be permitted at the Chicago Exposition.

The White Rose League, recently formed in America, is an organisation of women of the prohibition party.

Manitoba, Canada, has declared by a vote of nearly three to one in favour of legislation looking to the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

In one of the Metropolitan Divisions of the police force the superintendent, chief inspector, and five of the inspectors are total abstainers.

The Police Court Mission work of the Liverpool C.E.T. Society is developing to such an extent that four new missionaries are required for the Liverpool, Warrington, St. Helens, and Southport districts.

Jane Cakebread, aged sixty, was convicted last week in one of the London Police-courts, of being drunk and disorderly—this being the two-hundred-and-forty-ninth time the poor woman has been charged with this offence.

The October number of the B.W.T. Journal, under the title of Wings, will contain an interview with Madame Antoinette Sterling, accompanied by her portrait, and an article from the pen of Miss Richardson, B.A., of Bessbrook.

Mr. Pearce Gould, surgeon to the Middlesex Hospital, declares that total abstinence from alcohol is compatible with the very finest physical existence and the most robust intellectual life, and that indulgence in alcohol is in no way beneficial.

The new Temperance Hall at Fenny Stratford, recently opened by Mrs. Cyril Flower, has already been productive of good. It has afforded a means for all sections of the Christian Church to unite on a common platform for temperance and Gospel work.

At the Biennial Conference of the Juvenile Section of the Independent Order of Rechabites, lately held at Bradford, the membership was reported to be 54,594, an increase of 12,432 since the previous meeting. There are now 1,000 Juvenile Tents in the United Kingdom.

Rev. Charles Garrett, speaking at Bradford, compared the drinking system of this country to a huge morass, in which tens of thousands are submerged. Individual men might be rescued from that morass; but the only efficient way of dealing with the difficulty was by draining the morass.

During the late meetings of the British Medical Association at Nottingham the National Temperance League gave a breakfast to the members. Mr. John E. Ellis, M.P., presided, and several speeches were made on the attitude of the medical profession towards the great subject of Temperance.

The Brewster (that is, licensing) Sessions for England and Wales are held between Aug. 20th and Sept. 14th, in all counties save Middlesex and Surrey. If the renewal of any licence is opposed by an individual or party, notice must be given in writing and served upon the holder of the licence not less than seven days before the annual sessions, and must contain the grounds on which the opposition is founded.

In the Wesleyan Conference at Bradford, Rev. G. Armstrong Bennetts presented the report of the Temperance Committee, showing that there are in connection with Methodism 3,882 Bands of Hope, with a membership of 400,167, an increase of 168 bands and 23,627 members. The number of temperance societies is 808, an increase of sixty-four societies, with 52,058 enrolled members, an increase of 573.

Four Temperance Missionaries—Messrs. Wray, Pike, Cottingham and Kirkham—employed by the Canterbury Diocesan C.E.T.S., are about to commence their annual mission amongst the hop-pickers in Kent. Copies of illustrated temperance and religious papers suitable for distribution, and picture-books and sweets for the children, will be thankfully received by the Rev. John Isabell, 65, Waddon-road, Croydon.

The well-known writer, "Pansy," in reply to the question lately put to her, "How can temperance boys and girls show their love for their country?" gives the following good advice:—"Temperance boys and girls can show their love for their country by being total abstainers always, everywhere, by speaking out bravely against the rum fiend, and by voting against him just as soon as ever they can, since this is the curse that dishonours our nation."

Obituary.

MRS. MIDDLEMORE, OF BIRMINGHAM.

Mrs. William Middlemore, who died last week at the residence of her daughter, in her 85th year, will be a heavy loss to many Christian institutions and the poor generally. Early in life Mrs. Middlemore was connected with the old Cannon-street Baptist Chapel, Birmingham, afterwards that at the Circus, and upon the erection of Wycklif Chapel she removed there. The church at the latter place has received much help from her. As a worker among the poor she was well known. Being most benevolent, yet unostentatious, she was a generous helper of many.

MRS. J. W. LEWIS, OF MORRISTON.

A quiet, loving worker has passed away in Mrs. Lewis, wife of Rev. J. W. Lewis, who suffered from cancer for several months. She was released from her great suffering on Tuesday, the 2nd inst., at the early age of thirty-five years. Born at Milford Haven amongst pious friends of the Puritan type, she became in early life imbued with a Christian spirit which was manifested throughout her active career. Genial and attractive in manner, she laboured in the Gospel side by side with her fond and sorrowing husband. Her last words were addressed to her devoted husband, and were these, "There is light in the valley."

MRS. CAMBIE.

This earnest and devoted servant of the Lord fell asleep in Jesus on Aug. 8 at Gorsley Vicarage, Newent, Gloucestershire. Well known as one who had a heart for railway men wherever found, she will be specially missed and mourned by those with whom she had to do in connection with the Railway Mission work in Leeds and the neighbourhood. About ten years ago she started the Letter and Packet Mission for the 4,000 men employed there, and her heart and pen have never wearied in labouring for them. It is mainly through her that a Scripture reader is now engaged in regular work in visiting the men and their families. There will be real sorrow in many a heart and home in Leeds, as also among her helpers, as the tidings of her loss becomes known. She loved His work, but she loved the Master Himself more dearly, and when His call sounded "she arose quickly," and with great joy, and "came unto Him."

MR. WILLIAM GIBSON, PERTH, TASMANIA.

Tidings have just been received that this beloved and honoured servant of Christ has entered the glory which belongs to the presence of the King. Greatly prospered by God, Mr. Gibson never lost sight of his joy and responsibility as a good steward for his Lord. A man of marked sagacity and perseverance, his name is a household word in the lovely Australasian island. The flocks of Messrs. Gibson and Son are famous throughout the whole of Australia and New Zealand.

Hundreds of weary servants of Christ have been welcomed at the beautiful home of this beloved man of God. His wise and sagacious counsels and generous help have been as a tower of strength to many on the great and wide battlefield of life. The friendship of Mr. and Mrs. Gibson for the honoured C. H. Spurgeon was very deep. Though unknown to him by face, they were amongst the great company of his ready and generous helpers. At least twenty preachers of the Gospel have been received from the Pastor's College and elsewhere through the zeal and liberality of this beloved family. The writer well remembers years since weeks of pleasant fellowship in this modern "house Beautiful" with Mr. Thomas Spurgeon, and since then with other esteemed friends.

About twelve goodly and substantial structures have been reared in Tasmania through the noble generosity of "Gaius mine host," his beloved wife, and estimable son; a goodly band of preachers and evangelists have been maintained for years in heralding "the Gospel of the glory of the blessed God." A few months since, and all too soon, indications were given that the earthly house of this beloved brother's tabernacle was giving way. The tent-pegs and life-cords were seen to be loosening in view of the enduring bands of eternity and the lasting embrace of "the everlasting arms."

Though personally unknown to the great majority of English readers, I may and do ask sympathy and loving fellowship in prayer for the greatly-honoured and surviving partner of this invaluable life.—H. V.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Board of Missions has resolved to organise a Missionary Conference in 1894.

Lord Portman has just sent £100 to the Social Scheme of the Church Army, which is rapidly extending in all parts of England.

Rev. Richard Solomon, who has succeeded Rev. W. H. Langhorne at St. Luke's, South Hackney, is securing a well-filled church, in which Christ is faithfully and earnestly preached.

Rev. Talbot A. L. Greaves, who in October last resigned the vicarage of Clifton, has accepted the incumbency of Holy Trinity Church, Torquay; a church which has long been a centre of thoroughly Evangelical work and witness.

The annual meeting of the St. Asaph Diocesan Conference is to be held at Bala on September 13 and 14. The opening sermons will be preached by the Bishop of Chester in English, and by Rev. Daniel Jones, Vicar of Lampeter, in Welsh.

The C.M.S. Committee "dismissed" last week the Bishop-designate of the Niger, Mrs. Hill, Miss Edith Warner, and Mr. H. Proctor, proceeding to the Niger; Rev. J. A. and Mrs. Alley, returning to West Africa, and Rev. J. R. L. and Mrs. Hall, returning to Palestine.

Rev. G. C. Baskerville, of St. Stephen's, Walthamstow, in a letter to his people, issued after a year's labour, gives a most encouraging account of the work going on in the parish, and makes special mention of the temperance progress. Rev. W. Haslam hopes to hold a mission in November in Walthamstow.

CONGREGATIONAL.

A new chapel has just been opened at Shaw, Berks.

Rev. J. Silin Jones, of Llanidloes, has closed his ministry of sixteen years.

Dr. Reuen Thomas, of Boston, U.S.A., is filling Dr. Parker's pulpit this month.

Special services were held on Sunday week by Rev. W. Crosbie, in Park-hill Church, Nottingham.

Dr. Herber Evans has been preaching at Pembroke Dock for the Meyrick-street congregation. The evening service was held at Albion-square Church, as Meyrick-street proved too small in the morning.

We hear that in Travancore, South India, the London Missionary Society's "Self-denial Week" was observed at the mission stations, and the children were forward in the matter.

Rev. William Ashton, one of the oldest of the missionaries employed by the London Missionary Society in South Africa, has celebrated his jubilee at Barkley, Griqualand West.

A new chapel is being erected at Rotherham for two congregations, hitherto meeting separately at Kimberworth and Wilton Gardens. The site selected is situated midway between these two places, and it is proposed to erect a chapel providing accommodation for 600 persons.

Rev. H. J. Bayley, late of Stony Stratford, has been recognised as pastor at Long Stratton, Mr. R. Haselwood presiding. It was announced that through the liberality of Mr. J. J. Colman, M.P., and others the cost of the new manse would be realised within about £35.

Rev. W. Crosbie has been distributing the "home-reading card," devised by Dr. Paton, in the district around Park-hill Chapel, Nottingham, with great success. Numbers of working-men have expressed a readiness to be enrolled as members, and to read the "international lesson" which is being studied in the school.

Principal Morison presided last week at the opening meeting of the fiftieth session of the Evangelical Union, Theological Hall, Edinburgh. After devotional services, Dr. Fergus Ferguson expressed his regret that, owing to Dr. Morison's failing health, it had been necessary to call in help, and that he, therefore, had been appointed colleague to the Principal in the Chair of New Testament Exegesis.

BAPTIST.

Rev. A. Ferguson, of Ealing Dean, is, we regret to hear, seriously ill.

At Brasted, Kent, all debts are now paid, and there are 107 members in church, with four mission stations, besides chapel, five Sunday-schools, and four Bands of Hope.

Rev. W. B. Haynes, Stafford, has accepted an invitation to the pastorate of Clarendon Chapel, Camberwell, and will commence his ministry on the second Sunday in October.

At the sixteenth anniversary of the Duckpool-road Chapel, Newport, Mon., held last week, a good report was rendered. There are now 389 members.

Rev. H. Platten, the successor of Rev. Charles Vince, after some years' fruitful labour, has resigned the pastorate of the Church of the Redeemer in Birmingham.

The Withington Baptist Church has just welcomed Mr. H. C. Wagnell as resident pastor. Rev. E. A. Carter presided, and Pastor Donald and Mr. Wagnell gave addresses.

Rev. J. Griffiths has done a good work at Llanfairfechan. From a very small beginning the church has developed, and is doing good aggressive work.

Rev. G. R. Jones, of Cefnmawr, Ruabon, remains in a bad state of health. Several months ago he was seized with paralysis, and he has not been able to preach since.

There are several flourishing churches, planted during the last twenty years, in places of health resort in Wales, where English preaching is sustained, and where the cause is carried on sometimes in the face of serious difficulties by faithful men deserving of every sympathy and help.

Mr. Thomas Spurgeon presided on Tuesday week over a missionary meeting in connection with the Metropolitan Tabernacle Sunday-school. A capital address was given by Mr. N. R. Patrick, of the North Africa Mission, while Pastor J. W. Harrald gave an interesting account of Mrs. Spurgeon's Book Fund, and read a special letter to the meeting from Mrs. Spurgeon.

The quarterly report of the Home and Foreign Missionary Department of the Metropolitan Tabernacle Sunday-school shows good results. Not only have the usual contributions been made, but in addition £10 have been forwarded to the North African Mission, £3 to Mr. Lethaby's Mission in Kerak, Moab, and £1 towards a medicine chest for a missionary of the Baptist Missionary Society, about to open a new station in India.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Oxendon Church, Haverstock Hill, proposes calling Rev. D. Hill, of Dungannon.

Very successful special services were held on Sunday week in Trinity Church, Doncaster.

Rev. Dr. McGaw, in preaching at Felixstowe last Sunday, had an audience of between 200 and 250.

The recent anniversary services in St. Andrew's, Douglas, Isle of Man, proved most encouraging.

Rev. J. B. Meharry is in Switzerland; Rev. D. Fotheringham, after a visit to Kirkby Stephen, has gone on to Wales; Dr. H. Sinclair Paterson is at Hunter's Quay.

A little knot of missionaries, with Mr. J. E. Mathieson, have at Aviemore, near Kingussie, been enjoying a happy season of Christian fellowship.

On Tuesday week, Mr. W. H. Gillespie was ordained by the Presbytery of Newry, Ireland, as a missionary to go out to China.

A valuable selection of theological books from the library of the late Rev. Donald Fraser, D.D., have been presented to the library of the Presbyterian College, London.

The Free Presbytery of Linlithgow have ordained Rev. F. W. Anderson to the pastorate of the Union Church of Pera, Constantinople. Revs. J. A. Kerr Bain, J. Anderson, and J. Henderson, late of Pera, addressed the newly-ordained minister and the congregation.

METHODIST.

The chapel at Nailsea, Bristol, has just celebrated its centenary.

The Children's Home Presidential Fund still requires over £1,000 to complete the total. At present it stands at £8,831.

Rev. W. G. Hentage, who has been laid aside through ill-health, and was wrecked some time since in the Straits of Sunda, has returned to England much benefited by his year's rest.

A special Holiness Convention, followed by open-air services, has been held in the Rockland Circuit. Rev. G. Dowson and other leaders spoke on the subject of Scriptural Holiness.

The Jubilee Mission Car has visited with the Gospel Bellingham, Woodburn, and Ridsdale in the Bellingham Circuit, and Hexham, Newbrough, Haydon Bridge, and Bardon Mill. It is now en route for Carlisle.

It has been decided that the jubilee celebration in connection with Trevecca College be held on Sept. 21. Rev. Dr. Charles Edwards, of Bala, will preach, and several prominent ministers will take part in the proceedings. All the old students have been invited to attend the meetings. Only three of the first batch of students are now living.

Mr. Robert Davies, Bodlondeb, who a short time ago contributed the large sum of £30,000 towards the Calvinistic Methodist Foreign Mission and £20,000 to remove the debts on the English chapels in North Wales, has once more come to the rescue of the weak churches of his denomination by contributing largely in aid of the building fund.

Speaking at Chesterfield on Thursday, in aid of the funds of the Wesley Deaconesses' Institute, Rev. S. Wilkes, the hon. sec., said the movement had no tendency towards Rome. What they wanted was to reach people whom the ministers did not reach, and this had proved just the agency they desired; while young ladies, tired of the frivolities of life, found it an opportunity for effecting much real good.

At the Bradford Conference two questions were raised as to the Theological Institution. (1) Does the Theological Institution Committee take the necessary precautions to ascertain the precise teaching given in their collages, and whether such teaching is in agreement with the doctrinal standards of Methodism? (2) And if not, what security can we give to the Methodist people that our students are being trained in those views of Holy Scripture and of Christian doctrine that are recognised as the fundamental doctrines of Methodism, and not in views that in any way contravene our doctrinal standards? The answers to these were declared to be satisfactory.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

The Friends of Colchester are about to spend £1,750 in enlarging their meeting-house and school accommodation. Twenty years ago they had ninety-seven scholars, now they have 600. Their membership has risen 60 per cent., and the work grows, hence their enlargement.

On the 4th inst., Albert J. Crasfield, a minister of Reigate, was set at liberty, and prayerfully encouraged to carry out his concern to visit Norway in the love of the Gospel. The friends there need the sympathy and help he may, we trust, be enabled to give them.

A good many friends shared the great privilege of attending the Oxford summer gathering, that, we doubt not, has done so much good. The work of Friends in the university city quietly but steadily holds its place, and keeps aloft the banner of spiritual truth. Surely it is needed.

The Christian Worker of the 28th ult. gives cheering news of Friends' work in priest-ridden Mexico. At a recent church meeting twenty-four were received into membership, five of them girls from their excellent school. American Friends sustain two vigorous missions with their various branches. A blessed outpouring of the Holy Spirit has strengthened them much.

Madagascar has also recently had a baptism of blessing, and the London Missionary Society and Friends have been greatly favoured together. Other churches, too, have shared the revival. Only a few days ago Wm. and Lucy Johnson and their little daughter and Rosa M. Bowesman returned on furlough after long and arduous service in the trying climate and work of the great island. Doubtless they will tell us of the Lord's doings among the swarthy Malagasy.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Rev. F. H. Baine, of Whiteabbey, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Limerick.

Rev. Samuel McComb, B.D., of Armagh, and late of London, has been installed as minister of the influential and important Presbyterian Church at Elmwood, Belfast.

It has been definitely arranged that Mr. Moody will commence work in Ireland on 23rd inst. He will begin in Belfast on August 28.

There are thirty-three orphans at present under the care of the Mayo Protestant Orphan Society, and sixty-seven under the Derry Protestant Orphan Society.

A branch of the Children's Home is about to be established at Brookborough, county Fermanagh, her native place, by Miss Fowler, of Liverpool, at a cost of about £15,000 for the buildings, and £5,000 towards the endowment.

On Friday week Lord Wolseley, Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in Ireland, laid the foundation stone of a Soldiers' Home, under Methodist auspices, at the Curragh Camp. Eighteen other stones were laid at the same time by non-commissioned officers and men in the various regiments stationed at the Curragh.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Pittsfield, Mass., on July 18, very suddenly, Mrs. Rose Terry Cooke, well-known as a Christian writer.—At Sheffield, Mr. George Hearnshaw, a well-known manufacturer and very earnest Christian worker.—At Kingsland, Mr. R. Teare, the postmaster, a leader amongst local Wesleyans and temperance workers.—At Lynn, Mrs. Curson, for over forty years a Christian worker, and whose house has ever been open for the Lord's service.—At Grindelwald, on 9th inst., Emma Bunting, aged seventy-seven, daughter of the late Dr. Jabez Bunting.—At Little Bealings, Suffolk, on 4th inst., Rev. T. Chambers, D.D., aged eighty-four.—At Weston-super-Mare, on 4th inst., Rev. J. B. Drake.—At Eastbourne, on 7th inst., aged seventy-eight, Rev. G. C. Hoste, late rector of Boyton, Suffolk.—At Hillcliff, Warrington, Rev. S. Kenworthy, after a week's intense suffering from paralysis.—At Pontlotlyn, Rev. T. T. Jones, after nearly thirty years' labour in the ministry.—At Morriston, Mrs. Lewis, devoted wife of Rev. J. W. Lewis.—In Edinburgh, on 7th inst., Rev. James Cowan, of Crawfordjohn, Lanarkshire.—At Sheffield, Mr. Henry Crookes, an earnest Christian worker.—At Wymondham, aged seventy-four, Rev. E. Howchin, a faithful and useful minister.—At Scarborough, on 10th inst., Mr. F. W. Calvert, well-known as a leading official and active Christian worker.—At Belfast, Mr. Robert Nesbitt, a most promising Assembly's student, and an earnest and successful evangelist, aged twenty-four years.—At Dublin, Rev. Richard Goodisson, rector of Clifden and Canon of Tuam, aged sixty-seven years.—At Mullingar, Rev. Francis Swift, D.D., Dean of Clonmacnois and Rector of Mullingar, aged sixty-five years.—At Braco, N.B., on 6th inst., Rev. William Milne, for many years the devoted Free Church minister.

IN AND AROUND HYDE PARK.

We lately had another opportunity of seeing the work carried on in Western London by Mr. Charles Cook, and again we were pleasingly struck with its sterling worth and comprehensive character. On a Sunday afternoon we attended at Regent's Park Chapel, where Mr. Cook conducted the Young Men's Bible-class which has been gathered there, and which cannot fail to be fruitful in good results. The regular work at Hyde Park Hall shows no flagging, and in the evening of each Sabbath during the season the great open-air congregation on the greensward of Hyde Park is, in its way, one of the sights of London.

As one stands there on the outskirts of the crowd, listening to the earnest preaching of the Word, it becomes pleasingly manifest that, after all, the Gospel is really a successful counter-attraction to the revolutionists, anarchists, infidels, and others who make this their camping-ground. Near to the Marble Arch itself is a distracting Babel to lovers of Sabbath quiet; but the din dies away before it reaches the spot which Mr. Cook and his excellently trained Christian choir regard as their own ground. The average number of hearers, ranging from the aristocracy and members of Parliament to the poorest of the poor, who there listen to the glad tidings in a single season, is estimated at 225,000.

On the first Sunday evening of September Dr. Talmage is to preach in the Park at Mr. Cook's station, and he is hoping to meet such a congregation as Whitefield would have been glad to have set eyes upon. Many have been the converts who have gone from the Park to the hall, and some of them have had that singular experience which shows that the truth of God is still as powerful as ever it was to the pulling down of the strongholds of the devil.

The indoor meetings are held on four nights of the week all the year round; and that on Sunday evening, which comes after the service in the Park, has shown many converts. When the season does not admit of open-air services, the great congregation of over 2,000 persons, which is attracted to the Metropolitan Music Hall, Edgware-road, is the greatest evangelistic service to be met with in Western London. It is confessedly a difficult matter to attract so large a concourse of persons, who belong to the classes there represented, but winter after winter they are gathered without any signs of falling off, and converts are continually being gathered in from the world. In his power over young people, Mr. Cook seems to be especially favoured. What lives he has been instrumental in saving from being wrecked! How bitterly have some young persons repented not having acted upon his advice, when, as a consequence, ruin, partial or complete, has followed!

Like some others, Mr. Cook feels the loss of old and tried friends, such as the late Mr. Samuel Morley or Mr. R. C. L. Bevan. He is now in special need of nearly £200, to pay off pressing liabilities. During the summer, although the expenses are heavy, the incomings are small, or at times almost nil. The two halls and the Park entail an outlay of about £750 per annum. This is a large responsibility. Mr. Cook's address is Hyde Park Hall, Stourcliffe-street, Edgware-road, W.

G. H. P.

THE FOLLOWING SAD INCIDENTS by Archdeacon Farrar are given in the Scottish League Journal:—"At the entrance of one of our college chapels a nameless grave; that grave covers the mortal remains of one of its most promising fellows, ruined through drink. I received not very long ago a letter from an old schoolfellow, a clergyman, who, after long and arduous labour, was in want of clothes, and almost of food. I inquired the cause; it was drink. A few weeks ago a wretched clergyman came to me in deplorable misery, who had dragged down his family with him into ruin. What had ruined him? Drink. And why is it that these tragedies are daily happening? It is through the fatal fascination, the seductive sorcery of drink, against which Scripture so often warns."

DONATIONS
RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, AUGUST 15, 1892.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders not by stamps.

 Will donors oblige by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the institutions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders should be made payable to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C., and crossed "City Bank;" this will effectually prevent loss.

AMONGST THE SANTHALS.

The Lord is working in our midst by turning many from demon-worship to serve the living and true God. The last few months forty were baptized on profession of faith in Christ. We trust they will stand true amidst the severe persecution which generally follows their decision for Christ. Brethren, pray for them as well as us.

Owing to the recent drought in India, and the oppression of the Santhals by money-lenders, the people here are literally starving. I have been expecting Government to start relief work, but as yet nothing has been done. Hundreds, I may say thousands, have no food, and are living on leaves, herbs, &c. Many have land, but cannot get seed to sow, and the money-lenders, seeing danger ahead, refuse to advance anything. Those who have sown their seed are sadly in need of food. Yesterday I was told, in a village near by, several people have fasted ten days, and in consequence two or three had died.

I visited a village last week, and was surprised to see the wretchedness prevailing. In the first house I noticed a man and his child sitting near the door looking thin and miserable. I spoke to him about Christ. He listened, and reasoned very wisely, but, as he said, "Here we are, sir, with no food, living on leaves and roots from the jungle; cannot you do something for our bodies?" In the second house was a man with three children; their bones were so prominent one could count them. These, too, were starving, and begged for help. In the third house were a man, wife, and three children living under a little shanty made of straw, their house having blown down. The man and woman were pitiable objects, and I noticed two of the children eagerly eating some dirty rind of a fruit they had picked up some distance off. Two starving men came here a few days back, so thin they could hardly walk. One man came begging. After getting some rice, he began devouring it raw, went a little way off and died under a tree, starved. Many other cases came under my notice, but I trust this is sufficient to show the needs of these starving people. The crops will not be in for a few months, so what are the people to do in the meantime? We help all we can, but our barn being now empty, I would be heartily thankful if the readers could help by sending something, though little, to dispense to these people.

GOD KNOWS

Oh! tired heart—
God knows!
Not you nor I,
Who reach our hands for gifts
That wise love must deny—
We blunder, where we fain would do our best—
Until a-weary, then we cry, "Do Thou the rest";
And in his hands the tangled skein we place
Of our poor blind weaving with a shamed face—
All trust of ours He sacredly will keep;
So tired heart—
God knows!
Go thou to work or sleep.
What though to-day
Thou canst not trace at all the hidden reason
For his strange dealings through the trial season,
Trust and obey!
Though God's cloud, mystery, enfold thee here,
In after life and light all shall be plain and clear.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN.
GREAT ORMOND STREET, LONDON, W.C.

CONVALESCENT BRANCH:
CROMWELL HOUSE,
HIGHGATE.

Patron: THE QUEEN.
President: THE DUKE OF FIFE, K.T.

During 1891, 1,596 In-Patients and 20,112 new Out-Patients were treated.

A Deficit of £1,100 is feared as the result of this financial year, which ends 31st December.

During this holiday season no contributions reach the Hospital, yet the wards are full as ever of sick children.

New Subscriptions and Donations are really immediately required to enable the wards to be kept full. The closing of even one ward will be disastrous for the sick children of this poor and populous neighbourhood.

CHILDREN'S HOLIDAY HOME.

President—George Williams, Esq.

THIS Home at Foots Cray, Kent, has been opened for the benefit of poor sickly children connected with the several Mission Halls occupied by the Society, all in localities where the poorest classes reside, and who are totally unable to pay for a holiday, and yet most urgently in need of it. The Home provides accommodation for 18 children at a time. The cost of each child is 6s. per week. Last year over 300 poor little things received the benefit, who found it to be a real boon.

To continue this for the present year an earnest appeal is hereby made to sustain this truly charitable work. Help in any form will be gratefully received by the Secretary, as under; or by the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., at the Bank, 54, Lombard-street, London, E.C.; or by Messrs. Morgan & Scott, Office of The Christian.

THE

WILL POSITIVELY CURE

THE MOST SEVERE FORMS OF THE FOLLOWING AILMENTS:—

COLDS.

Madame ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-Nos Castle:—"Madame Patti has found the Carbolic Smoke Ball very beneficial indeed, and the only thing that would enable her to rest well at night, when having a severe cold."

CATARRH.

Rev HENRY S LUNN, M.D., writes from 5, Endsleigh-gardens, London, N.W., November 16th, 1891:—"I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

ASTHMA.

Miss HUDDLESTON writes from Walmersley House, near Bury, Lancashire, 15th October, 1891:—"Miss Huddleston is finding the Carbolic Smoke Ball a great blessing for Asthma. She is very glad to say that it is doing her a great deal of good when hope had almost gone."

BRONCHITIS.

Dr H. G DARLING, M.D., Linden Cottage, Shepherd's Well, Kent, writes, 18th April, 1892:—"I had used the Carbolic Smoke Ball only a few times when it gave me immediate relief—although I am 83 years of age and have suffered more than one-third of that time from Bronchitis complicated with Asthma."

DEAFNESS.

Mrs. KINGSLEY writes from Woking Village, Surrey, May 10th, 1892:—"I have very great hopes of being able to hear quite well by the end of the month. My whole throat was in a dreadful state, and when we consider I have been deaf since 1884, I think the improvement in the two months since I commenced using the Carbolic Smoke Ball is wonderful."

One CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL will last a family several months, making it the cheapest remedy in the world at the price—10/- post free.

The CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL can be refilled, when empty, at a cost of 5/- post free. Address:—

Funds pressingly needed.—Bankers: L. and County, Islington.—A. Stteleman Herring (for Local Committee), Vicar St. Paul's, Clerkenwell, 45, Colebrooke-row, N. c8-6

Appeals.

A Sale will be held early in September in aid of the Children's Branch of the Additional Curates' Society at Rumney House, Cardiff. Friends willing to work should communicate with Miss Herring, 22, York-street, Portman-square, W.

Foreign Stamps, etc.—Mrs. M. T. Grosvenor Wrigley, 1, Norland Square, W., asks for foreign stamps, cards, wrappers, etc.; also for tailors' folds for scrap-book work. For many years she has prepared scrap-books and framed cards for distribution in hospitals, infirmaries, and the homes of the poor.

Christian Literature for the Poor.—I am working in a parish where Christian literature is most useful for the poor, the sick, the troubled, and the indifferent. Some of your readers may be inclined to help me in forming a small lending library.—J. Neuzerling, Lay Reader, 49, Morrison's-road, Commercial-road, E.

Missions to Seamen, Hartlepool.—We have two special needs—a permanent home for the sailors, and a Samaritan fund from which urgent cases of need could be met. We now have a room in which services are held on Sundays and Wednesdays, and which is used at all other times as a reading and smoking room, several games being provided. Cast-off clothing of all kinds for the families of sailors in distress, would be most acceptable.—M. Kershaw, The Seamen's Institute, High-street, Hartlepool.

The Daily Prayer Union sustained a serious loss by the death of a munificent friend who used to contribute £300 a year. A gentleman in Essex, knowing that such a loss could be ill sustained, has kindly given a donation of £50, in the hope that others will make up the £300 this year. The Society consists of a threefold cord of Christian effort: 1. A Daily Prayer Union. 2. A Pentecostal Tract Society. 3. Special Mission Work. Help may be sent to Henry Law Harkness, St. Swithin's Rectory, Worcester.

Grove Mission, Great Guilford-street, Southwark.—Mr. J. W. Weston, hon. superintendent of this work, writes from 31, Park-street, Southwark:—"For fifty-three years our band of voluntary workers has laboured in this part of South London, and has reason to know that its work has not been in vain. For fifty years our headquarters were a disused stable and hay loft, but in 1888 we opened our new hall, an undertaking in which many friends gave us aid. We are now making a special effort to raise £400, in order to remove the hindrance of debt."

Requests for Prayer.—For special services at the Y.M.C.A., Old Kent-road; for gospel meetings at Walthamstow; for a minister of the Gospel, that the Lord would guide him into a sphere of service, and make him a blessing to souls; for a disciple, that he may "stand complete in all the will of God"; that blessing may attend the ministry of Pastor D. M. Cameron at Clynder Church on the Clyde.—For a meeting of theatrical employees on Friday, 19th inst.

FORTIETH SERIES OF CASES

CASE FOR THE WEEK.

PHTHISIS.—CASE OF MR. ASHE.

N.B.—This is one of those cases not published before, to which I occasionally make reference as an example of "PERMANENCE OF CURE."

This patient, then living at Reading, applied to me six years ago.

There was disease in the family. The first symptoms in his case were hæmorrhage from the lungs, followed by painful and severe dyspnœa, very bad cough, and difficult expectoration, pains in the side, loss of appetite, etc. Flesh and strength had been wasting gradually for twelve months. Had attended Reading Hospital with "no benefit." Case pronounced "Phthisis" by the physicians there.

A regular course of my treatment was directed, and to continue cod liver oil and the hypophosphites prescribed at Reading.

In the course of a few months he became well.

A sister of the patient (also a patient of mine in part, but suffering from a complication of diseases which requires surgical treatment also), writing me a few months ago, speaks of her brother thus:—"He is stronger and better than ever, and has not the least sign or symptom of his old complaint."

I had forgotten the case till then. I wrote to Mr. Ashe himself recently to inquire, and he reports himself in good health. "If ever I have a little cough come on (he says) I resort at once to your medicine. I have been recommending it to others, who have benefited. I have left Reading, and am now with Messrs. Latter, Parsons, and Co., timber merchants, Eastbourne."

NOTE. — CONSULTATIONS FREE at Coombe Lodge, Peckham, on TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings only. No charge except the usual charge for three or six weeks' supply of medicine. All Patients should read the Book first.

"They were EXACTLY what suited us. I think them far superior to almost any I have seen; short, interesting, and to the point. Some have been circulated in Boulogne; some by our clergyman's lady, who sees so many English here; and others by our friends who meet on Tuesdays to pray for Tract-work in all its branches. Some have also been put into French, and published in various periodicals as articles. Brittany has had several in its Protestant paper, and Dr. Monod's 'Archives' have inserted one or two, abridged."—Extract from a Letter from France.

"Dorothea Trüdel became deeply penetrated with the striking passage in the Epistle of James—'The prayer of faith shall save the sick.' Led by circumstances to minister to the afflicted, she carried into practical action the settled conviction of her heart; and in hundreds of cases soul and body were alike healed without other visible means."
The Record.

BOOKS USEFUL TO ALL BIBLE STUDENTS.

"A remarkable work, packed with information, and invaluable as a simple and easy handbook. Indeed, the ingenuity that has succeeded in squeezing so much into the space deserves all praise. Scores of items combine to astonish the reader. The editing has been carefully done, and a very trustworthy and wonderfully complete and sufficient book is the result."—Scottish Leader, October 15, 1891.

The Bible Remembrancer:

A Valuable Handbook to the Old and New Testaments. Sixty classified Headings with copious scripture references. Tinted Covers, 2s.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.
Presentation Edition: Bevelled Boards, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

The whole of the work has been carefully revised, and a large portion entirely re-written; while several new features have been introduced, rendering this Edition one of the most comprehensive companions to the Bible extant. To the Sabbath-school Teacher or Local Preacher it is simply invaluable.

Among the prominent features may be mentioned

A Complete Modern Atlas of Bible Lands, Consisting of Fourteen Choice Coloured Maps, containing the results of the most recent research.

An Analysis and Summary of the entire Scriptures—by which any Biblical incident can immediately be traced.

The Words of Christ; the Miracles, and Prayers and Thanksgivings of Christ: with full references to each of the four Evangelists.

A Chart showing the Order of Encampment and March of the Israelites through the Wilderness. (Specially prepared for this Edition.)

WHAT REV. C. H. SPURGEON WRITES
Regarding Morgan and Scott's PORTABLE "CRUDEN."

"Messrs. Morgan & Scott are resolved not to be beaten, and so they have produced a portable edition of 'Cruden's Concordance' for 3s. 6d. Nobody should now be without a Concordance: which is to the Bible-reader what a foot-rule is to a carpenter, or a chain to a land-surveyor. For the sake of all the poor parsons in the three kingdoms, we feel grateful to Messrs. Morgan and Scott. How they can issue such a book at such a price we cannot tell."

MORGAN AND SCOTT'S COMPLETE EDITIONS.

Cruden's Concordance
TO THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

ALL the Editions described below contain 757 pages, 2270 closely-printed columns, and about 250,000 references. A special feature is The List of Proper Names, newly translated by Rev. Alfred Jones, M.A. This portion of the work is strictly copyright, and can only appear in Morgan & Scott's Editions.

INTRODUCTION.

CHARLES HADDON SPURGEON was in no respect ordinary. He was great as a man; great as a theologian; great as a preacher; great in private with God; and great in public with his fellow-men. He was well versed in the three things which, according to Luther, make a minister: temptation, meditation, and prayer. The school of suffering was one in which he was deeply taught.

While a powerful loadstone to draw men, the attractive force in him was not selective, as in the case of the magnet; but miscellaneous and diffused, as in the case of the earth. John Ruskin could appeciate, while the common people heard him gladly. Large-souled though he was, he had a mind that was a meet associate; and, best of all, he knew the truth, and to the last upheld the banner of the Reformation.

The following chapters aim to supply an original Sketch and Portraiture of this distinguished servant of the Lord Jesus. The work is based, for the most part, on information obtained at first hand. For years the writer has had exceptional opportunities of converse with the great preacher; seen him under varying conditions; and heard him descant, at least scores of times, on matters of personal reminiscence, as well as upon numerous points of theological interest and inquiry. No apology, it is hoped, is needed for drawing upon sources that are personal and private. The seal of confidence is in no case broken. The Christian has nothing to conceal; and, in this case at least, what has been spoken in the ear may well be proclaimed from the housetop.

That this tribute of affectionate regard for the memory of Charles Haddon Spurgeon may bring glory to God, and be a means of grace to the reader, is the earnest prayer of

TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN."

Dear Friends,—I feel constrained to make an earnest appeal to you for special aid, under circumstances of peculiar and pressing need, for carrying on our work among the little ones.

We have had serious illness in Stepney-causeway and scarlet fever at Feltham, involving much anxiety and expense.

Our last year's accounts closed with a large balance on the wrong side, and during the year many of the dear friends on whom I have relied for help in times of need have passed from works to rewards.

Under these circumstances, I do most earnestly appeal to you for prompt and generous aid to prevent the sad necessity of stopping any branch of the work.

Trusting my great need will be accepted as my excuse for this plea,—I am, sincerely yours,

MARIE HILTON.
